Naval Air Force Outlay Boosted $154,776,000 In Committee

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Senate late yesterday approved unanimously President Roosevelt's program for expanding the Nation's land and air defenses.

By a roll call of 74 to 0, the $1,823,254,624 Army appropriation bill was passed and sent back to the House for action on the additions. The measure carries the regular maintenance funds for the military service, plus the greater part of the $1,182,000,000 emergency expansion asked by the President six days ago.

At noon today the Senate will take up a $1,458,756,728 naval appropriation bill, which provides the remainder of the special defense outlay.

Navy Funds Boosted

The naval bill was approved by the Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday after that body had gone beyond the President's recommendations and added $100,000,000 in contractual authority for planes and pilot training and $54,776,000 in cash for additional sailors and marines and battleship modernization.

These developments stood out in a day of unprecedented action on Capitol Hill. Other moves were:

The Administration's billion dollar program to add 7,000 planes, 13,000 pilots and a chain of naval air bases to the naval air force was unanimously approved by the House Naval Affairs Committee and sent to the floor.

The Senate Military Affairs Committee indorsed legislation to give President Roosevelt power to ban the export of military supplies and tools and remove restrictions on the authorized number of Army planes and pilots.

Plane Transfer Refused

A resolution permitting Army and Navy planes now in service to be turned over to the Allies in exchange for craft they now have on order in the United States was tabled by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee by a 12-to-1 vote.

President Roosevelt asked Congress to make available an additional $1,000,000 in Agriculture Department funds to investigate the prospects of developing adequate rubber production in the Western Hemisphere. Most rubber now comes from the Dutch East Indies.

The President called in Secretary Morgenthau, Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff; Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations, and William H. McReynolds, one of the White House administrative assistants for a long conference on aircraft procurement problems.

Virtually the only fire directed at the bill during the two days of debate was aimed at the $132,000,000 "blank check" appropriation asked by President Roosevelt. Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, sought approval of an amendment which would have required expenditures from this special fund to be approved by a special joint Congressional committee, but the proposal was shouted down by the Senate.

The additional cash added to the naval supply bill was divided into $26,538,000 for increasing naval en-

Roosevelt 'Grateful' for Suggestion

Landon Asks 3d-Term Denial If President Expects Coalition

Demand Issued After White House Talk; Chief Executive 'Too Busy to Make Political Statements' Is Crisp Reply to Kansan

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Alf M. Landon yesterday called on President Roosevelt to eliminate himself forthwith as a third-term candidate.

He promptly received the President's "very grateful" thanks—but no commitments.

The former Kansas Governor and titular head of the Republican Party said the President should step out of the 1940 race if he were "equally interested in unselfish service" and expected Republican support for a coalition in the present emergency.

His statement to reporters followed a two-hour luncheon conference with Mr. Roosevelt. Landon said the subject was not broached during his White House talk.

President Roosevelt at once responded through his secretary, Stephen Early, "that he has no time, just now, to give to the preparation of political statements."

"He is too busily engaged with problems of far greater importance," said Early.

"He is, however, very grateful to the ex-Governor of Kansas, who was his luncheon guest today, for the suggestions contained in the statement the Governor has written for the press."

Like Landon, Early said none of the subjects mentioned in the Kansan's press statement were discussed with the President "except only the seriousness of the military situation in Europe."

"The President was very glad to receive Mr. Landon," the White House secretary crisply concluded.

Landon told reporters that the President had not asked him at

Senate Group Kills Proposal To Sell Army, Navy Warplanes

Some of the American-made bombers which the Allies are buying have been flown across the Atlantic, Arthur B. Purvis, head of the Anglo-French purchasing mission, revealed yesterday.

Others will be delivered in that manner by Allied pilots as they are turned over by the manufacturers.

The point of departure was assumed to be Botwood, Newfoundland, which is British territory.

The U. S. Neutrality Act prohibits either Allied or American pilots from flying foreign-purchased ships from this country. The law can be met, however, by taking the planes to the Canadian border and pushing them across to the Canadian side.

The shortest distance from this continent to the British Isles is from Botwood to Foynes, Ireland, 1,195 miles. This was the route taken by Pan American Airways planes before application of the neutrality law terminated the service.

Heaviest Bombers Only

Only the heaviest bombers are being delivered under their own power, Purvis said, adding that this method was chosen to augment speedily shipments by ocean vessels.

Purvis made the announcement after a conference with Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., President Roosevelt's airplane purchase co-ordinator, regarding Allied requests for assurances of prior delivery after this country's own plane purchasing program gets under way.

Earlier in the day, by a vote of 12 to 1, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee rejected a proposal that the United States sell Army and Navy planes to the Allies.

Pepper Is Only Aye

Only Senator Pepper (Democrat), Florida, the author, voted for the proposal.

Chairman Pittman (Democrat) of Nevada, said it was the consensus of the committee members that the legislation would violate international law, and would constitute "intervention by the United States" in the European War.

Pepper, Pittman said, agreed with this view but argued that "Hitler had violated all the rules of international law and that the success of the Allies was of vital importance to us."

Germans Held in Flanders As Counterattack Develops; British Draft All Labor And Property for Total War

The War Today

GERMANY'S LIGHTNING DRIVE across Belgium and northern France has been stopped for the first time since it started 13 days ago. Even Gen. von Reichenau, Nazi field commander, admitted the possibility that "our present movement" may come to a "temporary halt."

THE CHECK APPARENTLY was general all along the line from west of Antwerp, southward through the outskirts of Ghent, up the Scheldt Valley to just north of Valenciennes, then southwest to the Somme between Amiens and the sea, then east and slightly south across France to the Rhine.

THE GERMAN CLAIMS were less extensive than heretofore. Only advances mentioned were from the Somme northward toward Boulogne; and southward from Laon toward Paris to the Soissons region. Otherwise the German communique was devoted largely to reports of the repulse of Allied counterattacks near Laon, Arras, and around Valenciennes.

THE ALLIES MINIMIZED Nazi claims that a million Allied troops were trapped, and reported the recapture of Abbeville, on the Somme estuary, and Arras, until May 10 B. E. F. headquarters. The French claimed their troops were holding at all points. Heaviest fighting was in the Arras-Cambrai area.

THE ALLIED COUNTEROFFENSIVE, expected for several days, seemed near, although yesterday's attacks apparently were not of major force. The reticence of the French communique, however, suggested that the big push might come soon, in that it gave no inkling of the location of troops or present fighting.

IN SOUTHEASTERN EUROPE, Rumania decreed virtual general mobilization, apparently in the face of a Russian threat; Yugoslavia and Greece were reported to have hidden their warplanes; and Italy celebrated the anniversary of her military alliance with Germany by continuing dire threats against the Allies.

U. S. Sending Liner to Ireland For Refugees

Belligerents Called On Not to Molest Vessel in Any Way

The United States last night ordered the liner President Roosevelt to Galway, Ireland, to take off American refugees, and at the same time called on the "air, naval and military forces" of the belligerents not to molest or interrupt the vessel in any way.

Secretary of State Hull telegraphed this country's envoys at London, Paris, Berlin, Brussels, The Hague and Oslo to inform the countries to which they are accredited of the undertaking.

The ambassadors and ministers were instructed to say that the vessel would carry no cargoes either eastward or westward, and that on the westward voyage would carry only American citizens and their families.

He told the envoys to inform the governments involved that "the Government of the United States expects this vessel to make its eastward and its westward voyages without interruption or molestation by the air, naval or military forces of any belligerent."

Only a few hours earlier it was revealed that Americans in 11 Balkan and Near East countries have been advised to leave for home as soon as possible, because of the spreading war fever in that area.

The official warning was sent out on May 16 to all American diplomatic and consular officers in the threatened areas which lie around the Mediterranean.

At the same time, the department instructed the legation in Ireland to increase pressure on the 1,000 Americans there to return to this country.

Byrnes Replies To Lindbergh's Defense Attack

No Qualifications To Discuss Policies, Senator Contends

Hitting back at Col. Charles A. Lindbergh for criticizing the foreign policy of the Administration, Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, last night asserted that the aviator has no qualifications to discuss the subject.

"Mr. Lindbergh gave another discourse on American foreign policy, about which he is no more qualified to speak than 'Wrong Way' Corrigan or any other aviator who may fly the Atlantic Ocean," said the Senator.

His sharp address, believed an unofficial Administration reply to Lindbergh, was broadcast over the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Byrnes insisted that our current national defense efforts, far from sprouting out of "hysterical chatter of calamity and invasion," as Lindbergh charged in his talk, are the product of a "definite policy of defense already formulated." President Roosevelt has stated this policy "time and again," the Senator added.

The appropriations asked by President Roosevelt for national defense are "extremely conservative" in light of the recommendations of his military experts in light of the shocking and ominous developments abroad which have threatened with destruction the most inoffensive neutral nations," said Byrnes.

Quoting Lindbergh's statement that we "won this country from Europe with a handful of revolutionary soldiers, we certainly can hold it now with a population of 130,000,000

Donor of Poison Liquor Is Slain As 5th Columnist

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 22 (INS).—Clyde Bittenbender, 50, told police tonight he had shot and killed Orman Hepenstall, 24, at the latter's cottage at Camp Lake because he suspected Hepenstall was a 'fifth column member."

Bittenbender, a foundry employe, said he believed Hepenstall had given him poison liquor to help halt production at the foundry.

He said he called from his cottage, near Hepenstall's, for a drink. The whiskey his neighbor gave him, he declared, tasted "very strange," so deciding that Hepenstall was a "fifth columnist" who was trying to poison him, he shot and killed the man.

Foes Holding, Nazis Admit; Claim No Gains

British Tanks Hurled Back in Attack at Arras, Berlin Says

By George Axelsson
Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, May 22.—The French today appear to be making a firm stand along the Somme and Aisne rivers and it is thought the Belgians and their Allies are successfully defending the "pocket" from Ghent in the north to Abbeville in the south in which upward of a million of their troops seem to be inclosed.

This much is deduced from today's German communique, which fails to name any new positions or fresh gains of territory.

Semiofficial circles here believe that the halt on the Somme and the Aisne means not only that the Germans are concentrating on reduction of the pocket but also that Paris is not an immediate objective but is to be grappled with after and if the isolation and subsequent attack on Britain has been carried out.

The fighting covered by today's communique seems to have been exceptionally heavy around Arras and Valenciennes. The latter is still holding out, although surrounded.

The Allies have evidently staged a huge attack on Arras, with the purpose, as the Germans explain it, of breaking through the south side of the giant German pincer, which is here 30 miles thick, stretching down to Amiens.

Big British tank units are said to have made a mass onslaught on Arras, but the Germans claim dive bombers stopped the assault.

At Valenciennes the fight still rages, with the French desperately meeting German attempts to put down resistance, and here the Ger-

Paris, May 22.—A 200-mile Allied front along the Somme and Aisne rivers checked, at least for the time being, tonight the twin German drive on the English Channel and Paris.

The night communique reported only that the battle continued in northern France and Belgium, but the War Ministry spokesman declared:

"Our troops are holding the German push at all points."

Against masses of Allied infantry spread west along the river valleys and north along the coastal plain, the Germans were reported to have sent only light scouting forces during the day. Allied counter-attacks against the German advance guards accounted for retaking of Arras and Abbeville.

Some German scouts were acknowledged to have driven deep

U. S. Out of Touch With Brussels' Embassy for 6 Days

Secretary of State Hull disclosed yesterday that Ambassador John Cudahy and his staff in Brussels, Belgium, have been completely out of touch with the State Department for more than six days.

He made the statement in response to a question as to whether the embassy was being moved with the Belgian government to Havre, France.

'For the Duration'

By Hugh Wagnon,
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, May 22.—Great Britain today placed all her people and all they own at the command of Prime Minister Winston Churchill in the war with Adolf Hitler's legions.

Proud of the democratic machinery which could give the prime minister power as great as Hitler's and yet retain the right to take it back, Parliament rushed into law a far-reaching act enabling the government to conscript all labor and property.

Commons pushed the bill through within two hours without a vote. The King signed it tonight.

The first steps in this momentous transition were taken beginning last August 24, when the King was empowered to issue decrees with the effect of law.

Today orders in council, prepared even before the parliamentary process was underway, gave immediate effect to laws setting up controls under ministers covering labor, banking, agriculture, transport, mining, war industries and export trade.

War Comes First

War and export industries will be given absolute priority and labor will be drafted as required.

The first powers to be enacted under the sweeping enabling act, commons was told, would be:

1—Complete government control of persons and property, "not just some persons or some particular class, but all persons, rich or poor, men or women."

2—The minister of labor may "direct any person to perform any service required," and may "prescribe terms of remuneration, hours of labor and conditions of service."

3—"There will be power to inspect premises and require employers to produce their books. The object is to mobilize the effective resources of the nation for whatever task may come upon us."

4—"Some establishments may be controlled altogether right away; others may be controlled later. They

London, May 22.—By sharp counter attacks on land and in the air the Allies tonight had stalled the German effort to complete a line from Abbeville to the English Channel and thus to pen the British army in the narrow coastal plain.

While the infantry hit the Nazis hard at Arras, the Royal Air Force smashed at columns of mechanized troops.

Arras and Abbeville were retaken.

It was one of the most important features of a vast aerial operation of last night in which one of the biggest R. A. F. raiding forces ever used in a single effort bludgeoned Germany's advancing columns and communication lines all the way from Rhenish Prussia, to southern Belgium and western France.

The three-fold object of the long-range attack was to:

(1) Destroy roads and bridges across the Meuse at Namur and Dinant;

(2) Derail trains on lines west of the Rhine, and

(3) Destroy or damage railway centers and junction yards west of the Ruhr.

Armored Columns Strafed

Other bombers intercepted columns of German light armored cars escorted by motorcycle troops on the main road north of Abbeville, attacking successfully. One formation of 11 planes, the Air Ministry said, bombed a parked column of tanks and armored cars in a wood near Abbeville, dropping 150 bombs.

British planes lost or missing were reckoned at 13, in contrast to 24 German planes they said they shot down or seriously damaged.

The sudden counter attacks on Arras and Abbeville were regarded here as part of a general Allied plan. The first point of this plan, it was understood, was to relieve the terrible German pressure at the point of the German thrust toward the sea. The second, observers be-

Thought Mobilization Proposed To Solve Major U. S. Problems

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

A plan for mobilizing the thinking power of the American people by democratic methods which would "outmaneuver" the controlled thought of totalitarian states was proposed yesterday by John W. Studebaker, United States Commissioner of Education.

Commissioner Studebaker suggested formation of a national nonpartisan education trust to focus attention on one major problem at a time through every channel of modern communication.

"We must somehow achieve by cooperative and peaceful means," said Studebaker, "that engineering of agreement or consent which in totalitarian countries is secured by autocratic repression, censorship and force."

Studebaker presented his plan at a meeting of the American Association for Adult Education in New York. Officials here said that while he had discussed it informally for some time, yesterday was the first time he suggested it publicly.

An ironic turn was given to the proposal by the fact that two agencies under Studebaker which might cooperate in the plan are facing extinction. The Film Service is preparing to close the end of June because no funds were appropriated for it. The Radio Division faces the same prospect, through a pro-

Stocks Rise 1 to 3 After Long Plunge

(Market Details, Pages 25, 26.)

New York, May 22 (AP).—The stock market turned upward today, after the severe plunge of the past two weeks, estimated in Wall Street to have wiped out more than $9,000,000,000 in quoted values.

The market was uneven, but buyers were more aggressive, and net gains ranging from $1 to $3 out—numbered losses of similar extent at the finish.

Brokers said the decline beginning May 10 had reduced many stocks 25 per cent or more, and finally attracted buyers to the market.

Nazi Bombs Razed Rotterdam After Dutch Surrendered

By C. Brooks Peters
Copyright by New York Times

Rotterdam, May 22.—This beautiful Netherlands city, the principal shipping center for the far-flung Dutch colonial empire, is today a sad skeleton of its former self.

On May 14 dive bombers of the German air force rained high-powered explosives on approximately one square mile of its central portion. The area bombed is a shambles, with almost every building razed.

Amazingly enough, the bombing occurred after the commanding Dutch general had capitulated. Negotiations had been in progress between the Dutch and German commanders relative to the surrender or evacuation of the city by Dutch troops.

The Dutch commander, it is said, after having broken off negotiations, then reopened them and failed to inform the Germans of his decision within the time specified. Meantime, the Germans say they instructed the air force to attack that portion of the city allegedly occupied by Dutch troops immediately following the expiration of the time limit.

The limit expired before the Dutch commander communicated his decision to surrender the city, the Germans declared, but then it was too late to recall "all" of the dive bombers which had set out to eject the enemy.

How many German planes were

EYES ON BRITAIN'S FLEET

(England's ten-billion-dollar sea power, safe from Hitler, would give American defense extra years of grace.)

In the Capital's highest official circles a single anxiety has during the last 24 hours emerged with overwhelming force from the vague forebodings of the last ten days—that the British fleet must at all costs be preserved, and kept out of Hitler's hands, no matter how complete the Nazi victory.

Harlan Miller

To put it with total candor: There are some high officials who obviously feel in their heart of hearts—but who still find it impolitic to say so aloud—that our immediate declaration of war on the side of the Allies would not be too high a price to pay for the fleet. Any help short of war, they feel, would be a cheap price to pay for it.

* * * *

The fog has cleared away. The wishful thinking that the Nazis can't smash to victory this summer is dying. With it has passed any doubt that Hitler will demand the fleet.

There is no doubt that he will enforce this demand with the most brutal threats of mass murder and devastation in England.

* * * *

And there is no longer any doubt here that he will carry out these threats, even if it means the demolition of every great English city and the destruction of millions of English lives—men, women and children.

"—an optimistic dream?"

In a sardonic vein, an observer here told a high official that his most optimistic mental image for the last week has been one of the British fleet steaming desperately westward across the Atlantic with the Nazi bombers in swift pursuit beyond Ireland.

* * * *

"That is an optimistic dream," said the high official grimly. "If Hitler demands the fleet, and if the alternative is a brutal and murderous assault on a defenseless England, there is little reason to think that the British won't surrender it."

* * * *

"But what of the empire? Wouldn't Britain preserve its fleet at any cost to preserve its empire?"

"There is little reason to think so," he replied. "The fleet belongs to England, and it would be English lives and possessions at stake."

* * * *

"But is the British morale so low?"

"For the last decade," he answered, "English morale has decayed more and more swiftly. Today it is a question whether England could stand up to such a threat from Hitler—knowing he would execute his threat."

* * * *

With the British fleet intact, and based either in Canada or the West Indies or at Singapore, leaving our fleet undivided either in the Pacific or the Atlantic, this country would have several extra years to prepare for any assault on the Western Hemisphere—assaults by trade pressure with political strings attached, by fifth columns or by Nazi-inspired revolutions in South America or by armed forces.

"—if Hitler seizes the fleet"

Without the fleet in his power, any demands by Hitler for Allied possessions in the Americas would be mere empty bluster. At worst, he'd need five years to build one.

With the British fleet he might conceivably be able to seize some of them—Bermuda, Nassau, Jamaica, Trinidad, Nova Scotia—within a year.

Our fleet could not cope with him and Japan simultaneously; our air force is still insufficient to resist; even the Panama Canal would not be safe.

There are, of course, some (the Chamberlain type) who think we should let England worry about her fleet and the possible seizure of her American possessions by Hitler; that two wars in the bush are better than one in the hand.

* * * *

As an incredible footnote, but one which few here are now willing to disbelieve, the story reached Washington this week that English-speaking German officers with the Nazi army of occupation in Poland have received circulars from Berlin asking them to volunteer for duty in England and America.

This story comes through official channels.

"What possible help now would assure the retention of the British fleet in British hands?" was the final question.

"Adequate assurance that whatever sacrifices the British might have to make to retain it would lead eventually to the preservation of England and the empire."

These are the views of a highly placed and responsible American official who has never, to my knowledge, talked through his hat.

Action Sped To Tighten Alien Controls

President's Plan Shifts Immigration To Justice Department

Speedy House action was assured yesterday on President Roosevelt's "urgent" proposal to transfer the Labor Department's Immigration and Naturalization Service to the Department of Justice.

Hard on the heels of a Presidential message advocating the move, Chairman Cochran of the House Committee on Government Organization, introduced a special resolution to expedite the transfer. A meeting of the committee was called for this morning.

Asserting that the proposed shift reflects no intention of depriving aliens of their civil liberties, the President declared that it would enable the Government "to deal quickly with those aliens who conduct themselves in a manner that conflicts with the public interest."

Meanwhile, a bill to deport one specified alien—Harry R. Bridges, C. I. O. maritime labor leader on the West Coast—was temporarily held up in the House Rules Committee after a hearing that involved bitter personal exchanges between members of Congress. The bill, which would set a precedent in American legislation, is expected to be given the "green light" by the committee Tuesday.

The bill introduced yesterday by Representatives Dies would exclude all alien Nazis, Fascists or Communists and all aliens associated directly or indirectly with any such organization or group, and deport all those already in the country. It would cut present immigration quotas by one-third, and require fingerprinting of all aliens applying for admission to this country. It also would require deportation of any alien characterized by the police as "a revolutionary agitator" or "a persistent disturber of the public peace."

And anti-alien sentiment was brought to the fore in a drastic bill introduced yesterday by Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, which would cut off all immigration to the United States for the next five years, except for the husbands, wives or minor children of American citizens or aliens already legally admitted.

Forced by International Events

The President's message follows:

"When Reorganization Plan No. IV was submitted to Congress, I did not contemplate the transmittal of any additional plans during the current session. However, the startling sequence of international events which has occurred since then has necessitated a review of the measures required for the Nation's safety. This has revealed a pressing need for the transfer of the immigration and naturalization functions from the Department of Labor to the Department of Justice.

"I had considered such an interdepartmental transfer for some time, but did not include it in the previous reorganization plans, since much can be said for the retention of these functions in the Department of Labor during normal times. I am convinced, however, that under existing conditions the immigration and naturalization activities can best contribute to the national well-being only if they are closely integrated with the activities of the Department of Justice.

Purposes Listed

"I am, therefore, transmitting herewith Reorganization Plan No. V, which I have prepared in accordance with the provisions of Section 4 of the Reorganization Act of 1939 (Public, No. 19, Seventy-sixth Congress, first session), approved April 3, 1939; and I declare that I have found that such reorganization is necessary to accomplish one or more of the purposes of Section 1 (A) of the act:

"1. To reduce expenditures;

"2. To increase efficiency;

"3. To consolidate agencies according to major purposes;

"4. To reduce the number of agencies by consolidating those having similar functions, and by abolishing such as may not be necessary; and

"5. To eliminate overlapping and duplication of effort.

"This plan provides for transferring the Immigration and Naturalization Service from the Department of Labor to the Department of Justice. While it is designed to afford more effective control over aliens, this proposal does not reflect any intention to deprive them of their civil liberties or otherwise to impair their legal status. This reorganization will enable the Government to deal quickly with those aliens who conduct themselves in a manner that conflicts with the public interest. No monetary savings are anticipated.

"I realize that the Congress may adjourn before the termination of the 60-day period provided under the Reorganization Act, but in that event and in view of the urgency of this matter, I hope that it will take such action as will permit this plan to go into effect."

Sees Third-Term Barrier to Coalition Cabinet

Former Gov. Alf M. Landon, titular head of the Republican Party, tells reporters that Republicans would be willing to participate in a coalition Cabinet if the President eliminated himself as a possible third-term candidate. The press conference followed Landon's three-hour-and-a-half conference with the President on the national defense program yesterday at the White House. The talk, Landon said, included an "offhand" reference to the third-term issue, but he added Roosevelt had given no indication of his stand on the subject the luncheon to serve in a coalition cabinet or to take any post in a special defense administration. "We talked of shoes and ships and sealing wax," he said.

But since the coalition proposals are being publicly discussed he said he wanted to make clear his views on Republican Party collaboration in present emergency moves.

His statement that "if he (Mr. Roosevelt) does eliminate himself as a candidate, Republicans can and will participate," was read over long distance telephone to Col. Frank Knox, Landon's 1936 running mate, who is reliably understood to share Landon's view.

It was Knox, responsible persons said, who was tentatively offered the post of Secretary of the Navy at a White House conference a week ago. The offer started a wide range of coalition speculation. Subsequently it was reported that Landon, through Knox, was offered the Secretary of War post, and the name of William J. Donovan, former Republican Assistant Attorney General, was mentioned for another Cabinet portfolio, Labor.

Coalition Talk Denied

The White House has never confirmed these reports, and Early has repeatedly denied knowledge of "any coalition talk" at the White House. The President told reporters Tuesday he first read of it in the papers. Republicans generally had rejected the coalition idea as a step toward "one party government."

Before the Landon conference, Early told reporters that the President has no intention whatever creating an involved, complex machine to handle the National defense program.

He suggested that "dollar-a-year" men, similar to those called in World War days, might reappear as defense co-ordinators to cooperate with rather than supersede any present Government officials. In addition, Early pointed out that three $10,000-a-year jobs as special Presidential assistants still are vacant, and these might be filled to aid in the task of rearming.

Landon was said to have agreed with Knox in Chicago on third term elimination as a condition to Republican Party participation in the present Government set-up.

Nearly two hours after yesterday's White House visit, Landon received a crowd of reporters in the lobby of the Burlington Hotel and handed them his prepared statement.

Calmness Urged

He said the present European situation has serious implications even for this country and declared: "National defense organized with reason and calmness is necessary, for the same reason that fire extinguishers are necessary even in a fireproof building.

"As a further means of defense, a national council—a small group of leaders and experts in their own fields, the members of which are not merely administration satelites—is desirable to head the defense program.

"But unfortunately for the country the leadership is in the hands of a man who has not eliminated himself as a candidate for an indefinite term as President, who at the moment has pledged to him more than enough delegates to take the Democratic nomination if he wants it."

Says Position Would Be Strange

Landon said political implications were inescapable since "unfortunately any Republican leader who takes a position in the present setup from the standpoint of unselfish national service is making himself a party to this third or indefinite term move."

Landon argued that instead of weakening Mr. Roosevelt's position, his withdrawal as a candidate would strengthen it—that he would become "the leader of the Nation instead of the head of a party." He noted that even in the midst of actual war, the Labor and Liberal parties in England refused to enter the Cabinet until there had been substantial agreement on policies.

"To suggest that President Roosevelt is the only man in the Nation to carry on, or that the national elections should be canceled or allowed to go by default, is to use the same argument the Nazis use in behalf of Hitler," said Landon.

"If democracy is important, and is in peril, there is a particular necessity to preserve all its basic principles, including that of two Presidential terms.

Visit "Very Friendly"

"Fortunately under our traditions and usages, stepping out of the White House does not mean that the Nation is deprived of a President's experience and ability."

The Kansan described his White House call as "a grand visit" and "very friendly." Coalition proposals, he said, were mentioned not at all and the third-term issue only in an "offhand" way. The President did not tell him his political intentions, he said.

In New York tomorrow, Landon will confer with both New York District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey and Republican National Committeeman Kenneth Simpson, who is at loggerheads with the Dewey organization. Landon will lunch today with Republican friends at the Capitol before entraining for New York tonight.

House Committee Approves Jones Farm Loan Bill

The House Agriculture Committee yesterday approved the Jones farm-credit bill to aid in reduction of interest rates paid by farm borrowers. The vote was unanimous.

Under the bill the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation is authorized to refinance its present holdings of Land Bank bonds at a rate not to exceed by more than ¼ of 1 per cent the rate on the corporation's Government-guaranteed bonds. The The coarporation would purchase new issues of Land Bank bonds on the same basis.

House Rejects All Changes In Relief Bill

Rayburn Balks G. O. P. Effort to Eliminate Funds for Reports

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Driving toward passage today of the 1941 relief bill, the House yesterday turned down all attempts to change the billion-dollar appropriation.

A Republican effort to knock out of the bill a $500,000 grant for the Office of Government Reports was defeated on a strict party vote after Majority Leader Rayburn made a direct appeal to his Democratic colleagues to support the President.

Declaring that the President considers OGR "essential" in giving him information, Rayburn asked for a unanimous Democratic vote for the agency. With one or two Representatives on both sides refraining from voting, the tellers counted 145—apparently all Democrats—in favor of the appropriation, and 93—all Republicans, against it.

An attempt of Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, to require that the $975,650,000 grant for WPA be spread over the full 12 months of the next fiscal year was defeated by voice vote. The appropriation measure now provides that this sum may be spent, if necessary, in the first eight months of the year, which begins July 1. A Republican proposal to grant $1,260,000,000 for the year was beaten.

Representative Dempsey (Democrat), of New Mexico, urged an amendment cutting down the average local sponsorship requirement from the bill's level of 25 per cent to 10 per cent. The present provision was retained, 108 to 86.

An effort by Representative Darden (Democrat), of Virginia, to obtain priority for national defense projects to be carried out by WPA was turned down.

The only amendment the House accepted yesterday was by Representative McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, permitting use of WPA money to meet emergencies arising from hurricanes, floods and droughts.

Among the many proposed amendments defeated were attempts to restrict further the discretion of the Washington office of the WPA, and to substitute a three-man board for the present commissioner.

Tazewell Man Cleared Of Poisoning Charge

Tazewell, Va., May 22 (AP).—Judge A. C. Buchanan gave a ruling in Circuit Court here yesterday which exonerated Roy Bennett, former Tazewell filling station proprietor, of a charge of fatally poisoning his wife, Mrs. Annie Bennett, last December.

The court held that the Commonwealth had not produced sufficient evidence to justify presentation to a jury.

Group Formed to Push Dairy Sale Campaign

Creation of a national producers committee representing 42 States and the District was announced yesterday by Charles W. Holman, secretary of the National Cooperative Milk Producers Federation.

The committee will promote the June dairy sale campaign. B. H.

Quiz Told Pew Tried to Frame Pa. Democrat

Wire-Tapping Charged To Detective Agency Paid by Republican

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

Senate inquirers heard yesterday that Joseph N. Pew, jr., Pennsylvania Republican leader, paid more than $7,000 last year to a detective agency which has been charged with efforts to "frame" Jack Kelly, prominent Philadelphia Democrat.

Photostats of six checks, made out to the Seaboard Bureau of Public Relations, of New York City, were placed in the record of the special committee investigating wire-tapping. The checks were drawn on Pew's account with the Girard Trust Co., of Philadelphia.

The Seaboard agency, according to previous testimony before the committee, concealed recording machinery in a Philadelphia hotel room and made discs of conversation between Kelly and alleged representatives of an advertising device for installation in State liquor stores.

Committee Counsel William P. Maloney asserted that the proposition made to Kelly was a "fake" and attempted "frame-up."

Other Checks Presented

Head of the Seaboard "confidential investigation" agency is Frank Bielaski, who will testify before the committee at 10 a. m. today.

The committee also received as evidence yesterday photostats of checks and bank drafts used by Gov. William H. Vanderbilt of Rhode Island, in paying $6,900 to the Bielaski agency for investigations conducted in Providence and Pawtucket, R. I., in 1939.

The Bielaski investigation in Rhode Island, previous witnesses have testified, included tapping telephone wires leading to the homes of Louis V. Jackson, attorney general of Rhode Island, and Mayor Thomas P. McCoy of Pawtucket.

Gov. Vanderbilt has said that he did not know wire-tapping was to be employed in the investigation.

The photostats identified yesterday by J. Howard McGrath, United States attorney for Rhode Island, showed that Vanderbilt had instructed the United States Trust Co., of New York City, to issue its check for $6,900 and charge the amount to his account. The check was issued to the Bank of Manhattan, with instructions to issue its check to the Seaboard bureau. This check was deposited in Bielaski's account with the Irving Trust Co.

"Archconspirator"

Gov. Vanderbilt was described by another witness as the "dupe" of a "conspiracy" headed by Sevellon Brown, editor of the Providence Journal.

Mayor McCoy charged that Brown was "the archconspirator in the wire-tapping activities," carried out to further "private and pet hobbies" of the Journal.

"The fundamental purpose of this conspiracy," McCoy declared, "was to set up something worse than the Russian secret police of Czarist days. I was the chief target."

McCoy also alleged that a Bielaski agent, in an effort to "frame" him, offered to bring John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, into Rhode Island "to put the arm on every Republican in the State and tell them to take the pressure off me." The agent, according to the witness, said he had a "strong contact" with Hamilton.

Chaplain Charles W. Maus installs Loren E. Souers, of Ohio, as president general of the Sons of the American Revolution

Loren Souers, Canton, Ohio, Is Elected President-General; Four Washingtonians Are Among New Officers of Organization

Sons of the American Revolution closed the national convention here yesterday with a demand that all aliens in the United States be registered and fingerprinted.

The resolution was adopted by 322 delegates at the Wardman Park Hotel on recommendation of the resolutions committee. A second recommendation called for a study of existing barriers to interstate trade with a view to removing them.

In its final action, the assembly elected Loren Souers, of Canton, Ohio, president general. The new officers include four Washingtonians: Robert B. Tracy, vice president for the midatlantic area; Frank B. Steele, secretary registrar general; Louis C. Smith, librarian general, and C. Seymour McConnell, trustee for the District of Columbia.

Columbus, Ohio, was chosen for the 1941 convention city.

Dr. Clifton P. Clark, president of the District society, announced that the closing fifty-first congress was the largest in the organization's history.

Other national officers are as follows:

Vice presidents—Henry D. C. DuBois, New England area; George Winters, North Atlantic; Burton Barrs, South Atlantic; Augustus L. Read, Southern; Robert P. Boggis, Central; Alonzo H. Wilkinson, Great Lakes; Leavitt R. Barker, North Mississippi; Allen L. Oliver, South Mississippi; Frank S. Gannett, Rocky Mountain; Marquis de Rochambeau, foreign.

George S. Robertson, treasurer general; Dr. W. H. J. Equires, historian general; S. Wesley Patten, geneologist general; Dr. Charles W. Maus, chaplain general.

O'Brien's Company Takes First Award In St. John's Drill

First honors in the annual drill of the St. John's College Cadet Corps were taken yesterday by Co. B, commanded by Capt. Ralph O'Brien. Six units competed. Second and third places were not awarded.

The leader of the winning company received a cup from Lieut. Richard Moushegian, who, with Lieut. John W. Gorn, judged the drill. Moushegian and Gorn are attached to the Third Battalion, Twelfth infantry, stationed at Arlington Cantonment.

Pvt. James Poulos, of Co. E, won the manual of arms contest and will receive a medal at the school's commencement exercises. Seventeen-year-old Capt. O'Brien carried the saber used by his grandfather, Col. Richard A. O'Brien, at the battle of Santiago in the Spanish-American War.

The drill and parade were reviewed by Staff Sergt. Thomas H. McDonald, U. S. A., head of cadet activities at St. John's; Cadet Col. Herbert N. Mulhall and Lieut. Col. Frank J. Denny.

Sons Receive Estate Of More Than $100,000

The will of Mrs. Florence Bratenahl, of Bradley Hills, which has been admitted to probate in the Orphans' Court at Rockville, and which disposes of an estate valued at more than $100,000, bequeaths the entire estate in equal shares to her sons, Charles and Alexander Bratenahl.

The instrument, which was executed January 13, 1939, named Charles Bratenahl and Clarence C. Keiser, executors. Mrs. Bratenahl was the widow of the Rev. G. C. F. Bratenahl.

Father J. J. Reilly Gets Appointment To Catholic Univ.

The appointment of the Rev. John J. Reilly to the administrative staff of Catholic University was announced yesterday by the Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, Bishop of Bilta and rector of the institution.

Rector of St. Ann's Church, Hamden, Conn., since 1935, Father Reilly previously served as assistant at St. Rose's Church, near New Haven, and St. Patrick's Norwich, Conn. The late Cardinal Mercier ordained him on July 8, 1923.

Father Reilly was educated in parochial schools of New Haven, his birthplace, did preliminary study for the priesthood at St. Thomas' Seminary, Hartford, studied philosophy at St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore, Md., and theology at the American College in Louvain, Belgium.

3 U. S. Economists Given Fellowships

Three Government economists and a Baltimore man are among 20 recipients of Harvard fellowships for advanced study in governmental problems, Dean John H. Williams of the graduate school of public administration announced yesterday. At the same time the school of business administration announced scholarship awards to two Washingtonians.

The awards, known as Littauer fellowships, span the academic year beginning next September. Receiving them are Hugh L. Stewart, 2018 Key boulevard, Arlington, Va.; James E. Wood, 1631 S street northwest; Burton O. Young, 317 North Thomas street, Arlington, and Edgar J. Kemler, of Baltimore. Wood is with the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, Stewart with the Department of Agriculture and Young with the Federal Housing Administration.

The graduate school of business administration announced scholarships for next term for Walter R. Guthrie, 4301 Argyle terrace, and Sidney Weger, 4521 Fifteenth street northwest. John T. Fey, of Cumberland, Md., also received a scholarship in the business school.

D. C. Gas Price Fixing Report Price Fixing

Arnold's Assistants To Present Charge In Inquiry Here

A reported agreement of Washington gasoline dealers to raise prices 2 cents a gallon will be investigated by the District grand jury Monday, under the direction of two special assistants to the Attorney General.

Thurman Arnold, chief of the antitrust division of the Department of Justice, announced yesterday that Attorney General Jackson ordered the inquiry after persons who would be affected complained of the dealers' agreement. Arnold said that if the agreement was correctly reported, it was a violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act and would cost local consumers $2,000,000 a year.

Summoned before the grand jury was Earl A. Nash, secretary of Gasoline Retailers of Washington, Inc., who was ordered to produce all the records of his organization.

Nash said his organization had referred the matter to counsel and was not prepared to make a statement. He said he received the subpena.

Edward P. Hodges, head of the antitrust complaint division, will be in charge of the investigation, assisted by James C. Wilson.

Advertising Club Elects Burrus To Presidency

George B. Burrus, vice president of the Peoples Drug Stores, was elected president of the Advertising Club of Washington at its annual meeting yesterday in the Raleigh Hotel.

BURRUS

Burrus came to Washington from Tennessee in 1923 without a job. He started working here as a soda dispenser in the Peoples Drug Stores and rose to vice president.

Other new officers are F. Reid Wallace, promotion and advertising manager of Goldenberg Co., first vice president; Louis D. Krakow, advertising manager of the District Grocery Stores, second vice president; Charles J. Columbus, reelected full-time secretary; Allen V. DeFord, head of a food brokerage bearing his name, treasurer.

Elected to the board of directors for the term of three years were Walter D. Barkdull, advertising director of the Times-Herald; Crosby B. Noyes, assistant advertising manager of the Evening Star, and David B. Stein, radio director of Kal Advertising, Inc.

50 to Graduate At Greenbrier's 128th Session

Special Dispatch to The Post

Lewisburg, W. Va., May 22.—Greenbrier Military School's 128th session comes to a close on Monday morning, June 3, when final graduating exercises will be held in the school auditorium. Diplomas will be presented to approximately 43 seniors in the regular department and seven seniors in the business department of the school.

Cadet Allen Nichols, of Batavia, Ohio, is valedictorian for the class of 1940. Cadet Richard Wise, of Baltimore, Md., is senior orator. The annual literary celebration will be held at 8 p. m. Thursday, May 30. At this time winners in debate, oration, and other literary events will be announced. On Friday, May 31, at 2 p. m., company and platoon drills will be held.

On Saturday afternoon the squad and individual competitive drills will be followed by a dress parade, and then a reception to patrons, alumni, and friends will be held on the front campus.

On Sunday morning the baccalaureate sermon will be preached to the graduates of Greenbrier College and Greenbrier Military School in Carnegie Hall, by Dr. Frank Caldwell, president of Louisville Presbyterian Seminary.

Dental Ceramics Permits Saving Of Broken Teeth, Clinic Is Told

Dr. Poul Simmonsen Tells of Advances That Allow Repairing in Such a Way An Ugly Mouth Can Be Prevented

A childish accident no longer means that a youngster must go through life with an ugly mouth or false teeth, thanks to improved technique in dental ceramics, the plastic surgery of dentistry.

This was brought out yesterday by Dr. Poul H. J. Simmonsen, of Philadelphia, in a talk before the Five-State Postgraduate Clinic on Dentistry at the Willard Hotel.

Construction of porcelain caps for teeth has been perfected to such an extent recently, he said, that the break is hardly noticeably. Molding the caps by hand and baking them in an oven producing 2,400 degrees or more heat, the dental ceramics experts is able to match the original shape and color of the tooth.

Time was, Dr. Simmonsen said in an interview following his talk, when men and women were satisfied, or even proud, to sport gold caps on their teeth. But now, he added, hardly one person in a thousand is willing to make use of such decoration.

Dr. Simmonsen emphasized that no matter how bad a break, there is always a possibility of the tooth being restored. Sometimes even, he said, teeth can be wired in place after they have been completely knocked out of their sockets.

He said it was sometimes bad practice to pull out baby teeth, as well as adult teeth, since other teeth growing around the vacancy will crowd the new tooth and probably make it crooked.

Dr. Simmonsen's talk was before one of more than a dozen continuous clinics which comprised yesterday's business at the meeting. A dental ceramics expert, he came to this country a year ago from Denmark.

Dr. John Clayton, of Kansas City Western Dental College, urging prompt attention to bad teeth, told another clinic that "teeth are like rotten apples in a barrel. When one goes bad others will follow. Prompt attention will prevent such a condition."

The dentists attended a supper dance last night after an afternoon of golf. They will adjourn tomorrow.

Curran to Seek Reform in D. C. Bail Bond System

Reforms in the bail bond system prevailing in the criminal courts here will be sought by District Attorney Edward M. Curran.

Curran assured Dr. James Allen Nolen, director of the Washington Criminal Justice Association, the bail bond question would be taken up with the justices of the District Court. Curran said he believed that a limit should be set on the amount of bonds written by any single bondsman.

West Md. Conservation Problems Discussed

Cumberland, Md., May 22 (AP).—James H. Gambrill, of Frederick, a member of the State game and inland fish commission, discussed conservation problems peculiar to the three western Maryland counties today.

Gambrill spoke before the advisory councils of Allegany, Garrett and Washington counties, made up of representative land owners and sportsmen of the section. E. Lee LeCompte, Baltimore, State game warden, and Fulcher P. Smith, of Cumberland, game commission member, also were present.

U. of Va. Class May Hear Talk By Roosevelt

Charlottesville, Va., May 22 (AP).—President Roosevelt has tentatively accepted an invitation to deliver an address to graduating students of the University of Virginia June 10 in McIntyre amphitheater.

The President's acceptance, it was explained, was dependent upon world affairs.

2 Held for U. S. Jury After Moonshine Raid

Hagerstown, Md., May 22.—Albert Stockslager, jr., and Stanley L. Jones, seized Monday when Federal and county officers raided a moonshine camp near this city, were held under $500 bond each for action of the Federal grand jury when they appeared before United States Commissioner D. Angle Wolfinger. The officers said they seized a still, mash and whisky on the Stockslager property.

Heroic Defenders of Last Liege Fortress Yield to Nazis

Ammunition Reported Exhausted

Final Assault By Dive Bombers Is Terrifying Spectacle

By Louis P. Lochner
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the German Armies on the Western Front, May 22.—The last of Belgium's mighty Liege forts fell today—shelled, dive-bombed, then charged by infantry.

From a hilltop between Eupen and Malmedy, near the German frontier, I saw the swastika warflag of Germany raised over the battered fort at Battice where Belgian defenders capitulated after one of the most gallant fights against hopeless odds in the Belgian campaign.

(Battice, 10 miles east of Liege, is one of the closest of the Liege ring of fortifications to the German frontier, 20 miles away. Fall of the other forts has been reported successively since German troops took the first May 11, the second day of fighting in the Low Countries.)

Held Out Heroic

Cut off for more than a week, and responsible to themselves alone and to their patriotic conscience, the garrison of the fort had held out determinedly.

We climbed the heights overlooking the fort shortly before 3 p. m. (8 a. m. E.S.T.). Below in the panorama of verdant forests and rolling meadows was the Spa, headquarters of the last German emperor who fled to refuge in Holland at the end of the World War.

In the distance large mounds of coke slack, looking like miniature volcanoes, indicated Liege itself.

Little more of the Battice fort was discernible than the top of the fortification, built on the principle of France's Maginot Line fortifications.

Within a few minutes artillery fire gave way suddenly to dead silence—possibly because the Belgians had exhausted their ammunition.

From above suddenly swooped down one dive bomber, then another and another.

There was a deafening roar and the next moment this peaceful scenery was marred with smoke smudges such as puff up from the stacks of great steel plants.

Terrifying Spectacle

No sooner had one cloud thinned than new bombers screamed down and the terrifying spectacle repeated itself.

When the smoke finally cleared there was complete silence. Through strong glasses we saw German infantry climbing into the main fortification. By 3:20 p. m. (8:20 a. m., E. S. T.) the Nazi swastika waved from the fallen fort.

Only smaller works of the adjacent fortification system remain to be taken. Officers with our group expressed the belief these now will capitulate automatically.

Meanwhile, roads leading to the front lines are jammed with troops marching up to strengthen Col. Gen. Walther Von Reichenau's mighty right wing.

The new arrivals might be dubbed a shawl army. Almost every German soldier, on reaching Holland or Belgium, takes the first opportunity to acquire one of the colored red or red-and-white polka dot shawls used in the lowlands as protection against inclement weather. Even non-commissioned officers had them.

One tall Frisian soldier told me:

"Sir, I saw the shawl and the next moment it happened to be around my neck. That's the way it was with my comrades, too."

The fall of the Battice Fort was part of the mopping up operations undertaken while Von Reichenau awaited word from Adolf Hitler that was expected to touch off anew the westward drive through Flanders toward the sea.

Willkie Draws Sizeable Write-in In New Jersey

Newark, N. J., May 22 (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie drew a sizeable write-in tally on his first appearance in Presidential preferential balloting as results of New Jersey's primary election disclosed today a surprising rout of former Gov. Harold G. Hoffman in his bid for the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

Willkie received 13,831 in 1,964 of the State's 3,631 election districts as compared with the 224,453 rolled up yesterday by Thomas E. Dewey in 2,325 districts. Dewey's was the only name on the ballot.

President Roosevelt automatically gained 32 Democratic convention votes, all pledged to a third term.

State Senator Robert C. Hendrickson, 41-year-old attorney, scored a 34,396 majority over the favored Hoffman after one of the most heated primary fights in party history. In the November election he will face Charles Edison, Secretary of the Navy, whose unopposed candidacy for the Democratic nomination brought out 257,675 votes in 2,521 districts.

United States Senator W. Warren Barbour, Republican, will oppose James H. R. Cromwell, scheduled to resign soon as United States Minister to Canada, in the Senate race.

The German air force seems to continue to play a dominant role, inflicting heavy punishment on and behind the Allied fronts. Port establishments at Ostend, Dunkirk, Calais, Boulogne and Dieppe are said to have been fired by German bober attacks.

The Germans claim to be already effectively interfering with Franco-British channel traffic and to have sunk yesterday 1 cruiser and 11 freighters or transports, in addition to having damaged several more. They appear to have put into action a large number of their tropedo-carrying "mosquito" craft.

Based on the Netherlands coast, including myriad of islands and inlets along that shore, these speedboats appear to constitute a formidable threat to the Anglo-French navies and shipping in the channel.

Drive Slowed

Berlin, May 22 (AP).—Groping for the narrow Straits of Dover, shortcut to England, the German armies of Flanders tonight poured men and guns into the battle zone they have cut into France, wary of counter-attack and arming for "the kill."

Advices from the Flanders command of the German army told how its front is being fortified with German reserves of artillery and aircraft of all kinds, and how troops are pouring into the lines.

Three lanes deep, they are marching down the highways.

The German command looks for heavy counterattack from the south, and it appeared to be starting tonight when a French tank thrust was made in the vicinity of Laon. The Germans said it was beaten off, that ten French tanks were set afire and that 24 surrendered.

"It may be that our present movements will come to a temporary halt," said Gen. Walther von Reichenau, high commander in the field. "Weygand has ordered everyone to stand his ground. That may mean hard fights ahead."

Hence today the German watchword, by land and air, was "destroy."

Two hooked prongs of the German wedge struck northwest toward the French port of Boulogne, on the shoulder of the English Channel, on a line from St. Pol to Montreuil, after brushing past Abbeville. Germans said this arm of their forces is 30 miles thick.

Soissons Turned

On the south German columns snaked around or through Soissons, World War battleground some 56 miles north of Paris. Ahead went the bombers, leaving in flames the railway stations at Compeigne and Creil, 40 and 25 miles from the French capital.

The high command conceded the Allies were resisting fiercely.

President Nominates Pike, Maine Republican, to SEC

Oil Man Succeeds Matthews, Describes Himself as 'Liberal'

SUMNER T. PIKE

Sumner T. Pike, who describes himself as "leftish as Republicans go," was nominated to the Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday by President Roosevelt.

Born in Maine, Pike, if his nomination receives expected Senate confirmation, will become the Republican colleague of Robert E. Healy on the five-man commission whose Democratic majority is made up of Edward C. Eicher, Leon Henderson and Chairman Jerome Frank. Pike will succeed Republican member George C. Matthews, who resigned to accept a position in a private utility concern.

Known as an expert on the oil industry, Pike won attention during recent months by his work as liaison officer between the Commerce Department and Senator O'Mahoney's Temporary National Economic (Monopoly) Committee. He acted as business adviser to Commerce Secretary Hopkins.

Informed of his nomination yesterday by a Post reporter, Pike revealed that he has never met President Roosevelt. He thought his appointment was designed to keep the balance of men with business experience on the commission and to comply with the statutory requirement that the membership include two persons not members of the majority political party.

"I am a liberal middle-of-the-roader," he said.

With the nomination of Pike, the SEC is at full membership. However, there are persistent reports that Chairman Frank is desirous of resigning to return to private law practice and may resign after adjournment of Congress.

people." Byrnes replied. "He must know that if we had a population of 230,000,000 people we would be helpless without a strong navy and a strong army adequately equipped with modern weapons."

"Can He Speak for Hitler?"

Having reminded his listeners that Lindbergh once accepted a decoration from Hitler, the Senator inquired:

"When Mr. Lindbergh says, 'no one wishes to attack us,' is he authorized to speak for Hitler or Goering? Can the American people, in the light of recent history, accept the assurance of this young gentleman that if we do not ask for war it will not come to us?"

Earlier, Senator William H. Smathers (Democrat), of New Jersey, challenged Lindbergh to tell "who wrote or who collaborated with him in the preparation" of his recent speech.

Right to Know, He Argues

"When a national figure like Col. Lindbergh takes to the air and addresses the American people on the important subject of foreign policy and refers to the Government's efforts of national defense as hysterical chatter," Smathers said "the American people have the right to have this information."

Smathers also said "it is a matter of common knowledge in Washington that in the last speech Col. Lindbergh made two different schools of thought had prepared two different speeches for him on the same subject, and no one knew until the actual broadcast which one he was going to use."

Texans Threaten 3 With Swastikas

Del Rio, Tex., May 22 (INS).—A man and two women who were selling religious literature and playing phonograph records were escorted out of town by police late today after a threatening crowd had gathered because of the trio's refusal to salute the Flag.

The literature, authorities said, was anti-Roosevelt in tone and was embellished with swastikas, which led to a brief "spy scare." The three were said to have described themselves as members of the "prophets of Jehovah" sect.

4 Americans Added To Missing List In Battle Zone

Paris, May 22 (AP).—Four more young Americans were added today to the list of missing from Anne Morgan's ambulance unit, operating in the northern war zone, and officials expressed belief that five others previously not accounted for were dead or German prisoners.

The latest to drop from sight were last seen driving casualty-laden ambulances south of a town now in German hands.

They were Donald Coster, of Montreal and New York City; John Clement, of Brookline, Mass.; George King, of New York, and Gregory Wait, of Shelbourne, Vt.

The five others were Al Raymond, of Chicago; Louise Wehrle, of Fort Wayne, Ind.; Murray Shipley, of Cincinnati; John Glowacki, of Jersey City, and Lawrence A. Jump, of Nantucket, Mass. Jump has been missing since May 16, when his ambulance was shelled near Sarreguemines.

Worcester Poly Alumni Elect Cutler President

Harold T. Cutler, telephone company engineer, was elected president of the Washington Alumni Association of Worcester (Mass.) Polytechnic Institute last night at a meeting at the Admiral Club. He succeeds Lawrence E. Hyde.

H. B. Whitmore was named first vice president; M. B. Arthur, second vice president, and Albert S. Corbin, secretary-treasurer. J. E. Smith was chosen as the association's representative at the forthcoming alumni convention in Worcester.

The selection of Jesse R. Watt, of 34 R street northeast, senior at McKinley High School, to receive the local organization's 1940 scholarship to Worcester Tech was announced at the meeting. The scholarship, renewable for three more years, provides $400 a year for tuition.

John A. Remon, of Washington, a trustee of the institution, reported on alumni fund-raising activities for new buildings.

SEC Denies Stock Dumped by Nazis On N. Y. Exchange

Securities and Exchange Commission officials yesterday struck back at charges by Representative Crewford (Republican), of Michigan, that the SEC may have permitted Germany to dump looted securities on the stock market.

A check of brokerage houses in New York City these officials said, revealed no recent selling of securities from Denmark, Norway, Holland or Belgium.

Crawford had charged that "German agents" might be unloading stocks in the American market, thereby depressing security prices.

To this, the SEC officials answered yesterday that such transactions from Europe would be "highly improbable" and that Treasury "freeze" orders would prevent unauthorized selling of Scandinavian or Lowland securities held in the United States.

The commission's spokesmen also denied charges, made by Crawford, that the New York Stock Exchange had considered closing during the selling flurry on May 14, but had changed its mind after a talk with SEC officials. The exchange did not get in touch with the SEC at all on May 14, the commission said yesterday.

Clipper Seeks Haven in Bermuda

Hamilton, Bermuda, May 22 (AP).—The Pan American Airways Atlantic Clipper, en route from New York to the Azores on an eastward Atlantic crossing, radioed that it would land here late tonight after being turned back by bad weather.

The chief censor announced that mail aboard the craft would be examined.

Pan American several weeks ago discontinued stops at Bermuda on both east and westward Atlantic crossings after the British instituted rigid censorship of mail aboard its planes.

Mary was a model prisoner

As Queen of Scots she was most regal. As a prisoner, she became entirely womanly. Dressed in nun-like black, she stitched with her soft white hands the remarkable gold embroideries still in existence. She kept pet dogs and birds. Personally she cared for them, and the flowers in her garden. To the women in her suite she was a kind considerate friend.

Mary had the great gift of making friends and holding them . . . How naturally then, that the early makers of Highland Queen whisky should have named it for her. This Scotch has been faithful to its traditions—an appealing whisky, light and delicate, yet it retains rare flavor and bouquet.

British Planes Strafe Tanks, Lorries in Raids at Front

Nazi Supply Lines Bombed By Low Fliers

Pilots Report Direct Hits on Advancing Mechanized Columns

By C. H. P. Anderson
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the British Royal Air Force in France, May 22.—German tanks were seen diving from roads in confusion to avoid clusters of bombs dropped today by low-flying Royal Air Force planes in widespread raids just behind the lines in northern France.

Large formations of Britain's advance air striking force took part in the raids aimed at shattering German communications and supply lines.

At one point as their planes roared down, the pilots said, they could see a battle on the ground between two German and two Allied tanks. Twenty light tanks were counted along one road near Amiens. They were spattered with machinegun fire from the planes.

Bombs were poured on military objectives a few miles north of Amiens, occupied yesterday by German advance forces. Light antiaircraft units were observed north and northeast of Amiens, but there seemed little movement over the roads in this section. (Here four words censored).

British aircraft spotted one convoy and bombed the head of the column. Pilots reported direct hits, and it was believed the road was blocked. Another convoy was attacked in a wood (two words censored).

Back from the raid, the bomber crews told of being "lucky enough to find some of the tanks which had broken through" Allied lines.

"One of the pilots," the fliers said, "dropped a bomb right in the middle of three of them. One of the tanks reared up like a horse and fell over backwards.

"Another machine found a convoy of German lorries and let go his load at them. He could actually see the lorries toppling headlong off the road."

Germans Checked In Channel Drive

lfeved, was to press on a large scale from north and south against the base of the German salient, meanwhile choking off troop supplies by aerial bombardment.

The tactics of the last few days of bending before the German advance but never allowing breakthrough of large masses of infantry toward the sea give the French time to reform the shattered Belgian army and their own severely hammered divisions.

The Allied strategy is necessarily more limited than that of the Germans whose plan, according to British officers, calls for light divisions to keep the British busy in the north while the German air force systematically bombs Channel ports and depots. Then the main body of the German army would swing south to engage the French field armies, which are still virtually intact.

If the French should be whipped, Germany as military master of the European continent could then offer Britain the choice of battle against tremendous odds and invasion or an armistice.

Nazis Losses 100,000

Despite reports in London that the Germans have lost a quarter of a million men in the fighting in Flanders, neutral observers believe their battle casualties haven't exceeded 100,000 killed, wounded and missing.

These observers point out that the Germans have never used more than 10 divisions in a single engagement and that the actions against the British at Louvain and in the Arras and Cambrai areas, furious though they were, found the Nazis probably limited to one division in each instance.

There are no official estimates here of the British and French casualties, but it is believed the British losses did not exceed 45,000 at the end of yesterday's fighting.

The fighting at Arras and Amiens was so intensive because of the strategical importance of these railroad and motor road junctions to the Germans if they attempt to supply their advancing army. The modern army can hardly live off the country as armies once did, and that is particularly true in an area of Europe already picked clean by nine months of war and by thousands of refugees.

Some commentators thought the high command had decided to fight from the admittedly dangerous position in Belgium at all costs.

No Retreat Indicated

There was nothing to indicate that the British expeditionary force, pocketed between the English Channel, and the swift-moving Nazi columns, would elected to undertake a strategic withdrawal.

General headquarters omitted its customary communique on operations early today.

The British people, shaken by the "black Tuesday" news which told of the Germans driving to the estuary of the Somme River to form a wedge between the British forces and the main French armies, snapped out of their first shock today.

British leaders and the press declared that the people were prepared to absorb even worse shocks.

Commentators, in sizing up the situation, decided that it was not so bad as first appeared.

Gale Moving On East Coast Brushes District

The fringe of a heavy storm, centered in the Atlantic, passed over Washington last night, but was hardly noticed here. Full fury of the northeast gale was expected to strike the coast from Nantucket to Sandy Hook.

Today the mercury is expected to go above the high of 77 yesterday, but skies will be partly overcast. Cooler is the forecast for tomorrow.

Storm warnings were up from Cape Hatteras to Eastport, Me. At 7:30 p. m. last night the center of the storm was 225 miles east northeast of Cape Hatteras, with strong shifting winds and gales up to 50 miles an hour. The disturbance was moving northward at 15 miles an hour.

Churchill Voted Dictator's Powers

will in effect be working on government account with wages and profits under government control."

5—Munitions will be controlled immediately.

6—Excess profits tax is at the rate of 100 per cent.

7—Other establishments may be ordered to "carry on" even at a loss, in which event "they must have adequate remuneration."

8—"There may be cases where firms will have to close down and there may perhaps be destruction of property here and there," with remuneration to be determined.

Churchill's power is greater than Cromwell's was and hardly less absolute than Hitler's, except in the extent he is desirous of wielding supreme control over the individuals of the realm.

Introduced by Clement R. Attlee, Churchill's lieutenant in the house, with the declaration that "everything for which we stand is in jeopardy."

Attlee assured his listeners that if Parliament could not meet because of a German invasion or some other reason, the cabinet could govern, unhampered by lack of legislation.

Everything, it was emphasized, has been done to subordinate all to victory.

"It must be clear to all," he said, "that the next few weeks are critical. Our ruthless enemy, who is restrained by no considerations of international law, justice or humanity, is throwing everything into the scales to force a decision. We are resolved he shall not succeed."

The death penalty for "fifth column" treachery was provided in another bill passed tonight by the Commons.

The measure provides that "if with intent to help the enemy any person does or attempts or conspires with any other person to do any act which is designed or likely to give assistance to naval, military or air operations of the enemy, to impede such operations of His Majesty's forces, or to endanger life . . . he shall on conviction suffer death."

Herbert Morrison, minister of supply, declaring the Allies have their "backs to the wall," today called upon civilians to work "at war speed" to combat "a more deadly menace than has threatened the peoples of these islands" since the Spanish Armada set out.

The present threat, he said, is such "that there is time for nothing but an intense, concentrated effort to muscle and mind and will. It must begin now."

Calling for "more shells, more guns, more tanks," Morrison said the effort "must leave for the civilian population a sterner way of life than we have been used to."

He added: "A war of the character we are now experiencing makes that inevitable."

"We are going to cut down our leisure," he asserted, "cut down our comfort, blot out every private and sectional aim, thinking only of arms for men, arms for victory, and arms for liberty."

The press solemnly supported the government's conscription of all the nation's people and wealth into the war effort.

"To conquer totalitarianism we must for the time being go totalitarian," observed the Daily Mirror.

The Times of London, commented: "A united nation feels no hestitation or misgiving though the new act comes near to suspending the very essence of the constitution as it has been built up in a thousand years.

"Our ancient liberties are placed in pawn for victory."

The Manchester Guardian: "We must surrender our liberties to the government of our choice in order that we may resume them."

The Liberal News Chronicle said the people "will rejoice . . . The one desire of everybody is to serve."

"Here at last is a tangible manifestation of that dynamic leadership for which the the country has been looking," declared the Telegraph.

It's the kind of tonic the nation expects from its rulers," commented the Daily Mail.

Queen Wilhelmina Feared Kidnaping

By Carroll Kenworthy
United Press Staff Writer

Queen Wilhelmina fled Holland to escape German kidnapers and the possibility that if she were seized as a hostage the Reich would have subjected Netherland's overseas territories to "blackmail," Netherlands Minister Alexander Loudon said last night.

Dr. Loudon suggested in an exclusive interview with the United Press that Her Majesty might have suffered the fate of the former Austrian chancellor, Kurt Schuschnigg, or undergone attempts on her life such as King Haakon, of Norway experienced, had she remained with her subjects.

Schuschnigg reportedly was subjected to ill-treatment during negotiations at Berlin which caused him to faint from pain and yield to German demands for incorporation of Austria into the reich.

Training School For Colored Girls Sought

Civic Leaders Ask That Institution's Status Be Changed

Washington colored leaders yesterday requested support of the House District Committee and the District Commissioners to change the present status of the National Training School for Girls so as to limit its population to colored girls.

This recommendation is one of a 14-point program contained in a report on the institution made by the social welfare committee of the Federation of Civic Associations. At present the school has a population of 82 inmates, of which 76 are colored.

The committee stated it found many faults with the present set-up and made the following suggestions:

That an educator be appointed as superintendent; development of an effective educational, vocational and physical training-recreational program; an efficient parole system be inaugurated; system of peonage (hiring girls out), at $4 a week be stopped; that eight mothers and their infants be removed immediately; girls under 16 be not permitted to smoke; feeble-minded and psychopathic inmates be removed; young offenders be segregated from hardened criminals during detention; an entire colored personnel be employed and six white girls be removed; an attempt be made by the federation to interest female groups in assisting school in any way possible; an increased maintenance above $500 per girl be allowed; restoration of salary cuts, civil service grades, and personnel classification be employed; Board of Public Welfare attempt to promote stability by careful choice of another superintendent; that upon the next occurrence of a vacancy on the welfare board an additional colored person be appointed.

District officials would make no comment on the report, which was signed by Charles M. Thomas, president of the federation; Kenneth H. Carter, secretary, and Edward F. Harris, Howard D. Queen and Edna W. Payton.

2 More Arrested For Walking Over U. S. Grass Plots

Interior Secretary Ickes' dragnet for shortcutters netted two more persons yesterday, a man and a woman, bringing the two-day total to eight.

It was observed, however, that while two park policemen were patrolling the Mall to keep pedestrians off the grass, motorists made a parking lot of the lawns around District Court.

Ten automobiles were seen parked on the lawn of Judiciary Square at 2 p. m. yesterday and the lawn, instead of showing paths, was pockmarked with automobile tracks.

A checkup of licenses showed the cars belonged to deputy marshals, court clerks and attorneys. They were driven over the sidewalk.

Yesterday's grass-walkers were booked at Fourth Precinct station for shortcutting. They gave the names of Evelyn A. Shorts, 19, of 1245 Delaware avenue southwest, and Ralph Gerchied, 23, of 2013 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Park Policemen J. E. Bracey and J. A. Moran, who were on special assignment to watch for the walkers, made the arrests.

The victims were made to post $2 collateral each.

Benches Installed At War Memorial

Francis F. Gillen, acting superintendent of National Capital Parks, yesterday announced installation of 50 benches near the District War Memorial in West Potomac Park for the use of band concert listeners.

In providing this convenience for music lovers, Gillen urged them to guard against injuring any of the 800 young dogwood trees recently planted near the memorial.

NOW GET YOURS AT POPULAR PRICES AND IN ADDITION a Liberal Allowance FOR YOUR OLD AUTOMATIC REFRIGERATOR

Mrs. Mary E. Walker, of 48 H Street, N. E., says:

"Other refrigerators may cost little to run when new, but I know from experience it takes one without moving parts to keep right on operating for just a few cents a day, year in and year out. This, plus the wonderful silence are the things which caused me to choose the Silent Electrolux for my second refrigerator."

Mrs. Emma Schmelz, of 4016 Kansas Avenue, N.W., says:

"I chose the Gas Refrigerator for my second refrigerator after visiting friends who had one. And I can honestly say that our Gas Refrigerator never gives trouble and, best of all, never makes the slightest noise."

Remember

ONLY ELECTROLUX FREEZES WITH NO MOVING PARTS

Now you can have a brand new 1940 Gas Refrigerator at a remarkably low price . . . and with a liberal trade-in allowance for your present automatic refrigerator!

It's a real opportunity! For Servel Electrolux is the only automatic refrigerator that can give you the big advantages of a freezing system with no moving parts.

This different modern refrigerator is silent . . . and stays silent. The tiny gas flame that circulates the refrigerant does its work without noise and without wear. No moving, wearing parts means more years of savings . . . continued low cost to run.

See the beautiful new models—today! Get all the facts. The more you learn about the Gas Refrigerator, the more you'll understand why it's called "the refrigerator of the future."

Italy Rattles Sword on First Anniversary of Axis Pact

Press Indicates Nation May Go To War Soon

King Honors Goering As Papers Hint Action Within Berlin Alliance

By the Associated Press

Rome, May 22.—Press declarations that Italy's "pact of steel" with Germany had held British warships in the Mediterranean and French soldiers on the Italian frontier while the Nazi war machine smashed through the Low Countries into France highlighted today the celebration of the first anniversary of the Axis military alliance.

It was a celebration held amid mounting indications that Italy might soon enter the war.

King Vittorio Emanuele gave to Marshal Goering the right to call him cousin—by conferring the highest Italian decoration, the Collar Annunziata, on Adolf Hitler's air chief—and the newspapers unanimously felicitated the alliance.

Predict Seizure of Malta

One extremist organ, Il Resto del Carlino at Bologna, exulted over German successes, forecast that Italy would take from Britain the Mediterranean island of Malta, and declared:

". . . Every bayonet in the back of a fugitive Englishman avenges infamies suffered by humanity."

By speaking of certain known developments under the alliance and saying that "others will be known at a more opportune time" the newspaper Il Piccolo obliquely suggested that secret activity between the Axis powers was under way.

An indication of close collaboration was the fact that German Minister of Communications Kleinman discussed with Italian officials the problems of the Italian-patroled railroad lines running from the Danube through Yugoslavia to Italy.

Many observers were expecting an Italian move in the Mediterranean or the Balkans.

This country was in any case prepared to defend itself on the French frontier behind the new Littorio Line fortifications, built into a rocky ridge of the Alps at an altitude in some places of 8,000 feet.

Defenses against air raids are reported to have been strengthened in the regions around Turin and in industrial centers near the French frontier.

There were rumors—without confirmation—that Premier Mussolini, to whom the world looks for some signal in the European war, might speak next Friday on the occasion of the twenty-fifth anniversary of Italy's entrance into the last war.

An Italian move is widely expected but the zone of the action, whether in the Balkans or along the French frontier, is a matter of speculation.

Among the day's press comment was this in Milan's sober Corriere Della Sera:

"Italian nonbelligerency has not been contradictory to the terms of the (Axis) pact; it has been an application of them. Now it will have applications of another kind."

By the United Press

Rome, May 22.—Premier Mussolini was rumored tonight almost to have doubled his revisionist demands in the Mediterranean and North Africa.

These increased demands were said to envision the probability of complete control of Tunisia, whereas Mussolini would have been satisfied earlier with a special status for Italians there.

Previous demands with regard to the Suez Canal were believed to have been limited to an equal share with Britain and Frnace in stockholders' bonds. Today the aspiration seemed to be virtual domination of the canal, possibly shared with Germany.

Insistence that Djibouti be made a free port was said to have been stepped up to Italian control of all French Somaliland.

Quit Djibouti, Britons Urged

London, May 22 (AP).—British subjects have been advised to leave Djibouti, Reuters (British news agency) said tonight. Djibouti, in French Somaliland, is the only rail outlet to the sea for Italian Ethiopia.

Talk on Far East

Dr. William Crane Johnstone, of George Washington University, will deliver the fifth of a series of seven weekly public lectures on the Far East at George Washington University at 8:15 tonight. His subject will be, "Foreign Rights in the Far East."

Rotterdam Razed After Surrender

"recalled" and how many attacked is not definitely known. It is suggested, however, by German military officials that the havoc was wreaked by 27 planes in 9½ minutes. Those dive bombers which carried out the original orders did a thorough, accurate job. They devastated and reduced to ashes the wide area they attacked without at all damaging the streets in most places.

The entire central section of the city situated on the north bank of the Maas was affected. All buildings flanking the river on the north bank were destroyed. Today they are still smoldering and in some places still burning.

Everywhere are steel girders twisted by powerful explosives into fantastics shapes. Broken glass, crumbled and scarred concrete, half-felled walls, penetrating stench and decay, combine in making central Rotterdam a picture of ruin and desolation.

It is not known how many civilians lost their lives in the holocaust—perhaps it never will be known. A German officer estimated the number at "several" thousand, while Dutch sources place the figure at between 10,000 and 15,000.

Later German figures given us declared 300 persons were killed and 365 wounded, while 6,000 had been evacuated into the country before the attack began. The destruction was so terrible foreign correspondents who observed it doubt whether a wholly accurate figure can ever be calculated.

The explanation of the bombing of Rotterdam is available for the present only in the German version. According to this version, the Dutch forces allegedly erected barricades and occupied buildings on the north bank of the Maas with the object of preventing the Germans from crossing the bridge there.

In modern warfare, the German officer explained, there are no longer "open" and "fortified" cities, but merely "undefended" or "defended" cities. Rotterdam, he asserted, was "defended," and, he added, modern warfare demands that wherever there is resistance it must be broken with all the means possible.

By taking up positions within the city, the Germans declare, the Dutch exposed themselves and their city to this fate.

We drove through ruins which are patrolled by armed Dutch police.

On Coolsingle street, tall buildings which had mostly housed banks and reputable business concerns had been reduced to street-level. The Telegraph Building, as well as a brand-new modern 12-story apartment house, unscathed excepting for broken windows, were almost the only upright buildings in the vicinity. Small canals in the sector were filled with debris and broken bits of furniture and household furnishings.

Senate Votes Defense Program, 74-0

listed strength by 25,000, $22,238,000 for adding 9,000 Marines and $6,000,000 for increasing the range of the big guns on the battleships New York, Texas and Arkansas.

Chairman Byrnes said the additional $100,000,000 cnotractual authority will go for aviation expansion and includes the purchase of 1,735 training planes.

Recalled for Boost

The naval bill previously had been passed by both the Senate and House and was recalled from a conference committee so the emergency funds could be inserted. It carries $955,755,478 in cash and about $30,000,000 in contractural authority under the regular 1941 estimates.

To this has been added emergency funds totaling $472,776,000, of which $338,776,000 is in cash and the remainder contractual authority. For expanding naval aviation, including the purchase of 2,535 training planes and establishing flying schools at Corpus Christi, Tex., Jacksonville and Miami, there is allowed $100,000,000 in cash and a like amount in contractual authority.

For speeding up the shipbuilding program, paying for overtime, providing additional facilities, etc., a total of $100,000,000 is allowed. A lump sum fund of $68000,000, half in cash, for President Roosevelt to spend as he sees fit—part of the so-called "blank check" and $50,000,000 for a variety of purposes, makes up the remainder of the emergency outlay.

The latter, officials say, will go for purchasing anti-submarine nets to protect harbors, placing armor on planes, installing self-sealing gas tanks, and purchasing other arms. The additional men provdied under the comittee action will give the sea service a strength of 170,000 sailors and 34,000 Marines. Funds are allowed for full arms and equipment for the new men.

More for Bases

In voting the naval aviation expansion bill, the House Naval Affairs Committee added $10,000,000 for building Naval Reserve flying bases and $10,000,000 for auxiliary landing fields. This action brought the total for naval air bases to $143,132,000. A deficiency appropriation will be asked for starting these bases before adjournment.

The military supply bill would increase the Regular Army to the full peace-time strength of 280,000, provided weapons and essential equipment for a war-time Army of 1,000,000 men, and permit 2,566 airplanes to be gought. All but 329 of these would be training planes to get the huge air training program underway.

The total includes $1,500,024,968 in casn and $323,229,636 in contractual authority for both regular and emergency needs. Army and Navy appropriations together run next year's defense outlay to $3,282,011,352, not counting additional supplemental requests which are expected to swell the total to about $3,500,000,000.

Under the Sheppard bill approved by the Senate Military Affairs Committee, existing limits on planes, reserve pilots and flying cadets would be suspended during the fiscal year, 1941. Statutory limits on costs of buildings and bidding requirements likewise would be lifted and Civil Service rules waived in hiring workers.

Amendments Rejected

In passing the big Army supply bill, the Senate voted down, 59 to 15, a proposal of Senator Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut, that one out of every three warplanes produced in the United States be retained for the Army and Navy instead of being shipped abroad. An amendment of Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, to set up a council of national defense likewise was defeated, 48 to 22.

The President's request for funds to study rubber production in the Americas, said it is indicated that production may be expected in Central and South America, besides "apparently good possibilities in the warmer parts of Florida and the Gulf coast."

Bethesda Barman Freed in Alleged Sale to Drunk

Charges of selling to an intoxicated person against Willie Smith, colored, proprietor, and Seabury Holmes, colored, bartender, of a beer establishment on River road, Bethesda, Md., were dismissed Tuesday by Trial Magistrate Donald A. DeLashmutt in Rockville (Md.) Police Court.

Judge DeLashmutt ruled that the beer law requires the bartender to have been aware that the purchaser is unfit for further use of intoxicants and that whether bystanders saw the purchaser was drunk has not bearing in the case. He dismissed the charges, stating: "The evidence in this case does not show that the purchaser did anything within sight of the bartender to put him upon notice that the man was intoxicated."

The case had been removed from the court of Trial Magistrate James C. Christopher at Bethesda, who acquitted Smith of selling beer across the bar on Sunday.

Yugoslav, Greece Conceal Warplanes at Secret Fields

Hope to Avoid Fate of Polish Planes; Rumania Calls Up 300,000 Reservists, Sends Most of Them to Soviet Frontier

Belgrade, May 22.—Yugoslavia and Greece, it was disclosed tonight, have removed their warplanes from military airports lest their air forces be destroyed in a sudden outbreak of war, as was the Polish air fleet last September.

The two countries are reported to have removed their fighting planes to secret fields amply protected by heavy clumps of trees for camouflage.

Bucharest, May 22 (AP).—Rumania today called up 300,000 reservists and sent most of them to the Soviet frontier, in a virtual general mobilization which reflected fears that the Russian army might move soon on the Rumanian province of Bessarabia.

It was an action which brought this oil-rich kingdom's defenses to what the general staff called "the highest state of preparedness."

Some observers claimed to see in it an indication of deterioration of Russia's 9-month-old friendship with Germany. They insisted the Rumanian strengthening of the frontier was carried out with the approval, if not the counsel, of Germany.

Bessarabia was Russian before 1918.

King Carol followed up his call to the colors with a proclamation demanding that the nation "work strenuously and hold steadfastly to its patriotic duty."

He cancelled celebrations scheduled for June 8, commemorating the tenth anniversary of his enthronement, declaring the money would be better spent on guns to defend Rumania's frontiers.

The story behind the reinforcement of the Bessarabian frontier, as told by certain informants here, goes back to the Russo-German agreement made in August, in the last days of an uneasy peace.

At that time, they said, the Germans were understood to have told Russia she could have Bessarabia any time.

Kremlin Fears Hitler

Success of the Nazi blitzkreig in the west, it was declared, led Russian diplomacy to fear that Germany might renege—might even turn on the Soviet for the fulfillment of Adolf Hitler's dream of a German Ukraine.

Russian diplomats have freely expressed the fear here.

Rumanian official quarters point to the large numbers of German troops recently concentrated in Slovakia, expressing belief that they are there to encourage Rumania to resist if Russia moves.

Soviet troop concentrations on the Rumanian border are reported in military quarters to have been heavily reinforced in the last few days.

Lifeboat Race Features Maritime Day Celebration

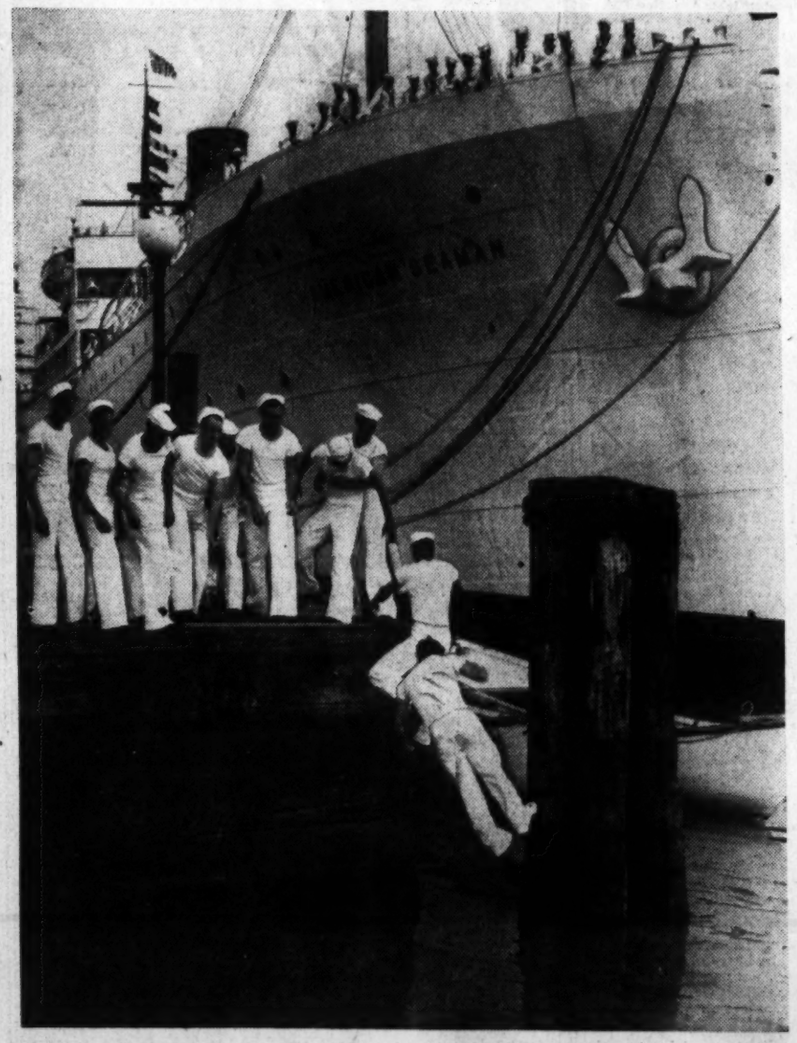
FINISH OF LIFEBOAT RACE ON ANACOSTIA RIVER. CADETS OF "AMERICAN SEAMAN" CHEER THEIR FELLOW CREWMEN ON FROM DECK OF TRAINING SHIP.



PHILIP FRITTS, COXSWAIN OF THE WINNING CREW, IS THROWN INTO THE DRINK BY HIS CREW. IT WAS NOT IN KEEPING WITH THE TRADITION, HOWEVER, THAT LEO TOMOSKY SHOULD FALL IN AFTER HIM

With the number of spectators restricted to a guest list of 300 by Navy Yard rules against admittance of the public, National Maritime Day was observed yesterday aboard the training ship American Seaman.

Officials of the U. S. Maritime Commission, Treasury and Coast Guard and members of Congress formed the majority of the guests, who were treated to a lifeboat race, a concert by the Navy Band, four brief speeches and a luncheon prepared and served by the CCC youths who comprise the ship's crew.

"The crucial battle now being waged in Europe," said Senator Claude Pepper of Florida, "will decide the fate of our merchant ships, for service on which these young men about us are being prepared.

"If the forces of brutality, criminality and barbarism are victorious, our merchant fleet will rot upon the seas. Let us pray God to keep ours a world of free trade and free enterprise."

Max O'Rell Truitt, member of the Maritime Commission, recalled that the occasion commemorated the 121st anniversary of the Savannah's departure for Liverpool, England, on the first steam crossing of the Atlantic.

Pointing out that the United States is now turning out merchant vessels at a rate of nearly one a week, he said:

"In such times as these, we cannot overlook the fact that each of these merchant vessels is a potential auxiliary to our national defense, in which the efficient training of the men to man these vessels is a vital factor."

He commended the American Seaman's crew, CCC enrollees aged from 18 to 23 and none of whom had been at sea more than six months, as "industrious, capable young men contributing their intelligence, zeal and energy in this work to fit them for their chosen careers."

Representative Peterson, of Florida, pledged cooperation of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, of which he is a member, in strengthening the American merchant marine. Commander W. N. Derby, chief of the U. S. Maritime Service, stressed that the crew of 350 CCC youths represents every section of the country.

The lifeboat race, final event of the program, was won by a crew whose ten oarsmen represent seven States. With Philip L. Fritts, Maritime Service quartermaster as coxswain, the boys led five other boats over the seven-eighths-mile course.

Gen. Anderson, World War Officer, Dies

Funeral Services To Be Saturday; Burial in Arlington

Funeral services for Brig. Gen. Edward D. Anderson, 72, United States Army, retired, member of the Army General Staff during the World War, will be at 11 a. m. Saturday, in Gawlers Chapel, 1750 Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Gen. Anderson died yesterday at Walter Reed Hospital. He had been there since March 31.

Service in the Spanish-American War, the Philippine insurrection and Gen. Pershing's 1916 Mexican campaign, as well as the World War, preceded his retirement in 1921 after 40 years of service.

Native of Tennessee

He was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for "initiating and executing plans for mobilization of enlisted personnel" in the World War and the silver star for gallantry at Santiago, Cuba, in 1898.

Born in Tennessee, January 22, 1868, Gen. Anderson was appointed to the United States Military Academy and graduated in 1891. He served in the Philippines from 1899 to 1901, from 1903 to 1905 and from 1909 to 1911.

In the World War he was detailed as observer with the British and French armies in 1917. Later he was chairman of the equipment committee of the War Department General Staff, and chief of the operations branch of the operations division of the War Department General Staff.

War College Instructor

He served in Washington as a student officer at the War College from August, 1915, to April, 1916. From August, 1916, to May, 1917, he was an instructor at the War College.

He was a member of the Chevy Chase Club and the Army and Navy Club here, as well as the University Club in New York.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Adelaide E. Anderson, of 2636 Woodley place northwest; a sister, Mrs. Jack Montgomery, of Chattanooga, Tenn., and two sons, Edward Ewen Anderson and C. Milton Anderson, both of New York City.

Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Oriental Shrine Elects Mrs. Duval As High Priestess

Mrs. George Duval, of Alexandria, Va., yesterday was elected grand high priestess of the Oriental Shrine of North America, at a meeting at the Mayflower Hotel.

Mrs. Duval and other new officers last night greeted more than 400 members at a banquet at the Mayflower.

Other new officers include: Mrs. Edward Holland, of Dayton, Ohio, grand princess; Mrs. Charles Hartung, of Toledo, Ohio, grand recorder; Mrs. Elizabeth Robishaw, Cleveland, Ohio, grand treasurer, and Mrs. Goldie Edmonston, grand associate princess, Columbus, Ohio. All new officers will be installed at a meeting at the Mayflower at 8 o'clock tonight.

Women Organize To Shoot 'Chutists

Copyright by New York Times

New York, May 22.—Aroused by the report of the tactics of German parachute troops behind the lines in Holland and Belgium, a group of 50 women met here today to organize an anti-parachute rifle corps "in case any such thing should ever come our way."

Mrs. Edna L. Johnston, of Freehold, N. J., acting regional director of the National Legion of Mothers of America, an organization which she says has 2,000,000 members, headed the group and acted as spokesman for it.

"We want to train our women, as many as will enroll, to help in national defense," she said. "We want to be ready, to do the ground work now, just in case——"

The plan is to make the group a national one, with posts throughout the country. Mrs. Kathleen Norris, the novelist, is national chairman.

viso in the relief bill now before House which would cut off all WPA funds for radio.

The Commissioner made no reference to these agencies. He suggested, however, that in mobilizing communication work under his plan, business, Government and education would work together in a "frontal attack on ignorance and inertia."

"Several times each year a major issue, a number one problem comes to the top of the pile of innumerable public matters," he said. "At such a time, machinery hould be at hand to mobilize the thinking power of the Nation and focus it steadily on the issue at hand until we are sure that the vast majority of us know what is involved."

Suggests Publishers Take Lead

Studebaker suggested that the American Newspaper Publishers Association might take the lead in starting a program of "cooperation for civic education." He proposed that the publishers enlist other groups to set up a committee on communications and public affairs.

The committee, he said, might name a nonpartisan and representative board of experts to canvass major public issues, and plan ways to hit one at a time, for one month or two months, with every communication weapon. Libraries would be called in to marshal literature on the selected topic.

Problems which might be chosen for the national study sessions, he suggested, would include unemployment, American foreign policy, the national debt, national defense.

No Frontal Attack on Problem

The question of unemployment, he said, has been mulled over for ten years in thousands of speeches, books, articles, conferences, "without ever being made the subject of a frontal attack by all the forces of enlightment at one time."

"I for one am getting tired of having a smattering of the problem dished up month after month," said Studebaker. "I'd like to see us as a nation dig into this vital matter, surround the issue, really grapple with it."

While making clear that he took unemployment as only one example, Studebaker said that for this and other problems, "delay in a swiftly moving world is obviously dangerous."

"If a democratic society cannot use its machinery to answer such issues relatively well, the people who are the victims of the situation will in desperation follow a demagogue who promises to do it dictatorially."

Troops 'Holding at All Points' as Arras and Abbeville Are Retaken in Counter-Attacks, French Say

into the French line, but the spokesman said the main contact remained along the Somme and Aisne rivers and the Escout (Scheldt), running north into Belgium.

Much of the great battleground was soggy from yesterday's rain and mechanized troops were meeting difficulties.

French spirits rose with Allied successes and the military spokesman declared:

"Even the rumors are better today."

He referred particularly to rumors—not confirmed—that Amiens and Sedan had been retaken.

He declared there had been "hardly any change" along the front in 48 hours, but said Gen. Maxime Weygand, the Allied commander in chief, was "really satisfied."

He added that there had been heavy fighting, with results unknown, during the day between Valenciennes and Cambrai.

German exploring parties crossed the Somme at some points, the spokesman said, but were quickly rounded up and there was no mass passage over the river.

Some German scouting parties also were said to have progressed west of Arras toward the channel.

Winston Churchill, the British prime minister, conferred here during the day with Premier Reynaud and General Weygand. Many persons believed that when the two forces like Weygand and Churchill met some sort of bold counterstroke might be expected.

Premier Reynaud, after conferring with Churchill, received U. S. Ambassador William Bullitt.

Hourly over the national radio was repeated this message from General Weygand:

"I am full of confidence if each man does his duty with a fierce energy!"

In an effort to present proof that the German drive in northern France had not cut communications between the French Army and the Allied forces operating in Belgium, the Ministry of Information declared Weygand had conferred with the chiefs of the Franco-Belgian commands in the north.

The Somme-Aisne line gave the Allies their first firm positions since the Germans broke through the Meuse front last week.

The line, running from west to east through Amiens, Laon and Rethel roughly 75 miles north of Paris, was designed primarily to prevent any new German drive deeper into France.

The bulk of the German forces were reported in the Cambrai sector 75 miles from the Channel, in their thrust west, and in the Neufchatel sector just above the Aisne in their push south.

French military dispatches acknowledged that Rethel was occupied by the Germans, but said they had been unable to cross the Aisne at Rethel or any other point.

Among the day's declarations by the Ministry of Information was that the bridges of the Somme had been destroyed to bar a further German thrust to the south.

Thus, said a military spokesman, to cross the river the Germans would need to bring up much heavier forces than now seemed at hand.

[Destruction of the bridges also indicated that the French plan no major operations to the north along the line of the Somme, the New York Times said.]

The Germans were described flatly as having been "chased out" of Abbeville, which is but 12 miles from the English Channel.

Of Arras—where 132,000 British fell before the city was taken on May 5, 1917—a communique said:

"Enemy pressure continued in the direction of the coast, taking the form of raids carried out by small motorized detachments. Arras is now in our hands."

French morale was the concern not only of Gen. Weygand but of Premier Reynaud.

If France could but hold out for one month, he told the people, she would be "three-quarters of the way to victory."

"And," he added, "France will hold for whatever time is necessary.

"The civil population must not let themselves be panicked by the raids of German motorized troops similar to the cavalry raids of previous times, and whose audacity can cost them dearly.

400,000 NATIONAL DEFENSE EXPERTS!

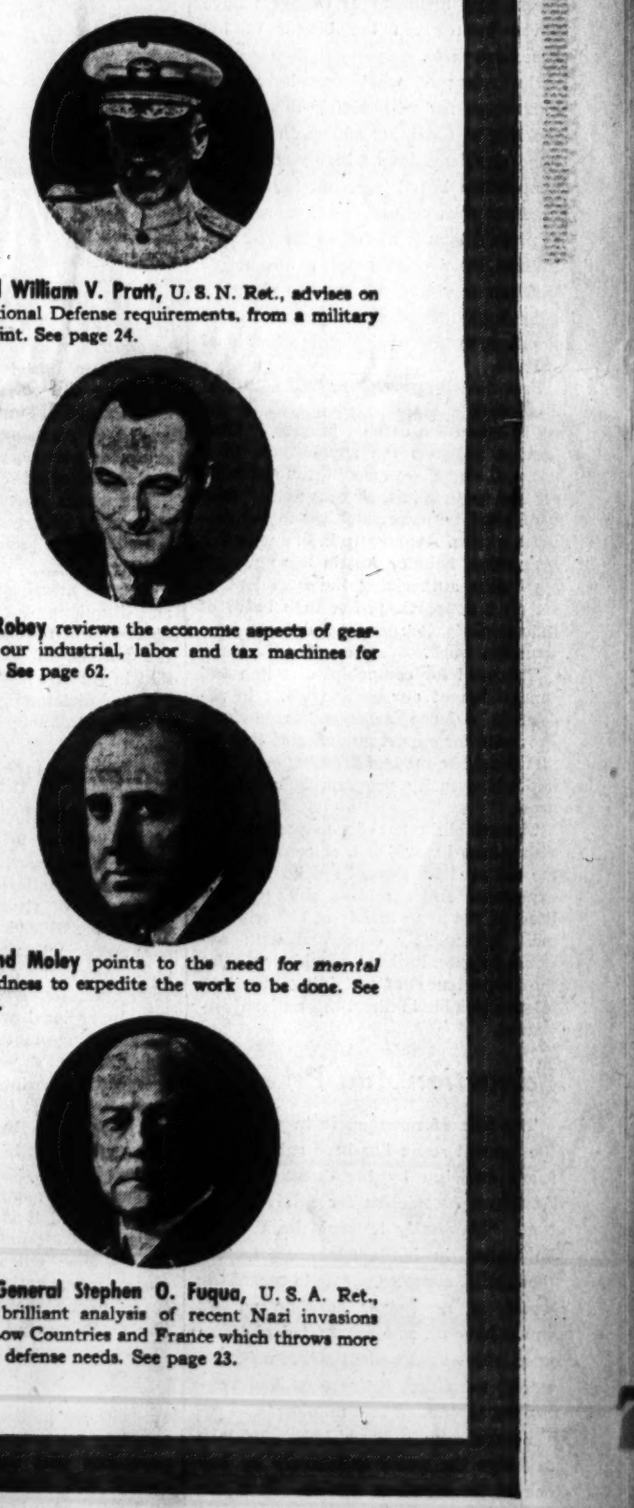
ALMOST OVER NIGHT, National Defense has become the burning issue of the moment. America is united behind the thesis that we must be prepared to defend our way of life in the difficult days that may lie ahead.

But the production of needed weapons for defense demands a clear understanding of our defense requirements; a close scrutiny of men, of methods and of machinery . . . a scrutiny such as is available to the more than 400,000 families who are reading today's NEWSWEEK!

NEWSWEEK turns the white light of authority on vital phases of National Defense problems . . . by presenting the significance of every important development. These significant paragraphs that follow each story, result from the combined efforts of NEWSWEEK's 80 editors and writers working within the framework of NEWSWEEK's unique editorial formula of accurate news reporting, background and interpretation.

Then NEWSWEEK adds the signed opinions of famous authorities who are staff members. Admiral William V. Pratt, U.S.N. Ret., writes pungently on the military aspect of our defense; Ralph Robey considers defense from an economic standpoint—the strategy of specifically raising as well as spending the money, while Raymond Moley presents the need for mental preparedness: Further, Major-General Stephen O. Fuqua, U.S.A. Ret., throws more light on our defense needs by his brilliant analysis of the recent Nazi invasions of the Low Countries and France.

No wonder NEWSWEEK readers are the best informed group in America on every aspect of National Defense—as on all other vital topics of the day!



Admiral William V. Pratt, U. S. N. Ret., advises on our National Defense requirements, from a military standpoint. See page 24.

Ralph Robey reviews the economic aspects of gearing up our industrial, labor and tax machines for defense. See page 62.

Raymond Moley points to the need for mental preparedness to expedite the work to be done. See page 68.

Major-General Stephen O. Fuqua, U. S. A. Ret., gives a brilliant analysis of recent Nazi invasions of the Low Countries and France which throws more light on defense needs. See page 23.

Advice On Defense

Before the European war broke out President Roosevelt recognized the need for expert advice on the mobilization of American industrial strength for defense purposes. He created the War Resources Board, headed by Edward R. Stettinius, president of the United States Steel Corporation. Most of the other members were distinguished industrial leaders or experts in the field of industrial organization.

The public has never had an opportunity to judge the effectiveness of the work done by this board. Its final report, submitted last November, appears to have gone into a secret pigeonhole. Only a few days ago Senator Vandenberg protested that members of Congress have never been given the benefit of the board's counsel.

Regardless of what may have been the reason for withholding this report, the idea of obtaining advice on our national problems from a highly competent nonpartisan board is sound. Indeed, the need for such counsel is far more acute at present than it was when the War Resources Board was created. An agency of this sort would be particularly useful in adapting industrial plants, machinery and practices to the requirements of national defense.

President Roosevelt has indicated that some sort of expert group will be set up to speed the defense program. Gov. Landon suggests the appointment of a national council—"a small group of leaders and experts in their own fields," who would not be mere satellites to the Administration. Apparently in line with this suggestion, Senator Austin has proposed legislation authorizing the President to set up a nonpartisan, five-man board of industrialists to speed up defense construction work.

The need for competent direction and supervision of our sudden effort to accelerate defense measures is obvious. Provision for expert guidance of this effort should be made a definite part of the national security program before Congress.

The establishment of a nonpartisan advisory board would not, of course, obviate the need for men of special training, experience and executive ability at the head of the departments of Government most immediately concerned with national defense. Rather it would emphasize the importance of obtaining the best talent available to direct this national endeavor.

Education And Press

The role of newspapers in mirroring the current scene has been subjected to sharp criticism by the director of the American Association for Adult Education. "Manifestly it would be absurd," he writes in his annual report, "for thoughtful, educated people to regard the world, as newspaper headline writers would have us, as a constricted platform upon which strut a small cast of principal actors, mouthing their parts and controlling the drama as it unfolds."

Beyond dispute, it would be a mistake to judge the world exclusively by any one of its countless aspects. It is the duty of the headline writer to chronicle the doings of that small cast of principal actors just as it is the duty of the sociologist, for example, to watch and interpret the changes among great bodies of people. Newspapers are not sociological surveys, but sociologists have found them useful. Nor are newspapers history books, but historians have found them indispensable.

The Adult Education Association, too, has its place which no one will deny it. The report wisely outlines and restricts the association's own field. Time has disposed, the director holds, of the movements to educate for "social change" and "social action."

He suggests that education "tends to follow the trends of social change rather than to lead them," and goes so far as to maintain that "the schoolmaster . . . is neither temperamentally nor by training fitted primarily, in most cases, for political leadership." By this recognition, if it becomes general, educators will have taken a long step toward finding their true place in our national life.

Parliament Signs Off

In less than three hours yesterday both Houses of Parliament passed, and the King approved, legislation which gives the Churchill administration frankly dictatorial powers.

In the words of Clement Attlee, who piloted the measure through the House of Commons, it furnishes the government "complete control over persons and property—not only over some persons, but over all persons, rich or poor." Mr. Attlee further informed the House that under the new law the cabinet will be able to govern indefinitely without the aid or even the existence of Parliament.

This wholesale surrender of democratic rights is a clear indication of the magnitude of the crisis now confronting Great Britain. Only extreme peril could force the elected representatives of the British people thus to abandon precious liberties which it has taken centuries to establish. Only a national emergency of the gravest character would force Parliament to pay Hitler the sincerest form of flattery which was accorded him yesterday.

For the new Emergency Powers Law in Great Britain, authorizing the government to confiscate profits, draft workers for state enterprises, conscript wealth, take over the banks and eliminate all protective labor standards, is of course an imitation of the Nazi system. As much was admitted by the appeal of the government leaders for a supporting vote which would show Hitler that Parliament, as well as the Nazi Reichstag, can be an efficient instrument in time of war.

The pathos of it is that the Reichstag, in Hitler's opinion, became an efficient instrument only when it voted to surrender all powers into the hands of the Nazi dictatorship. In Mein Kampf the Fuehrer called the Reichstag the "gravedigger of the German nation." And he concluded that "half measure and weak was everything that in any way was subject to the influence of this parliament."

The British government, evidently, has now come to much the same conclusion. In a period of grave emergency it has followed Hitler's lead by asking Parliament to abandon all thought of legislative control over the executive. Thus the war ceases to be a conflict between democratic and authoritarian ideas, and becomes a test of which authoritative system can in the test produce the greater power and efficiency.

In Great Britain, of course, this surrender of parliamentary control is regarded as a temporary, emergency measure. By Hitler it is deemed, for Germany, a permanent transition. What was acclaimed as progress in the Reich is admitted to be retrogression in Great Britain.

But the moral is none the less tragic and disquieting for that distinction. The difference in approach does not disguise the portent in Parliament's admission that in the test fire must be fought with fire, and dictatorship must be established to confront dictatorship.

Balanced Preparedness

President Roosevelt has properly used his veto power to prevent the energies of the War Department from being diverted from national defense to the improvement of rivers and harbors. By vetoing the $109,985,450 rivers-and-harbors authorization bill he has once more underscored the fact that security for the United States is at present our most pressing national problem.

One telling point is sufficient to justify the President's veto. "Regardless of every other consideration," he wrote, "it seems to me that the nonmilitary activities of the War Department should give way at this time to the need for military preparedness." An equally powerful argument was available to the President, however, and it is unfortunate that he did not make pointed use of it.

At a time when additional vast increases in our national debt are being incurred to enhance the security of the Nation, curtailment of nonessential expenditures becomes imperative. It is true that this was not an appropriations bill. It merely authorized the spending of nearly $110,000,000 in the future. But this is certainly not a time even to create expectations that the stream of Federal money will continue to flow, without abatement, into projects of this sort.

The President's rejection of this bill is significant chiefly because it suggests the enormous influence he could wield in eliminating unnecessary expenditures. His aid is needed to prevent the enactment of costly pensions legislation and the granting of extravagant subsidies to numerous groups. Specifically, the President ought to veto the agricultural supply bill, which is loaded with controversial subsidies, some of which were not even included in the swollen executive budget. Congress could properly be asked to reexamine these and similar proposed outlays on the ground that Federal funds must now be diverted to more urgent national requirements.

The United States will not be prepared to face any prolonged emergency until it puts its own fiscal house in order. No one should be naive enough to suppose that an increase in our military equipment plus a continued drift toward bankruptcy will add up to national strength. The weakness of our fiscal policy ought to be attacked with the same vigor that is being displayed in providing new defensive weapons.

The President's current veto message comes as a reminder that he can give powerful leadership to the movement toward retrenchment for safety's sake. That leadership should be quickly extended to avoid a gross lack of balance in our preparedness efforts.

Airplane Deliveries

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has given short shrift to the proposal of Senator Pepper that the United States sell Army and Navy planes to the Allies in exchange for aircraft now on order here. The measure was pigeonholed yesterday by a vote of 12 to 1.

In support of his plan Senator Pepper argues that "the success of the Allies is of vital importance to us." A rapidly increasing majority of Americans agree with him, which is why opposition to "measures short of war" on behalf of the Allies is so quickly diminishing. But Senator Pepper's proposal goes beyond that limitation. He would, in effect, place Governmental war material at the disposal of the nations fighting Germany. That would be a war measure rather than a measure short of war. Nor would it, disregarding this very serious criticism, serve the intended purpose.

In a statement regretting the action of the committee, Senator Pepper explained that his resolution merely authorized the President to deliver to the Allies certain older airplanes. In lieu of planes approaching obsolescence, the Senator explains, our Army and Navy would obtain planes that are now being built under contract for the Allies, "the latest and newest in type."

It is questionable whether this exchange would be of any great practical benefit to the Allies. More beneficial would be an increase in the flight deliveries of these new bombers. But regardless of this, the Pepper resolution overlooks the fact that the United States is not a belligerent. If it seems desirable for this country to enter the war the decision should be reached in a straightforward manner, and not through any backdoor maneuver.

The action of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in voting down the Pepper proposal is a healthy indication that Congress has its feet firmly on the ground and is not disposed to let hysteria affect its thinking.

Aliens And Justice

The transfer of immigration and naturalization functions from the Department of Labor to the Department of Justice, which President Roosevelt has asked Congress to approve, appears to be primarily motivated by defense considerations.

"The startling sequence of international events," said the Chief Executive in a message transmitting his fifth departmental reorganization plan, "has necessitated a review of the measures required for the Nation's safety." He added that while the plan is "designed to afford more effective control over aliens, this proposal does not reflect any intention to deprive them of their civil liberties or otherwise to impair their legal status."

Those who will be entrusted with the administration of the transferred agencies would do well to keep this statement of principle in mind. The dangers to national safety that might result from acts of espionage and sabotage, by adherents of foreign governments illegally in this country, cannot be minimized. That danger must be guarded against, and the FBI is in a position to do so. But no good, and an irreparable amount of harm, would result from indiscriminate anti-alien activity similar to that which disgraced the Nation during and immediately after the last war.

Use For Spinach

From the Des Moines Register.

We see that a Drake University professor doubts the miraculous value of spinach as a food.

Hail! Hail!

We have always thought the advice we read some years ago in a medical journal was Solomon-like.

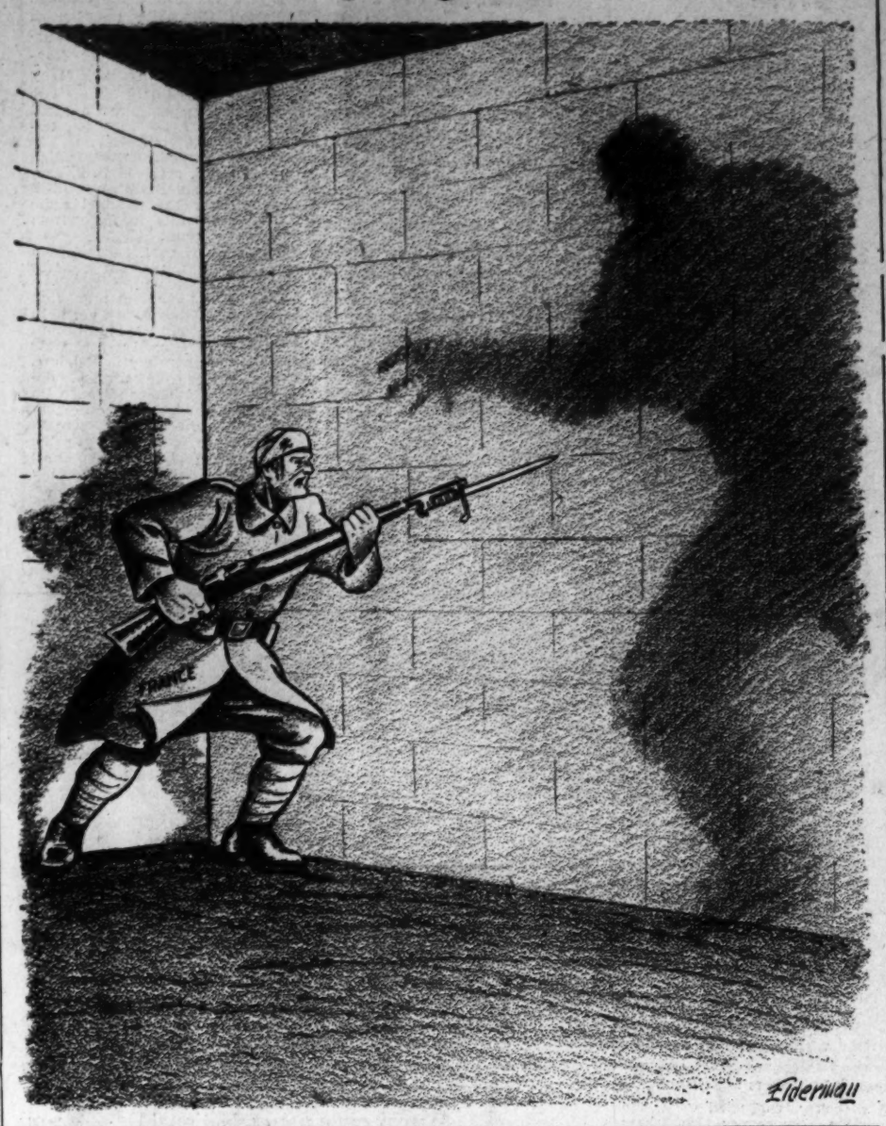
It said spinach was probably O. K., but that there was no reason for not feeding it to the cows and then drinking the milk.

It's a cockeyed world. With everything already going to pieces on all sides and in the middle, the University of California is spending a million dollars building a machine with which to smash atoms.

"The eyes, ears and throat are sympathetically connected," says a physician. This probably explains why so many things we see and hear these days give us a pain in the neck.

The stylishly dressed woman of today is an intensely interesting study in the delicate balancing of concealment and revelation.

Fighting Back



Letters On The War

All communications must carry the writer's name and address though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

Strong And Aloof

Thank God we have a Senate Naval Affairs Committee that has the courage to express the conviction that the American Nation will be safe if it builds up a strong Navy and remains aloof from the war in Europe. The Washington Post of May 16 carried a string of highly America First editorials, chief of which was the approval of General Pershing's conclusions on the American system of defenses and the war. Perhaps the American press is awakening to the fact that America is a good place to live in after all!—Frederick G. Frost, Washington.

Every Man's Task

The world must take its worst enemy, Adolf Hitler, or be troubled by him as long as he lives. There is no telling how much damage he may do. This is not the task of a few countries alone, but of every man on earth who values his freedom.—A. B. Cannady, Crescent City, Fla.

On Propaganda

The flood of British propaganda in the press is a disgrace. It ought to be unlawful for anyone openly to agitate for offensive war against any foreign power at peace with the United States. The people in this country are not affected hardly in the slightest degree by any war in Europe or in the world.—Carl A. Neibling, president, German League of the United States.

Would Curb Letters

It seems to me the time has come for papers to stop publishing letters such as appeared in The Post signed, "George S. Parker" and "O. J. W." Free speech and a free press do very well in their proper place, but at a time when our national existence depends upon the Allies, you are doing the country a poor service by passing on hatred and drivel. We lost the chance to save our souls when we let Munich pass—we may still have a chance to save our skins, but we shall lose that chance if our daily papers make themselves a medium for spreading hatred of England and encouraging people in thinking that there is no choice between Germany and Great Britain. People must be made to realize that our very existence demands all the help America can give the Allies—and quickly.—Mary M. Donnally, Washington.

Sidetrack Politics

I wish to propose a year's moratorium on politics. In this time of world crisis our country and her people and their representatives are faced with a problem too serious to waste time in petty political bickering. Postpone our national elections for one year and concentrate on world affairs—do so before we find ourselves in a condition where it will make no difference who is candidate or which party victorious.—M. G. H. Washington.

"Cannon Fodder"

As one member of the new crop of cannon fodder, may I wield the weapon that is mightier than the sword for a moment before I am handed the sword? We'll fight all right, though I've heard many of them say that they'd have to come and get them. When the time comes, we aren't afraid to do our duty. We're going to step up and lay our lives on the table, so isn't it only fair to have decent equipment for us to use? I want peace, but we can see at a glance that we can't have it unless everyone wants it. Hence, we have to play the other man's game, and the only way I want to play is to win.—Cannon Fodder, Washington.

Hitler An Open Book

In view of the growing tension due to the European war, it is imperative that our Senators and Representatives should understand the motives and theories which control Hitler's actions. A small appropriation by Congress for the purpose of buying a copy of "Mein Kampf" for each and every Congressman, and presenting the same to him, would, at least, insure the reading of this book by many of our more intelligent legislators. I dare not hope that a majority would avail themselves of the opportunity.

Columnists, editors and others constantly refer to Hitler as mad. If they had read his book, their understanding of the problem would be far better.

The German invasion of Norway, Belgium and Holland was a certainty to anyone who had read "Mein Kampf," and an invasion of the Balkans will follow just as surely when it suits Hitler's strategy.

Hitler is a completely unscrupulous man, but his lack of moral feeling in no way impairs his sanity. He simply goes 100 per cent on the principle that the end justifies the means.

This is no longer the time for our political leaders to call Hitler names, or write such futile requests as Roosevelt has done several times. If he was really familiar with Hitler's plan and principles, he would not have wasted his breath. Or could the President's letters and requests have been simply for political purposes here?

Given enough leaders acquainted with Hitler, exposure of his plans, theories, and lack of principles, perhaps this country will be prepared in time if the worst happens in Europe.—William M. Escher, Washington.

Russian Reliability

Russia and its reliability as an ally is being discussed. I can remember but one instance where she changed sides. During the Seven Years' War (1756-1763) she was Austria's ally against Frederick the Great. But at the death of Empress Elizabeth (1762) her successor, Czar Peter III, canceled the Austrian agreement and joined hands with the Prussian King. Shortly Peter was assassinated and the next ruler, Catherine the Great (Peter's widow), in turn voided this new understanding. But she didn't go back to the former alliance with Austria (Maria Theresa). She simply washed her hands of the whole business. And so Russia changed sides, but she didn't stay changed.

During the World War, as we all know, Russia early in 1917 stepped out, and I don't blame her. The country, up to that time had more than twice as many killed and wounded as the whole British Empire lost in the course of the whole war.

Great Britain's record in the Seven Years' War is decidedly shabby. Having been in close partnership with King Frederick for six years, she quit him cold just when he was at the height of his difficulties.—Fred Vetter, Washington.

Wants To Help

I listened to the President's speech in behalf of the fortification of our country and my heart went out hoping to help. Might we not, each individual mail to some one place a dime each to help finance this cause?—W. C. P., Washington.

Asks Unity

Hitler reckoned when planning his mass murder that the United States, the only nation he feared as an obstacle to his deviltry, would seemingly be disunited for several months during which time he could reach his objective. In other countries our pre-election campaigns, with many orators and near-orators spewing vituperations, must appear as preliminaries to internecine war, and Hitler has bet on such conditions absorbing the attention of American citizens during the summer of 1940. Let the delegates to the Republican National Convention assemble according to program, nominate Col. Frank Knox as their candidate for Vice President; then adjourn after adopting a one-plank platform pledging unity and American solidarity. In due season, when the Democratic National Convention is held, let the vote be immediate and unanimous—Franklin D. Roosevelt for President; standing on a platform similar to that framed by the Republicans. There is a place also for Thomas E. Dewey who, as Attorney General, can clean our Augean stables occupied by fifth-column reds, pinks and yellows. By all means Cordell Hull should continue service as Secretary of State. James Farley capably fills the office of Postmaster General.—Claude H. Wetmore, Washington.

"Mr. Dooley"

As Mr. Dooley might put it, were he here, "Fellers," sez the Gre-e-e-at Oppychumist, "just vote me that hundred million bucks and gwan home. Afther all, it's a mere trifle—a minor detail," sez he. "Ye don't have to hang around and watch me blow it," sez he, "I've done that before—here, and in Noo Yawk, when I ran that shtate—where, I'm not saying," sez he. "And I don't need anny help from a mariner to do it, ayether," sez he. "I was in the Navy meself, wanst for a shpell—in a manner of shpakin—not that I did it such a divvle of a lot of good, at the time," sez he. Of course, we must get busy right away quick and build up a husky tough defense—we need to do it badly. Too bad some of these leaf-raking billions hadn't been put to that purpose long ago. We might ask ourselves, too, if a man who has not gotten the country to rights, in the last, say five, comparatively normal years, when he had everything his own way, is the fellow to keep on the job when it looks as though crises are ahead.—E. N., Washington.

Housewife Speaks

There must be thousands of other mothers who have sons who are afraid that if this war lasts we can't keep out of it. Everyone knows that if Hitler is successful and conquers England, France, and takes over their possessions, we will have to fight to preserve our country from this terrible beast. It make us wonder why this country and Government are so lax in their protection of our people. They allow German bunds to congregate and have their members drilled so that when Hitler wants a country all he has to do is to come over and the country is his because he already has his key men in position ready for him. It seems to me that for our own protection and that of our country we should get together every known member of the bunds, and the other antidemocratic organizations and deport them.—Mrs. Manly B. Root, Leavenworth, Kans.

The Post Impressionist

Secret Weapon

It was in Paris, March, 1918. There had been a succession of still moonlight nights with the result that again and again the sirens had shrieked their warnings, and stiff with sleep we had climbed down from our warm beds to the cold cellar. It was about 3 a. m. on Saturday morning that I got back into bed for the last time, determined that no matter how many sirens screamed or bombs fell I was staying where I was even if it meant a sudden entrance into eternity. Therefore my feelings may be accurately guessed when I was awakened not by eerie wails but by a splintering explosion, and I opened my eyes to bright spring sunshine. It was just 7 o'clock.

"What now?" I thought in weary exasperation. It was obviously not a raid, for there had been no warning. An ammunition dump had blown up some weeks before, breaking half the windows in northern Paris and I began to wonder if the French were not getting rather careless about their munitions. Another explosion burst into the sunshine.

I leaped out of bed. Boiling in oil is too gentle a fate for anyone who wakes you up night after night, and then won't let you sleep by day, and I wished I were clever enough to think of a really adequate punishment for these German raiders. As I pulled on my clothes, again there came an explosion. By this time my anger was shot by bewilderment, for not a siren screamed, not an antiaircraft gun had spoken. Whatever was happening the top floor was probably not a safe place to be, so as most of my friends slept there, too, I felt I should do a Paul Revere and get them down to the cellar as quickly as possible.

I went knocking at doors while angry female voices responded with: "What on earth now?" "Don't tell me they're here again?" and harsher sentences. A red-eyed and tousled group met shortly in the lobby.

"The head waiter says we can't go into the dining room because it has a glass roof," one of us reported.

"This is too much," another shouted. "If the Germans are never going to let me sleep they aren't going to starve me as well, I want my breakfast."

Finally tables were pushed into the hall and we cheered ourselves as best we could with war bread and coffee. Outside the spring sun went on shining determinedly and the explosions continued with a like persistence. At last we noticed a curious characteristic: the shattering roars were coming at regular intervals. Rumors began to drift in to us. The Germans were sending over planes, one at a time, each dropping a single bomb and flying so high that no one could see them. Another informant said she had it on the best authority that the Germans had invented a balloon with a clockwork device to which a bomb was attached and as the balloons were wafted over Paris the bombs were released. We sat about in stunned bewilderment, afraid to go outdoors, but refusing to bury ourselves in the cellar.

After hours the explosions ceased and we all rushed out into the sunshine. The government, not knowing what to do, but feeling that some kind of gesture was expected, had ordered all the shops closed and the Metro to stop running. With a holiday dropped into their laps like that the French immediately seized it, and the Tuileries, the Champs Elysees, the terraces before the cafes, were thronged with people.

I had been asked to see an excellent French production of Shakespeare's "Antony and Cleopatra" to be given that afternoon. As I walked over to the Crillon to discuss with my hostess the possibility of our going I had to work my way through crowds of excited Parisians. There might have been a shadow of the unhealthy in their gayety, but unquestionably they were finding life just then intensely interesting.

I was extremely annoyed to discover that the government had extended its closing order to the theaters and our pleasant expedition was off. With my friend was another woman who was getting a rich enjoyment out of the situation.

"All day," she said, "I have been thinking of the abomination of desolation. We are in the midst of it. 'And woe to those who are with child, and to those who give suck in those days.'"

As my own baby's arrival was not far distant I was instantly filled with uneasiness lest she discover the uncanny aptness of her quotation. She was, however, much too occupied with savoring her emotions to pay much attention to me.

I had not been long back in my hotel when without any warning the periodical explosions began again. Once more we gathered in the lobby. Suddenly the front door burst open and a young woman who was secretary to the head of military intelligence came in.

"What do you think?" she cried. "The French say it is a gun, a gun firing on Paris and at least 60 miles away. Did you ever hear of anything so absurd? Our ordnance experts have definitely proved that no shell can carry more than 30 miles, because of friction and gravity, and—oh, I don't know what all. Well, it stands to reason. A gun! Imagine!"

But it was a gun after all, for that was the day Big Bertha first fired on Paris. LOUISE CRUICE.

Roosevelt's Foresight

By Mark Sullivan

Four Incidents

POLITICALLY President Roosevelt is going to gain by the war developments in Europe. He gains because, on this point, he had more foresight than most in America. For his rightness on one point, which turned out to be important and spectacular, he will gain more than this alone entitles him to. Always a prophet who turns out to be right is given credit for more than he actually did. Upon him the imaginative public places an aura of oracular infallibility. Even more than that, the public, seeing him as a paragon of prophecy, promptly thinks of him as a paragon in other respects. It is illogical; it frequently has unfortunate results. But it always happens.

Mr. Roosevelt's foresight (on this point) is proved by four conspicuous incidents.

Nearly three years ago, October 5, 1937, Mr. Roosevelt took notice of the aggression of Japan in China, of Italy in Ethiopia, and the preparations Germany was making. Without naming the nations, Mr. Roosevelt used the phrase "acts of aggression," and suggested "quarantine." "The peace-loving nations," he said, "must make a concerted effort in opposition to those violations of treaties . . ."

At once pacifists, isolationists and political opponents charged that Mr. Roosevelt wanted to "involve us in other nations' wars."

Again, in January, 1939, a new military plane, being tested in California, came down in a forced landing. Newsmen found that an occupant of the plane was a French military officer. This was told with a manner of sinister mystery uncovered. In a series of horrendous disclosures, it turned out that the French and British governments were buying planes in the United States. And that Mr. Roosevelt not only was aware, but had facilitated, the transaction.

FROM THIS AROSE new denunciation of Mr. Roosevelt, almost hysterical suspicion. Not only was he intertering in a prospective war abroad, not only trying to make us an ally of France and Britain, he was attempting it furtively. So angry was the outcry that Mr. Roosevelt became obviously timorous, acted almost like a person caught in a crime. His explanation was apologetic.

Again, in January, 1939, Mr. Roosevelt was quoted as saying, in a private talk with Congressmen, that America's first line of defense is in France. While he did not really quite say that, something much like that expressed the spirit of his position. So great was the outcry against such a notion that Mr. Roosevelt, in self-defense, denounced the alleged statement as a "lie."

Again, in August, 1939, as Congress was about to adjourn, Mr. Roosevelt asked leaders to keep Congress in Washington, so as to revise the neutrality law in a way which would give Britain and France opportunity to buy munitions in America. Mr. Roosevelt thought there would be war before Congress met again in January. Senator Borah tartly replied that his information was there would be no war. Congress went home without acting on the neutrality law. Within a month war came.

In these incidents, as it now turns out, Mr. Roosevelt was prophetically right, in the sense that he saw war was coming. So much all must admit. Not all, but a large number, now think he was right in an additional sense. Probably a majority of Americans, in the light of what has now happened, wish we had joined in some movement to quarantine aggressors. They wish more planes had been sold to the British and French. They wish we had changed our neutrality law earlier, and changed it much farther than we did in the direction of being helpful to France and Britain. They see that if Mr. Roosevelt had used the actual words "America's first line of defense is in France," he would have been right—it was precisely on the day Germany entered France that America recognized it must arm for defense.

MR. ROOSEVELT'S gestures toward intervention were mild. He never gave bold leadership to the idea. What made his gestures conspicuous was the denunciation of his critics—pacifists, isolationists, political opponents. They, with loud cries, fastened the term "interventionist" upon him. So far as people now wish we had intervened, Mr. Roosevelt now profits politically.

By a rule of politics almost as certain as one of physics, in proportion as Mr. Roosevelt went in one direction, his opponents went the opposite. In proportion as he suggested intervention, his opponents went toward isolation.

What is said here is limited strictly to the matter of intervention versus isolation.

On another point, related but quite different, there must be no confusion. On the matter of arming for defense, nothing said in this article applies. On arming for defense, Mr. Roosevelt's political opponents, specifically the Republicans, were always willing to go as far as Mr. Roosevelt. When he sent his defense measure to Congress, the Republicans indorsed it in a party conference. On passage there were only 15 votes against it in the House, only 8 in the Senate. Of the 8 only 4 were Republican.

On national defense, as distinguished from other policies about the war, the Republicans have supported Mr. Roosevelt, and have gone as far as he has.

Flight From St. Quentin

By Herbert Read

British Retreat: 1918

Herbert Read was an officer in the British Fifth Army during its famous retreat from St. Quentin in March, 1918. Because of its timely interest at this time an excerpt from Mr. Read's book "In Retreat," published in 1925, is here presented with the permission of the publishers, Faber & Faber.

WE RECEIVED the warning order just before dinner, and for awhile talked excitedly round the mess fire, some scoffing at the idea of an imminent battle, others gravely saying that this time at any rate the warning was justified. Two deserters, with tales of massing guns and the night-movement of innumerable troops, had reached our lines the previous day. Of course, deserters usually had some such tale designed to tempt a captor's leniency, but this time it was likely to be the truth. What else could the enemy's long silence mean? To that question we had no answer. We went early to bed, expecting an early awakening. The harnessed horses stood in lowered shafts.

There was scarcely a wall standing in Fluquieres; everywhere demolition and bombardment had reduced the village to irregular cairns of brick and plaster. Winding among these cairns were the cleared roadways. Men and horses rested in patched sheds and an occasional cellar. S. and I were in a small repaired stable, each with a bed-frame in a manger. I had livened the cleanly whitewashed walls of the place with illustrations from a colored magazine. That evening all save our trench-kit had been sent to the transport wagons, and we were lying on the bare netting with only our trench coats thrown over us.

FOR SOME TIME I was too excited to sleep, and none too warm. But weariness did at length triumph, and when, a short while afterwards, I was roughly awakened, I had become unconscious enough to forget the continuity of things.

Yes; suddenly I was awake. A match was being applied to the candle stuck on the bed-frame above my head. With his excited face illumined in the near candlelight, an orderly bent over me and shook my shoulders. I heard confused shoutings, and the rumble of gunfire. I had hardly need to read the message-form held out to me: "Man Battle Stations"—the code words I knew only too well, and all that they implied. I was shivering violently with the cold, but in the shaking candlelight I scribbled messages repeating the code to the company commanders, the transport officer, and to others. S. was moving on the other side of the wall that divided the mangers.

"We're in for it, my lad," he yelled, above the increasing din.

JUST THEN there was the sudden shrieking rush of a descending shell and its riotous detonation very near. Our candles jumped out, and we were in darkness, with bricks and earth falling like a hail on the roof. My servant came in, and hastily helped me to gather my equipment together. He handled the two or three books I always carried with me, asking me if I would take one in my pocket. I took Thoreau's Walden, because I had not yet read it, and anticipated two or three weary days of passive defense. For even if now we realized the actuality of the enemy's attack, so confident were we of our defensive system that we contemplated nothing more than a short successful resistance. When in the front line, we had ceaselessly reconnoitred all approaches, and so fine were the sweeping fields of fire that stretched away towards St. Quentin, so skillfully placed were our machine guns, that always we pitied the folly of the enemy should he assail a defense so deadly. We reckoned with one factor unseen.

I fixed my revolver and ammunition securely, and set out to the orderly room, some 500 yards away. It was now about 5 o'clock and still dark. I picked my way along a path which led across the great heaps of rubble. Shells were falling in the village. I still shivered with cold. My electric torch was nearly exhausted, so that I kept falling as I went. When I reached the orderly room, which was in a restored cottage, I found everything in a great hubbub, orderlies coming and going, the sergeant-major shouting orders. Inside, the doctor was bandaging a wounded man.

S., who had been assembling the headquarters staff, came to say that something terrible had happened to the Lewis team (at that time a Lewis-gun team was attached to each battalion headquarters): would I come round with my torch.

THEY HAD been sleeping, some six men, beneath tarpaulin sheets stretched across a half-demolished outhouse. A shell had fallen in the middle of them. In the weak glare of my torch, we saw a mangled mass of red brick-dust and of red glistening blood. Here and there we distinguished a tousled head of hair. One man, pinned beneath beams and brickwork, was still groaning. We quickly began to extricate him, but he died whilst we worked.

I then joined the colonel, and with one or two orderlies and the sergeant major we followed the companies along the back lane that led from Fluquieres to Roupy, a distance of about 1½ miles. The morning was cold and a heavy dew lay on the ground. As we walked the light of dawn began to reveal a thick wet mist.

At 6:05 I sent a message to the brigade, informing them that the battalion was in position. We had been shelled all along the way, and when we neared Roupy, the crossroads seemed to be under a continuous barrage. Nevertheless, we got into position with very few casualties. Safe in the bowels of the headquarters dugout, we thought the worst was over, and began casually to eat the tongue sandwiches and drink the tea provided by the mess corporal.

The dugout was new and spacious, and odorous of the fresh chalky earth. It was about 30 feet deep, and partitioned into three sections, of which the middle one was occupied by the headquarters officers. Because it was new it was unfurnished, and we had to squat on the bare floor, grouped round a few candles.

FOR ME that cavern is a telephonic nightmare. The instrument, a "D III converted," was placed on the floor in a corner of the dugout. Two signalers sat with their legs straddling round it. At first the companies, then the neighboring battalions, and, finally, the brigade, kept me there crouching on the floor, yelling till I was hoarse into the execrable instrument. When I was not speaking, the signalers were receiving or sending Morse messages.

Above the ground, the situation was disquieting. The thick mist of the early dawn persisted: a man 10 yards away could not be distinguished. The gunfire, tremendous in its intensity, continued hour after hour to pound into the invisible foreground. The earth vibrated almost hysterically. An occasional shell crashed near us, but after the first three hours (at 7:30) the enemy's fire seemed to be concentrated on our front-line defenses. No messages, telephonic or written, came to relieve our anxiety.

The gradual accumulation of our anxiety should be realized. Every minute seemed to add to its intensity. By 10 o'clock or so, our hearts were like taut drum skins beaten reverberantly by every little incident.

Then the skin smashed. Bodily action flickered like flame. The sense of duration was consumed away.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

America First

THE REPUBLICAN leaders could not talk as they have talked the past few days if they realized the extreme and immediate peril in which America has been placed. Apparently they are still under the impression that the question is whether we shall let our sympathy for the Allies lead us into the European war; apparently they still think that the question is whether Mr. Roosevelt is to get some kind of political advantage at home out of the catastrophe overseas. They are tragically mistaken. These are no longer the questions before the people.

There has been plenty of hysterical chatter in Washington and no doubt there are Democratic politicians, as there are Republicans who are thinking of their own political profit. But the profound anxiety of responsible and informed men in Washington—in the Navy, the Army, the State Department—is not sentimentality or hysteria. It arises from the knowledge that in the next few days choices may have to be made, decisions may have to be taken, issues may be forced upon us which involve directly and fundamentally our capacity to defend the elementary and vital interests of the United States.

THE FACT of the matter is that with the Allied army trapped in Flanders and Northern France, the British fleet is in immediate peril of being trapped as well. The British fleet is based on the British Isles and if England cannot be defended against the attack which will be launched against it, Hitler will capture the ships which are not sunk in attempting to repel the attack. He will then be master, not only of Europe, but of the Atlantic Ocean. For we have no navy in the Atlantic Ocean.

That is by no means all. There is an understanding between Italy and Japan. The officially sponsored pro-Japanese demonstration in Italy this week confirms what competent observers have long foreseen—namely, that if the citadel of British sea power in the British Isles was enveloped by Hitler, the Italians and the Japanese would move against the two other citadels, one in the Mediterranean and the other in the Far East. This movement may already have begun. The question before the United States at this moment is what it can do to prevent the surrender of the Allied fleets; for if they are surrendered, terms of peace will be imposed upon the United States as well as upon the Allies.

OUR OWN SITUATION is too grave for recrimination against those who refused to see the dangers of the situation. But only at extreme peril to the Nation's safety can they continue to stand aloof, refusing to take the trouble of informing themselves fully and of sharing as patriots the momentous responsibility of the decisions that will be forced upon this Nation in the next few days. It is high time that Senator Taft completed his political junket and returned to his post of duty in the national Capitol. Mr. Willkie should abandon his speech-making tour; he should not impair his high availability in these critical times by partisan agitation. Mr. Hoover and Governor Landon should come here and stay here, allowing no memories of 1932 and 1936 to divert them from their immediate duty to take a responsible part in the consultations which are now imperative. If they distrust the President's judgment, that is all the more reason why they should now take a patriot's part in steadying the President's judgment.

TO DO THAT they must do more than read the newspapers and listen to the radio, they must put themselves in continual touch with all the sources of information in the Government of the United States. For they must realize from their own experience that there are times when the Government cannot publish everything it knows without aggravating the very dangers it is seeking to avert. This is such a time. In such a time the people have a right to be able to feel that the information which cannot be shouted from the housetops is possessed by, and is guiding the judgment of, men whom they trust. No one trusts every public man. For that reason, regardless of the mechanical formula by which it is brought about, the representative leaders of the two parties must come together and take the decisions jointly. They would do that in time of war: the emergency which has developed during the catastrophe of this week is in all its implications and consequences to America as grave, if not more grave, than war itself.

LET NO ONE delude himself and others into thinking that this is just another and more exciting chapter in the long debate of the past two years as to whether the United States should help the Allies a little, a lot, or not at all. This is the opening chapter of a wholly different story in which it will not be for us to decide comfortably and at leisure what we shall do for others. The questions which we shall now have to decide will be forced upon us by the others—by the action of the Japanese and the Italians and by the situation which will exist if the Allies tell us that they are offered the choice between further resistance to a fearful attack and surrender of their fleets and their bases, and that they must know what we intend to do. If the Japanese move in the Pacific and if this question is put to us from Europe, our Government will have to make the most dangerous and difficult series of decisions it has ever had to make.

If in such a moment as this we cannot count unhesitatingly upon our leaders to put the country above their party and to put their conscience above their ambitions and their prejudices, then all the defenses for which we may appropriate money will not defend America.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

'Front For Thieves'

THE MAY 10 ISSUE of the Labor Union of Dayton, Ohio, which calls itself an official publication of the American Federation of Labor, prints a letter to Will Green, president of the A. F. of L., from the Summit County Trades and Labor Assembly.

This letter says the assembly has observed the "yellow journalism of Westbrook Pegler for some time," and argues that nobody has any right to expose graft and corruption in the racket unions of the American Federation of Labor who cannot prove that he has first criticized Richard Whitney for his thievery and publicized "the findings of the Temporary National Economic Committee investigating the shady practices of monopoly" and the report of the La Follette Committee.

"The affairs and problems of the labor movement are its own," the letter says. "Neither Pegler nor anyone outside that movement, having as their basic premise an antiunion bias, has any right to interfere."

The answer to this is that the American Federation of Labor is not the labor movement, but a front for panders, thieves, extortioners and thugs, who prey not only on employers and the United States Government but on the rank-and-file workers as well, reducing thousands of nominally free Americans to the status of subhuman robots who pay tribute to brigands for the right to toil, are not allowed to vote on union questions and risk terrible injury or death if they make so bold as to try.

THESE CITIZENS are now so furious at the abuse of their human rights by brutal grafters that they are almost up to the point of fighting it out with nickel ball bats. The answer is that the sins of Richard Whitney and Wall Street of monopoly and the labor spies employed by antiunion associations of employers have nothing to do with the case and have been used too long as a stall to distract attention of the dues-paying suckers from the merciless greed and inhuman cruelty of crooks holding key positions in the unions of the A. F. of L.

I have shown up a few spectacular criminals who acquired great power over the livelihood and the very lives of decent Americans, not merely in local unions, but in the national council of the American Federation of Labor, against whom not one word was ever said, either in the council or in the national convention of that body, although their rotten character and criminal records were notorious. But I haven't even started yet. I will show that the A. F. of L. has permitted the growth, through Tammany methods, of a criminal influence within the organization so strong and so dangerous to the physical safety of the honest leaders that the national body itself is afraid to make a move to throw these loathsome gangsters out.

Because George Browne, the president of the stagehands and movie employes union, has no criminal record, the national executive council permitted him to sit in on its deliberations in Washington last week and this week, although Mr. Browne personally appointed not only the pander, Willie Bioff, to a position of greater power than his own, and personally appointed as chief gorilla of the Chicago district another old-time Capone gangster and stickup man named Nick Circella, alias Nick Dean.

THAT SHOWS what type of man Browne is, but still the national executive council, including Green and old Dan Tobin, of the teamsters, who is a kosher-keeping Catholic family man and a veteran of many tough physical battles against strikebreakers and other gorillas, is afraid even to suggest that he be thrown out.

Labor leaders are using official publications to swindle their members out of the truth about their own weakness or crookedness by denouncing as enemies of labor everyone who puts the finger on a thief.

These are the answers to the Summit County Trades and Labor Assembly's letter to Will Green, but another word is required.

"We will solve our own problems in our own way," says the assembly.

The answer to that is: The hell you will! You will solve them honestly, and soon, or the solution will be provided by a rank-and-file rebellion and the Congress of the United States. You aren't the masters of the rank and file. You are their servants, and you had better improve the service or you will be tossed out, too.

Byrnes' Answer To Lindbergh

Following is full text of speech of Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, replying to Col. Lindbergh.

Perhaps the greatest clause in our Bill of Rights is that guaranteeing free speech. In the exercise of that freedom, which totalitarian government is fast wiping out in Europe today, Mr. Charles Lindbergh went on the air last Sunday night to urge the American people to continue to bury their heads in the sands and give no thought toward that shocking conflict now raging across the waters and which theatens the very fabric of Christian and democratic civilization the world over.

Mr. Lindbergh's speech was announced as a discussion of our defense. Like many other Americans, I listened in anticipation of hearing a technical and practical discussion of our aviation proolem by the man who thrilled all of us by his spectacular flight across the ocean. But instead of giving us advice on a subject about which he should be qualified to speak, Mr. Lindbergh gave another discourse on American foreign policy, about which he is no more qualified to speak than "Wrong Way" Corrigan or any other aviator who may fly the Atlantic Ocean.

A few years ago Mr. Lindbergh went to Great Britain to live.

It seemed natural to us that his interest in aviation should cause him to inspect the air forces of other countries in Europe—France, Germany and Russia. We thought nothing of it at first.

Then we were somewhat surprised by the news that he had accepted a decoration from Hitler. We were further surprised by the reports which came to us, about the time of the Munich settlement, that he was volunteering his advice in important circles in England and France thought to be favorable to a policy of appeasing Germany by offering no resistance to her aggression upon small countries to her east. He had always been regarded as a shy, retiring young man, and the reports of his intermeddling in Europe did not seem in keeping with his character.

Since last September he has taken it upon himself to speak thrice to the American people upon what their attitude should be toward the conflict now raging in Europe.

When his first speech was delivered the question of the arms embargo was uppermost in the minds of Americans. Mr. Lindbergh failed to state in so many words where he stood. But few who heard his speech could doubt that its net effort was to give great comfort to those opposing the shipment of planes even under the cash-and-carry clause to the Allies fighting in defense of their national existence.

The following month Mr. Lindbergh addressed the American public a second time. He pleaded that "for the benefit of Western civilization we should continue our embargo on offensive weapons." He wanted to forbid the sale for cash and delivery in this country of bombing planes to Britain and France while they would lie unpitied beneath the bombs of German planes.

Mr. Lindbergh very cleverly tried to make the American people believe that you could distinguish between offensive and defensive planes. All military experts agreed that such a distinction was wholly untenable—and that again the net effect of Mr. Lindbergh's distinction was to urge the American people to deny the Allies means of defense, and deny the United States the increased productive capacity that would contribute to our own defense.

In that speech Mr. Lindbergh even went so far as to attack our neighbor, Canada, for daring to retain her allegiance to the British Empire and joining in the defense of the Commonwealth of Nations of which she is by her free choice a member.

He stated in effect that we must demand that Canada separate itself from the British Empire.

The United States cannot start something it is unable to finish. Had we followed his advice and made such a demand upon Canada and she refused to comply with our demand, we could enforce that demand only with force. He was, in effect, pleading that we make war upon Canada and, therefore, upon the British Empire, while Hitler was making war upon them.

Last Sunday the once shy and reticent Mr. Lindbergh again thought that the American people were in need of his advice, this time about what he professed to call "the air defense of the United States."

This third speech of Mr. Lindbergh was a singular performance: I am still trying to discover the meaning of it.

President Roosevelt had recommended appropriations for National defense which were extremely conservative, in light of the recommendations of his military experts and in light of the shocking and ominous developments abroad which have threatened with destruction the most inoffensive neutral nations. Even Mr. Lindbergh, at the end of his hysterical protest against other people becoming hysterical about our national defense program, admitted that "we need a greater air force, a greater army, and a greater navy," and nowhere indicated in what respects the President's program is defective.

Yet Mr. Lindbergh spoke as if the United States was somehow being rushed into an air defense program before a definite policy of defense had been formulated. He pointed out that an air defense program based on the defense of the United States alone would be quite different from a defense program based on the defense of the entire Western Hemisphere, and he proceeded to argue what no responsible person has ever denied that America cannot effectively defend herself without defending the whole Western Hemisphere.

But the President has stated that policy of hemisphere defense time and time again during the past two years—it is a definite policy of defense already formulated.

Why, then, does Mr. Lindbergh try to create the impression that the American people are being rushed hastily and impulsively into a national defense program?

Why does he scorn as hysteria this belated rising of the American giant from sleep?

Why does he try to unnerve our people who have belatedly awakened to the dangers to which they are exposed and to lull them into a false sense of security to prevent them arming themselves on land, on sea and in the air?

He told the American people that we "won this country from Europe with a handful of revolutionary soldiers? We certainly can hold it now with a population of 130,000,000 people." He must know that if we had a population of 230,000,000 people we would be helpless without a strong Navy and a strong Army adequately equipped with modern weapons.

Mr. Lindbergh said "If we desire peace, we need only stop asking for war. No one wishes to attack us, and no one is in position to do so."

What official of the United States Government is asking for war? Does he think the President is asking for war because he asked the Congress to provide additional appropriations for the defense of this Nation? The people of America know that a nation does not have to ask for war in order to have it visited upon them. Did China ask for war? Did Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Denmark, Norway, Holland and Belgium ask for war? No, not one of them did. Yet today these nations have been wiped out and their men, women and children slaughtered.

When Mr. Lindbergh says "No one wishes to attack us," is he authorized to speak for Hitler or Goering? Can the American people, in the light of recent history, accept the assurance of this young gentleman that if we do not ask for war it will not come to us?

Mr. Lindbergh states that while it is true that bombing planes can be built with sufficient range to cross the ocean and return, no such planes exist today in any air force. Would Mr. Lindbergh have us wait until they are built by a nation capable of producing thousands every month.

You and I know it is no feat at all for planes now in existence, in fleets, to make the jumps the President described in his message—from Iceland to Greenland to Canada to New England.

When Mr. Lindbergh states that "regardless of which side wins this war, there is no reason, aside from our own actions, to prevent a continuation of peaceful relationships between America and the countries of Europe," I shudder to think of the kind of America Mr. Lindbergh is willing to accept.

Mr. Lindbergh seems not concerned with the flagrant violations of the rights of peaceful little nations, the cruel and bitter persecution of God-fearing men, women and children, because of their religion, race or political opinions; the burning of books, the bombing of helpless women and children fleeing in terror from their homes; the parachute spies and torch troops. For them he expresses no pity. To Mr. Lindbergh—all these seem to be only little trifling insignificant incidents to an age-old struggle for power.

But to me these vile, barbaric deeds represent an attack against everything that we hold dear, an attack against international good faith, against religion, against learning, against political freedom, against civilization itself.

Apart from all moral values does Mr. Lindbergh really believe that our problem of national defense would not seriously be affected by the destruction of the British fleet or its surrender to Germany? Whatever may have been the past or present sins of commission or omission of British foreign policy, American naval interests and British naval interests have not clashed since the War of 1812, and our naval authorities see no possibility of a serious clash of interest in the future.

On the contrary the British fleet has made it possible for us to get along with a fleet large enough to protect our interests on either the Atlantic or Pacific but not on both oceans at the same time.

Is there among us a thoughtful person who believes that should England be brought to her knees within the next few weeks or few months, that Hitler would permit her to scuttle her fleet? Must we not realize that Hitler would warn that if Britain destroyed her fleet, he would destroy England? Could we expect the British government under such circumstances to sink its fleet or send it to help the United States? If Britain did what you would do under the same circumstances and surrendered its fleet to save its people, we would be confronted by Hitler possessing a navy superior in strength to our own, and with more warships in the course of construction in England than in any other country.

Even if we do not know the terms, we know there is an alliance between Germany and Japan. With the combined sea power of Japan and Germany, vastly superior to ours, could we rely upon the assurance of Mr. Lindbergh that war would not come to us unless we ask for it?

If there ever was a time for men and women of feeling and goodwill to be aroused, surely this is the time.

England and France were lulled into a false sense of security by those who pleaded as Mr. Lindbergh has pleaded that they could continue to live in peace with nations which trample ruthlessly over the rights of other nations and that those who dared to warn them of their dangers were actuated by "personal profit and foreign interest."

England and France were also told as Mr. Lindbergh has told us that appeasement was of primary importance, and "the production of airplanes, cannon, and battleships is of secondary importance."

England and France discovered too late that by refusing to aid the victims of aggression and trying instead to appease the aggressor did not keep them out of war, but only served to bring the war flaming out of the heavens upon them.

Fifth columns are already active in America. And those who consciously or unconsciously retard the efforts of this Government to provide for the defense of the American people are the fifth column's most effective fellow travelers.

Mr. Lindbergh may tell us to "stop this hysterical chatter of calamity and invasion," but I thank God that America has at last been aroused to the dangers that beset her in a world menaced by brute force and strident ambition and is grimly determined to arm in self-defense.

We have witnessed the effect of lack of unity in Britain and in France. We should profit by their experience. Forgetting all personal grievances and all political ambitions, the American people should unite under the leadership of their President and work to preserve our lives and our liberties.

Number One news spot in the U.S.A.

"ALL IN!"

It is the voice of Bill Donaldson, Superintendent of the House press gallery. Every Friday morning at 10:30 and Tuesday afternoon at 4, that familiar call resounds through the oval inner room of the White House executive offices.

And with these two words, as free of ceremony as the shout of a subway guard, proclamation is made that the accredited correspondents of the nation's newspapers—75 to 200 strong—will now proceed to question the President of the United States.

▶ Let no foreign newspaperman suppose (and several of them are usually present) that the absence of fanfare implies any lack of seriousness. Not these days.

In the doldrums of last winter, the spot news men in the front row and the stiff-collared Mark Sullivan at the rear exchanged many a wisecrack with the man in the chair. But now the correspondents' questions, always prepared in advance and carefully worded, are asked with a full sense of their national and international import.

The front row may occasionally relieve the tension with a jest, but for the most part the problems of the hour are too harsh and dire for anything but the gravest faces, the most searching and genuine thoughtfulness on both sides of that well-known, gadget-laden desk.

▶ Number One news spot in the U. S. A.? Yes, and in this portentous year of 1940, it may well be more than that. For this year, a World War and an American presidential election cross each other's paths—a meeting more weighted with destiny than any conjunction of planets.

Third term possibilities . . . changes in defense plans . . . developments in foreign policy . . . no newsman can go through these doors now without feeling that he may come out with a story for the history books.

▶ Not always have the Presidential doors swung open to correspondents. Most 19th century Presidents, even Lincoln, were suspicious of newspapermen. But during the reign of the unbending Cleveland, a reporter named Bill Price hit on the scheme of hanging around the White House gate to buttonhole the departing visitor, and he soon had plenty of imitators.

It was Theodore Roosevelt who first saw the possibilities in that little group of gate-watchers. One rainy day soon after the assassin's bullet had catapulted him into the Presidency, he called them in, gave them an anteroom of their own, and established the custom of face-to-face questioning of President by press.

This journalistic questioning has really become part of the American governmental process. It means that Democracy gets more than lip service between elections. It means that it is somebody's regular job to report to the stockholders of U. S. A., Inc. what their chief has on his mind. Extended to all other public servants in Washington, it means that the citizen learns what the government is doing, and the government learns what the citizen is thinking.

▶ White House coverage, of course, is only a fraction of the complicated Washington assignment. The queer little political island of D. C. is dotted with news sources. There is the Senate, which can (and has) upset the Presidential foreign affairs apple cart. There is the House, which must untie the purse strings for every Presidential project. There is the Supreme Court, which can topple his legislation after it's all signed, sealed, and delivered. And the Executive Departments . . . and the 79 independent administrative agencies . . . and the foreign embassies and legations . . . all gushing news from time to time faster than the White House itself.

It's no job for an amateur—and there are no amateurs in the Washington correspondent corps. Many have been foreign correspondents in important European capitals, editorial writers on great metropolitan papers, managing editors or city editors. Many write books, magazine articles, syndicated columns. Though their median age is only 37, every one has proved himself on some lesser firing line. And they are paid accordingly . . . $25,000 for the tops, $6000 for the average.

▶ No other group in Washington is their superior in intelligence. None has fewer axes to grind, fewer oxen to be gored. And few men, even in public office, have deeper responsibilities to the people.

▶ Together with TIME's own Washington staff of eleven, these men supply the rich harvest of news from which the Newsmagazine extracts the most significant kernels.

Because the Presidency is the hub around which the nation revolves, TIME has always accorded lead-off position to what is virtually a diary for the President. No week of his life is unimportant, and TIME readers always know what he has done with it. And they know, too, every noteworthy event in the other departments of the government, for the Presidential "diary" is followed by a review of all Washington during a week of the nation's political history.

▶ One integrated, dramatic story . . . this is what TIME creates out of the two million words that pour forth from the city by the Potomac each week. Every piece of vital news is fitted into every other piece . . . out of the week's haze of details emerges a clear, consistent, meaningful picture.

Democratic government will survive in this unfriendly world if the electorate knows and cares what its public servants are doing . . . faces its democratic decisions with an informed understanding. TIME takes the responsibility for seeing that a most influential section of the electorate knows, cares, and understands.

This is one of a series of advertisements in which the Editors of TIME hope to give all the readers of this newspaper a clearer picture of the world of news-gathering, news-writing, and news-reading—and the part TIME plays in helping you to grasp, measure, and use the history of your lifetime as you live the story of your life.

Committee To Report In Fairfax

Government Form To Be Discussed At County-Wide Mass Meeting

A county-wide mass meeting sponsored by the newly organized Fairfax County government study committee of nine, headed by Beverly Coleman, of McLean, will be held tomorrow night at 8 in the Fairfax courthouse to hear a report on three optional forms of county government for Fairfax County.

Action of the group in recommending one of the forms, however, will not prevent any other citizen or group in the county from initiating the necessary steps to call an election on either of the other two forms.

School Ends June 14

The current session of the Fairfax County Schools will end Friday, June 14. An eight-week session of the Fairfax high and elementary schools will be held in the Fairfax High School from June 17 to August 9. The hours will be from 8:30 to 12:30 five days a week so that pupils can make up work failed in two subjects or take one new full credit course in the high school. There will be a small weekly charge for each subject.

The faculty will include James E. Bauserman, principal; Mrs. Mildred Leigh, algebra and high school arithmetic; Miss Garland Sanford, typing, shorthand and bookkeeping; Miss Martha Reely, social studies and first and third year English; Mrs. Josephine Howdershell, Latin; Harold Weiler, chemistry, biology and physics; J. E. Bauserman, elementary work for sixth and seventh grades, and English.

Carrico Reelected

Harry L. Carrico, of Annandale, has been reelected president of the Fairfax High School Association for the coming year, to serve with the following officers: H. H. Ankers, of Vienna, vice president; Mrs. W. W. Louk, of Vienna, treasurer; Miss Garland Sanford, a member of the high school faculty, secretary.

The following ways and means committee for the summer period was appointed by the president: H. H. Ankers, chairman; Mrs. James N. Kincheloe, Mrs. James Fox, William Keefe and Mrs. H. N. Clarke.

State Daughters Of America Plan Alexandria Parley

Norfolk, Va., May 22 (AP).—The Virginia Daughters of America will hold its annual convention next year in Alexandria.

Other officers elected prior to adjournment of the annual meeting here yesterday were Mrs. Mildred Stewart, of Arlington, associate State councilor; Mrs. Virginia Nessenthaler, of Fredricksburg, State vice councilor; Mrs. Daisy Cardoza, of Norfolk, associate State vice councilor; Mrs. Lela Spillman, of Arlington, conductor; Mrs. Annie Childress, of Richmond, warden; Mrs. Isabelle Williams, of Norfolk, inside sentinel; Mrs. Margaret Struder, of Alexandria, outside sentinel, and Mrs. Ethel Poland, of Arlington; Mrs. Mary Wood, of Portsmouth, and Mrs. Ethel Smithers, of Alexandria, national representatives.

The State organization will conduct a memorial service at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington at 11 a. m. Sunday, June 2.

500 to Present Town Pageant

Special Dispatch to The Post

Stephens City, Va., May 22.—Planned as a community project, more than 500 students and adults of Stephens City will present a pageant on the evening of May 29, depicting many of the highlights of the early history of this town, including the first school.

The pageant will provide the finale for commencement exercises and will feature Joist Hite, the first pioneer, arriving with his train of pack horses; the first school with the first known teacher, Miss Corrine Gardner, and other early scenes. It will conclude with a review of present-day school activities.

Base Hospital Group Forms Permanent Unit

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., May 22.—At a meeting of the University of Virginia Base Hospital Unit, formally designated as Base Hospital No. 41 during the World War, a permanent organization was effected and arrangements made for annual reunions.

Mason S. Byrd, of this city, was elected president; Dr. Leroy Hyde, of Washington, vice president, and Stuart S. Rothwell, of this city, secretary and treasurer.

The following were named to the board of directors: Nate Adams, of Lynchburg; Glenn Updike, of Danville; Bruce Lightner, of Hagerstown, Md.; Garland Peery, of Tazewell, and A. V. Swann, of Roanoke.

Add Social Notes: The Crab Family Finally Makes Bow

Annapolis, Md., May 22 (AP).—At long last Mr. and Mrs. Crab and all the little crabs have come out of hibernation.

Their debut had been scheduled for May 1, when the crab season officially opened, but their "coming out" was delayed because of cold weather.

Edwin Warfield, State conservation commission chairman, reported today that both hard and soft crabs had just appeared in the Patuxent River and in the vicinity of Hoopers Island, St. Michaels and Crisfield.

He said many of the large crabs had been killed by the weather. Meanwhile, the conservation inspectors were instructed to submit monthly reports on the crab catch in Maryland waters. Information they receive from dealers will be kept confidential, Warfield declared.

Methodist Union Parley Set Tonight

Mount Airy, Md., May 22 (AP).—Three quarterly conferences will meet tomorrow night in Calvary Church to complete details for Methodist Church Union in Mount Airy and New Market.

The meeting, called by the Rev. Dr. G. Ellis Williams, district superintendent, will bring together the official voting bodies for the Mount Airy charge, Mount Airy circuit and Frederick circuit.

Mayor Adams Attends Last Town Council

Takoma Park Leader Completes 19 Years In Community Work

Mayor John R. Adams, of Takoma Park, Md., last night attended his last meeting of the Town Council, completing 19 years of service to the community—four as mayor, and 15 as councilman.

His successor, Oliver W. Youngblood, will preside at the June meeting.

Youngblood and newly-elected Councilman Herman C. Heffner were present last night as the mayor and council ordered a one-hour restriction on parking on the west side of Carroll avenue between Grant and Lee avenues from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. The meeting was in the Fire Hall, at Carroll and Denwood avenues.

The council tabled a proposal to construct curbs and gutters on Mississippi avenue and accepted the application of Milton E. Self, manager of a Takoma Park hardware store, for a position on the town police force.

The council also received the application of J. Crescent Bride for summer supervisor of municipal playgrounds. Bride has held the position for four years. Roy P. Frye, town building inspector, applied for reappointment. Decision on the application will be made by the new council.

Youngblood announced the monthly council meeting probably would be changed to the third Wednesday from the first Monday.

Arlington Man's Brother Found Dead in N.Y. River

The body of Allen Minor, 35 years old, of Richmond, Va., who has been missing since last September, was found by New York police in the East River last Saturday. The identification was made by his brother, Granville Minor, of 3138 South Glebe road, Arlington, Va.

MR. MINOR

According to his sister-in-law, Mrs. Granville Minor, Allen, who was employed in Richmond, Va., went to New York for treatment for a nervous disorder last September.

Funeral services will be conducted from his home in Coke, Gloucester County, Va., tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock at the Episcopal Church. Burial will be in Abbington Cemetery.

Besides his mother, Mrs. Marther Minor, he is survived by three sisters, Mrs. Elsie Armstrong, of Washington; Mrs. Edward Curtis, of Lee Hall, Va., and Miss Hylah Minor, of Coke, Va., and two brothers, Edward Minor, of Coke, Va., and Granville Minor, of Arlington, Va.

Green, Bowie Offer to Try Juveniles

Prince Georges Trial Magistrates Foresee Authority For Separate Court

Walter Green and Alan Bowie, Prince Georges County police trial magistrates, yesterday offered their services as juvenile court justices should it be decided to create a tribunal for juvenile cases.

Demands for a juvenile court setup were made following a disturbance that flared up at a minstrel show in the Mount Rainier, (Md.) High School Friday night. The performance was interrupted by a barrage of eggs thrown by students in the audience and several adults were pelted.

Both police magistrates said they believed the Legislature could confer the necessary power upon them to permit the handling of juvenile cases separately from criminal offenses.

This arrangement, they explained, would save the county the expense of setting up an entirely new branch of the judicial system at considerable cost to the taxpayers.

Judges Green and Bowie were appointed justices of the peace and designated police trial magistrates under the reformed justice of the peace system approved by the 1939 State Legislature.

Judge Green said it might be possible to get a ruling from the Attorney General permitting Judge Bowie and himself to sit also as juvenile court judges. In that case, Judge Green said, it would be unnecessary to have the Legislature confer authority on them to hold juvenile court sessions.

Under the present system juvenile cases are handled in the same manner as other cases. Proponents of the juvenile court plan have pointed out that it would save youngsters who get into trouble from the disgrace of having a police record while at the same time provide punishment for their offenses.

William A. Carson, chairman of the county board of commissioners, said he was "heartily in favor of some sort of juvenile court set-up." The commissioners, he said, would be glad to cooperate in working out some plan.

Democrats to Meet

A number of Federal and State officials will attend the annual luncheon meeting of the United Democratic Women's Clubs of Maryland today at 1:30 in the University of Maryland dining hall. Senator Alben W. Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, will speak.

Among the guests will be Gov. and Mrs. Herbert R. O'Conor, Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles and Mrs. Welles, Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings, Senator George L. Radcliffe, Representative and Mrs. Landsdale G. Sasscer, Representative and Mrs. William Byron, Representative and Mrs. William P. Cole and Representative Thomas D'Alesandro.

Mrs. Frances McFadden, of Mount Rainier, chairman of the State group, will preside.

Takoma Park Youth Injured In Plane Crash

A 21-year-old Takoma Park youth was injured seriously late yesterday when a plane in which he was a passenger crashed near Lincoln, Nebr., International News Service reported.

The youth, Clarence Klopfenstein, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Klopfenstein, 701 Greenwood avenue, Takoma Park, suffered a chest concussion and a possible skull fracture. His companion, James Harvey, jr., of Elkhart, Ill., a student pilot, was severely bruised and burned about the legs.

According to the dispatch, the two had crashed soon after taking off from a pasture in a borrowed plane. They fell several hundred feet. Klopfenstein, a former Washington Missionary College student, left Sunday to visit friends in Nebraska, his mother said last night.

Depth Borings Made For New Potomac Span

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hagerstown, Md., May 22.—As a preliminary to the advertising for bids for the $750,000 bridge across the Potomac River at Sandy Hook, near Harpers Ferry, the Maryland roads commission has a crew taking test borings to ascertain the depth of the piers.

The bridge will connect with the highway from Frederick to Harpers Ferry on the Maryland side, with its other base in Virginia. It was learned here that considerable road relocation will be made in both Virginia and West Virginia to tie in with the new bridge.

Arlington Asks State to Study School System

County Desires To Keep No. 1 Rating in Virginia

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST
Clarendon, Va., Tel. OXford 0509

Declaring that it intends to keep Arlington County's No. 1 rating among Virginia public schools, the county school board yesterday asked State school authorities to send a special committee here for a thorough study of the school system.

The request was made in a letter to Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction. A similar request was made two years ago, John M. Stewart, school board chairman said, and a State committee sent to Arlington offered many valuable suggestions for improving the local school setup.

The Virginia department of public instruction recently gave Arlington County top rating in a report on school systems in the State's 100 counties. To maintain this record for the county, authorities declared they must meet several problems in the near future, one of the most pressing being that of crowding. The school enrollment has steadily increased, and still is growing.

Laymen to Meet

Having considered the resignation of the Rev. Perry L. Mitchell, pastor of the Clarendon Baptist Church, the board of deacons yesterday announced it will place the resignation before the congregation.

There will be a special meeting of the congregation next Wednesday night at 7:45 o'clock when it will be explained the board of deacons is without authority to act, and that it is up to the congregation.

The resignation was offered Sunday.

The Rev. Mr. Mitchell has seen the church's membership increase from 256 in 1924 to 1,025 today. His congregation helped to develop a mission church in Ballston, which is now independent.

Dovell to Speak

Ashton Dovell, speaker of the Virginia House of Delegates, will be the guest speaker at the annual banquet of the Arlington County Civic Federation tonight at 7 o'clock at Hotel 24,000, Washington. The banquet will be followed by dancing at 10:30.

The Rev. Thomas Finnegan, pastor of Our Lady of Lourdes Catholic Church at Virginia Highlands, will give the invocation, and A. D. Adams, president, will be toastmaster.

Federation Reelects J. P. McCurdy

Maryland-District AFL Names Officers; Social Security Law Amendment Urged

By the Associated Press

Hagerstown, Md., May 22.—The Maryland and District of Columbia Federation of Labor reelected Joseph P. McCurdy, of Baltimore, president today by a vote of 243½ to 74½ over Harry Cohen, Baltimore.

In resolutions adopted just before the convention's close, the A. F. L. urged legislation to have old-age benefits under the social security laws began at 60, and recommended that the A. F. L. employ a part-time organizer to be stationed in Hagerstown.

Other resolutions urged legislation to:

Make a maximum 48-hour work week for women.

Prohibit barmaids at Maryland bars.

John Locher and Harry Thompson, Washington; F. N. Kershaw and G. Kingston Howard, Baltimore; John L. Geist, Hagerstown; Paul W. England, Cumberland.

Others, unopposed, elected were: Organizer, Robert Buxbaum, Baltimore; secretary, Frank Coleman, Washington; treasurer, Robert Lester, Washington. All officers were installed by V. J. Henry, of Washington, who has attended every convention for 25 years.

Personal Effects Of John Saunders Sold at Auction

Charlottesville, Va., May 22.—Over 200 persons, including several members of the faculty at the University of Virginia, attended the auction sale yesterday of personal effects of the late John Monk Saunders, Hollywood screen writer, who took his life at Fort Myers, Fla., on March 11.

Bidding was active throughout the sale, which lasted over five hours. Included in the sale were a library of 350 volumes, including many books on philosophy and aviation; clothing, movie cameras, golf clubs, ping pong sets and other sporting goods. Many of the books brought excellent prices. Altogether, 300 separate items were sold.

Saunders lived in this community for several months a little over a year ago in the midst of marital troubles, which ended in a divorce from his wife, Fay Wray, motion picture actress.

W. Va. Supreme Court Gets Democrats Plea

Special Dispatch to The Post

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 22.—The Democratic Party's first fight to have its nominees placed on the ballot for the Martinsburg municipal election was carried to the West Virginia Supreme Court Tuesday when J. Nelson Hicks, city Democratic chairman, asked the court for a writ of mandamus to compel placing of the names on the ballot for the June 11 election.

The city charter requires that nominating conventions be held between April 15 and May 1 but Democratic ward meetings were not held until May 3. The court was told that the sessions were held May 3 "because of an honest mistake on the part of your petitioner."

3-Year Dispute With Doctors Shuts Hospital

Warrenton, Va., May 22.—The three-year controversy between Fauquier County doctors and Fauquier County Hospital was climaxed today by a vote of the hospital membership to close the institution.

L. R. Bartenstein, secretary of the hospital, which has been boycotted by nearly all of the physicians of the community for the past several years, announced the action of the association, a non-profit corporation.

He said that the four-story, 32-bed hospital would close its doors as soon as the two patients in the building are discharged. The hospital had refused new patients during the past few days pending action on the proposal of the board that the institution shut its doors.

Bartenstein gave these details of the dispute which began in July, 1937. The Fauquier County Medical Association had, by tradition, been passing on which doctors should be permitted to practice in the hospital. The hospital board decided in that year that it should have the final say as to the hospital staff personnel.

The deadlock continued until April, 1938, when attempts at a compromise failed and the doctors withdrew their practice from the institution. The hospital, which had prospered since its founding in 1925, then began to run into debt.

Bartenstein said the hospital board had operated the institution in accordance with the requirements of the American College of Surgeons and that its bylaws and regulations had the approval of the A. C. S.

Confederate Memorial Rites Planned

Alexandria To Pay Homage To Civil War Dead Tomorrow

R. Samuel Luckett will preside as master of ceremonies tomorrow in Alexandria at memorial services for Confederate soldiers conducted jointly by Nellie Custis Lee Chapter, 17th Virginia Regiment, United Daughters of the Confederacy, and R. E. Lee Camp, No. 756, Sons of Confederate Veterans.

Commander Luckett, of Sons of Confederate Veterans, also will assist Miss Anna Stump, president of the Daughters of Confederacy, in supervising arrangements for an extensive program. Special rites will take place in Lee Camp Hall, headquarters of Confederate organizations.

Exercises will follow at the Confederate mound in Christ Church Cemetery. After the grave is decorated, an honor guard from the Alexandria Light Infantry will fire a volley over the mound. A member of the Alexandria Citizens' Band will sound "Taps" to conclude the ceremonies.

The Rev. Edward Randolph Welles, D. D., rector of Christ Church, will deliver the invocation and benediction. A quartet including A. S. Goodrich, E. S. Bilheimer, Mrs. Helen Roberts and Mrs. Joseph Hoeft will sing, accompanied by Miss Margaret Alexander at the piano.

To Select Queen

Commander William J. Greenan of Alexandria Post, No. 24, American Legion, announced yesterday that during the post's social meeting tomorrow night, a girl will be selected to reign as queen of the American Legion Festival at Colonial Beach next month.

All interested in competing for the title are requested by the legion to attend the selection which will begin at 8 p. m. in Gadsby's Tavern. Contestants are restricted to residents of the Eighth District.

Prior to the social session, Capt. G. Raymond King will command the honor guard in brief Confederate memorial exercises.

Attend Convention

Four delegates from the Alexandria Lions Club are attending the Virginia Convention of Lions International which opened today in Danville, and will continue through tomorrow. Those attending from Alexandria include John P. Strauss, Howard R. Richardson and William H. Smith. The delegates were accompanied by several other members of the club, and last night were among guests at the district governor's ball.

Ann Sheridan Steps Out In Torrid "Torrid Zone"

Recalls Jean Harlow in Her Latest Picture; Cecil B. DeMille Cuts His Purse Strings; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THAT DISTINGUISHED DOWAGER of the theater, Madame Maria Ouspenskaya—who, incidentally conducts schools of the drama in both New York and Hollywood, in addition to doing her regular stints before the cameras—probably was right in her estimate of the capabilities of Ann Sheridan. It was expressed when both she and Annie were working on adjoining stages on the Warner lot— Madame Ouspenskaya in "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet" and Miss Sheridan in "Torrid Zone."

BELL

"Ann Sheridan long ago proved that she has a talent far beyond that of the average, good-looking, young woman to attract admiring attention in a theatrical way," Madame Ouspenskaya declared. "If not, she wouldn't be where she is today. But that talent has not yet had a chance to develop, to assert itself fully. It will come. For Miss Sheridan has demonstrated beyond all chance of doubt that she has the necessary tenacity of purpose to get what she wants in this world. Tenacity, plus talent, plus beauty will not be denied."

This all leads up to yesterday afternoon's preview screening of "Torrid Zone," opening tomorrow at the Earle. In "Torrid Zone," the red-headed Miss Sheridan gives the first definite promise of achieving some such position in the cinema as that once occupied by the lamented Jean Harlow. Throughout the unspooling of the picture, this column was reminded constantly of Jean Harlow in "Red Dust." Ann's role is a comparable one, although the locale and action of the two films are vastly different. It is conspicuously evident now that this Sheridan lady is going places.

With Jimmy Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Andy Devine, Helen Vinson, Jerome Cowan and George Tobias in the cast, and Ann Sheridan cast opposite Cagney, "Torrid Zone" is a "banana country" picture to end all banana country pictures. It kids the life out of all such items as "Only Angels Have Wings" and kindred tropical subjects and even bears traces of a tropicalized burlesque of "Front Page." Beyond all this, it kids the life out of itself with a line of flashy dialogue that is almost continuously amusing and frequently a source of curiosity as to how it all got by the Hays office. You can't believe a word of it, but it's a lotta fun anyhow.

It must be some kind of record that Cecil B. DeMille has set with his Technicolor production of "North West Mounted Police," his first all-color production. Last week he completed shooting nine days ahead of schedule and $125,000 under budget. Twenty-eight days before finishing the picture, DeMille began putting $100 a day into a fund to be distributed as a bonus among workers such as makeup men, hairdressers and the like. When the final "cut" was shouted, 28 persons received 100 smackers apiece. And they used to say Cecil B. was a tough guy to work for!

That twenty-mule team, dragging the two old borax wagons and the water tak, with their crew of flaming-red and canary-yellow shirted Death Valley lads in their 10-gallon sombreros, made quite a flash on the Capital's downtown streets yesterday. Lined up in front of the District Building a little before noon, the outfit spread out a wheelbase almost as long as the building itself.

Anne Baxter, young newcomer to Hollywood from the New York stage, not that it matters especially, plays her first romantic lead in "Twenty-Mule Team," opening tomorrow at Loew's Capitol, with Wallace Beery, Leo Carrillo and Marjorie Rambeau. Miss Baxter is a niece of the famous architect, Frank Lloyd Wright.

Day Tuttle, director of the Washington Civic Theater, and Richard Skinner, formerly associated with the same organization, this summer will operate the Westchester Playhouse, Mount Kisco, N. Y., for its eleventh season. They will begin the 10-weeks' season on Monday, June 17, with Ethel Barrymore in "The School For Scandal." Mr. Tuttle this week is acting in the Civic's production of Noel Coward's "Tonight at 8:30," at Wardman Park.

Just-Like-Home Note

That Death Valley crew must have thought they were back home, yesterday's temperature and humidity being what they were!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, May 22.

Jack Barrymore's future plans are a bit confusing to Hollywood. He's let Darryl Zanuck know that if he caricatures him in "The Great Profile," he'll have another law suit on his hands. Jack put a terrific price on his services and picture rights for "My Dear Children," but last week price came down. Elaine Barrie was eliminated as supporting actress in picture. Which reminds me of Doris Dudley's crack when Elaine got her job in stage show. Doris chirped, "You can't fight sex with talent."

HOPPER

I wonder if members of Actors' Equity know that Tallulah Bankhead is up for nomination as member of the council. Everyone knows Tallulah's love for the theater and the fights she's put up for its benefits. Here's hoping she wins.

I hope you haven't missed Maurice Evans' thrilling performance of "Richard II." He, together with Carmen Mathews and Donald Randolph, are picture material. Donald has had quite an experience—had seven failures on Broadway before "Richard II." Paramount was certainly lucky getting Margaret Webster, who staged the play.

A new Latin lover signed by Lou Brock for RKO, named Roberto Villa, sounds too good to be true. They tell me he has a face like Cary Grant, the personality of Charles Boyer, barytone voice of John Charles Thomas. What—no puckish grin of Mickey Rooney?

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 22 (INS).—Of the many stories I read in my childhood there is none I remember as well as Louisa M. Alcott's books. My brother and I had all the Alcott series and while I never liked "Little Men" as well as "Little Women," nevertheless, I read and reread it. Naturally, I am interested in what Gene Towne and Graham Baker and Director Norman McLeod will do in casting "Little Men." They are faced with the difficulty of handling a story in which most of the characters are children. Of course Jo is in the picture and Kay Francis has been selected to play her. Remember Katharine Hepburn played a younger Jo in "Little Women?"

LOUELLA PARSONS

Charles Esmond has been selected for Prof. Bhaer, Jo's husband, and Jimmy Lydon as one of their children. Meg, Amy and Beth, her sisters, will have no part in "Little Men." Jack Oakie and Charles Winninger have been signed for new characters which have been added to the Alcott story.

With the front pages so crowded with alarming war news the Neely bill, which has been of such concern to Hollywood producers, has almost been forgotten. Today, however, Samuel Goldwyn, who is in New York, was subpoenaed—the first producer to be called to Washington. The Neely bill demands that no picture be sold without a synopsis first being shown to the exhibitor, as well as the picture itself. It does away with block booking, whereas, in the past, the exhibitors bought the complete output of a studio in order to get their best pictures. Whether or not the industry can financially stand the hardship imposed by the Neely bill is a question. So much of the market has been lost because of the war that any additional retrenchment will work a real hardship in Hollywood.

It wouldn't do for Cowboy Gene Autry to burst forth on his public as a "great lover," so, in order to incorporate some romance into his next picture, "Ride, Tenderfoot, Ride," he will play a dual role. Betty Burbridge, who authorized the story, gets credit for this idea and, if you ask me, I think it is a good one, since a love story never hurt any picture at the box office. Gene will be his typical Western self as one character and the other will be a New Yorker who has some torrid love scenes at the end of the picture. Wonder how Public Cowboy No. 1 will look in just plain street clothes?

Snapshots of Hollywood at random: Jimmie Stewart received a $450 water color by Millard Sheets, presented to him by Olivia de Havilland as a birthday gift; Helen Mack and Pat Weaver are expected to take the big matrimonial step in two weeks; Louise Stanley is taking her matrimonial troubles to court; her estrangled bridegroom of three months, Addison Randall, dining with Clara Bow at the Sphinx Club the other eve. He is one of Clara and Rex Bell's closest friends; everyone wonders what the inscription is on the gold cigarette case Bentley Ryan gave Billie Seward; Jeffrey Lynn and Elizabeth Earl, a Warner actress, have been keeping the telephone busy.

Greg Bautzer and Margaret Roach were in the new Paragon Room at the Victor Hugo when Artie Shaw walked in. Just to prove there is no hard feeling Greg walked up and shook hands with Artie. Lana is still in the hospital; Mrs. Rita Fitz-Simons, Maureen O'Hara's mother, leaves with Maureen for Ireland in July and hopes to bring back the entire family; Greta Garbo lunching with a woman friend at Perino's attracted no attention whatsoever; Fifi D'Orsay and Lyle Talbot are keeping dates in New York; Simone Simon, back in town, dined at the Tail o' the Cock her first night here with Bill Josephy.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

GERTRUDE STEIN, who prefers the south of France to any part of the world, has been coveting an estate near Belley. The proprietor was an old army captain, stationed at the military post nearby. He had been a captain in the last war, but never received a promotion during the past quarter of a century . . . Miss Stein therefore went to the war ministry in Paris and told them of the services she had rendered for France—of her driving an ambulance in 1917, and of her volunteering to do so again. This was the first time she was asking a favor in return—that the captain be promoted to a major . . . He received the promotion and the assignment to a post away from his home in Belley. And that's how Gertrude Stein was able to buy that house.

WARNER BROS. is reissuing the movie, "Confessions of a Nezi Spy." The new touches will include a commentary and a new ending—warning against Fifth Column activities . . . One of the girls now entertaining in a Broadway theater is using a new name—because she once had entertained Hitler . . . A witness named Kats is supplying the information which links Lepke and Gurrah to a burial in Monticello, N. Y. . . . Walter Wanger, who fought in Italy during the World War, said: "One thing you can say for Italy now—the trains run over the oppressed on time."

JOHN STRACHEY, who attacked the Communist party-line a few days ago, always has insisted that he's not a member of the Communist party . . . When he was stopped at Ellis Island, and was refused permission to enter this country because of his political beliefs, Strachey assured his lawyers that he wasn't a Red . . . "But once, in a debate," he was reminded, "you argued against a Socialist, a Republican and a Democrat. Weren't you advocating communism then?" . . . "I never advocated," Strachey protested.. "I prophesied."

THE AUSTRALIAN volunteers about to sail for England were allowed to send one postcard each to their friends in America. The message they decided upon was: "I have a date with Hitler" . . . A Latin entertainer in a midtown cafe was hit by a bottle wielded by her stepfather last week, and will lose the sight of her right eye . . . Raymond Gram Swing, the commentator, has a new contract with a major film studio.

A FEW DAYS AGO ten of the best American artists were signed to paint the characters who will appear in Wanger's new picture, "The Long Voyage Home." They will receive $40,000 and the producer will profit from the deal, because the contract provides that he will retain the canvases they'll paint . . . These famed artists, who were expected to exhibit temperament, are shocking Hollywood by going to work immediately. Within 24 hours Benton had sketched all his characters, ready for canvas. Georges Schreiber already is working on his canvas. Rafael Soyer, making his first trip West, told the welcoming committee: "I'm lonesome. I want to get to work—right away."

MOLLY PICON, in discussing the fall plans for her current hit show, "Morning Star," told Dave Morris, of the cast: "And then we'll take the show to the Coast.". The pleased actor asked: "Y'mean—to Hollywood?" Molly answered: "Oh, no—to Brighton Beach" . . . RKO paid Clarence Budington Kelland $100,000 for his Scattergood Baines stories, plus the right to use the character as long as they wish. Almost every top-notch screen writer tried to get the assignment for making the adaptation. RKO decided to take no chances, and hired the capable Allen Rivkin . . . The electricians at "American Jubilee" worked their show last week-end, although one of their number suddenly died in their booth.

Volunteer Workers Save Symphony for Next Season

The National Symphony Orchestra was saved for next season and the Water Gate concerts assured yesterday when volunteer workers reported $102,564.31 collected in their sustaining fund drive. Watching A. E. F. Horn, chairman of the drive, mark up this total, are (left to right) Mrs. Charles Bittinger, Mrs. Foster Adams, co-chairmen of the Orchestra Guild whose group collected more than their quota, and L. Corrin Strong, president of the National Symphony Orchestra Association. Additional money needed to reach the $108,000 goal is expected to come in within the next few days

The summer and winter concert series of the National Symphony Orchestra's 1940-41 season was assured yesterday when the drive for sustaining funds officially ended with receipts totaling $102,564.31—94.96 per cent of the goal.

Unofficially the campaign will continue until all uncollected pledges are in, said A. F. E. Horn, general chairman. He predicted the goal of $107,600 would be reached and possibly passed within the next few days.

Volunteer workers who gathered yesterday for the final report luncheon at the Carlton Hotel were elated over their success. Sponsors of the concert series are expected to complete arrangements with the musicians' union June 15.

The total sum collected came from 7,694 donors. Horn predicted final tabulation of uncollected pledges would boost the fund "beyond our expectations—perhaps by $4,000." He described success of the campaign as "phenomenal in the face of world conditions" and lauded the workers for their untiring efforts.

New Films Are Promised on Incoming Bills

Anna Neagle Here Tomorrow in Person; Other Amusements

"IRENE." Anna Neagle will appear in person at RKO-Keith's Theater four times tomorrow at the opening of this film version of the popular musical comedy, her latest photoplay. Marking a sharp departure from her roles in "Nurse Edith Cavell" and "Victoria the Great," Miss Neagle will sing "Alice Blue Gown," "Castle of Dreams" and other song hits from the original score. Ray Milland, Arthur Treacher, May Robson, Billie Burke and Alan Marshall are in the cast.

Palace

"WATERLOO BRIDGE!" Robert E. Sherwood's play, appears on the screen for the second time, with Vivien Leigh and Robert Taylor in the roles of the young dancer and the army officer who meet on Waterloo bridge during a 1917 air raid. After a whirlwind courtship, the two are separated on their wedding day. The tragic story carries forward into the present. Lucile Watson, Virginia Field, Maria Ouspenskaya and C. Aubrey Smith are in the company. Opens tomorrow morning.

Earle

"TORRID ZONE." James Cagney, Ann Sheridan and Pat O'Brien play this story set in a tropical banana plantation of which O'Brien is the boss. Cagney is his ace manager and between the two men is an endless race to outsmart the other. Miss Sheridan's appearance intensifies the rivalry. "Swing Along Revue," on the stage, features the Roxyettes in a new routine, "The Parade of the Unicycles." Ward and Vah, Yola Galli, Ben Beri and Ruby Ring are the other stage performers. Opens tomorrow morning.

Capitol

"TWENTY MULE TEAM." Wallace Beery, Leo Carillo and Marjorie Rambeau are the pivotal figures in a Western story with a novel twist; the efforts of a borax company to locate a new lode before the company becomes bankrupt. Beery is a rough rider and Miss Rambeau, a two-fisted saloon keeper. On the stage will be Frank Gaby, ventriloquist; Cyril Smith, comedian; Max and his dog comedians, Helen Denizen, dancer; the six Grays and the Rhythm Rockets. Opens tomorrow morning.

Metropolitan

"AN ANGEL FROM TEXAS." Eddie Albert, Rosemary Lane, Wayne Morris, Jane Wyman, Ronald Reagan and Ruth Terry, youthful players all, have the leads in this story of a corn-fed prima donna from Texas and a melange of hicks and city slickers who manage to put on a hit show. Also on the screen is the "Cavalcade of Academy Awards from 1928 to 1939," with scenes and stars of the past 12 years. Opens this morning.

Columbia

"MY SON, MY SON." The screen version of Howard Spring's best-selling novel returns to F street with Brian Aherene, Madeleine Carroll, Louis Mayward, Henry Hull, Josephine Hutchinson and Sophie Stewart in the central roles. Opens tomorrow morning.

Little

"THE GREAT WALTZ." This musical, based on the waltzes of the younger Johann Strauss, continues its return engagement with Meliza Korjus, Luise Rainer and Fernand Gravet as a glamorous opera star and the struggling young couple whose marriage very nearly collapses. Julien Duvivier directed.

Trans-Lux

JULIEN BRYAN'S uncensored pictures of the siege and fall of Warsaw, Poland, are the featured short subject at the newsreel theater. "Going Places," "Flycasting" and "The Fishing Bear" are the other auxiliary subjects on a program that emphasizes the latest news clips. Opens tomorrow morning.

Civic Theater

"TONIGHT AT 8:30." The Washington Civic Theater's final production of the season resumes at the Wardman Park Theater tomorrow evening through Monday, with Day Tuttle, the Civic's director, playing two of the roles author Noel Coward created. "Hands Across the Sea," "Fumed Oak" and "Ways and Means" are the one-act plays selected for this bill.

Open-Air

"HAWAIIAN NIGHTS," with Mary Carlisle, and "Cardinal Richelieu," starring George Arliss, forms the double-feature bill opening this evening at the drive-in auto theater on the Richmond highway.

Glen Echo

THE PICNIC GROVES at the Amusement Park are now being booked far in advance by many organizations as well as being enjoyed every day by increasing numbers of private parties. Adele Van has joined Paul Kain's entertainers in the Spanish Garden ballroom as songstress.

Atlas

GAYE DIXON returns from a variety tour to resume the week-end variety programs at the northeast house, opening a two-day engagement Sunday afternoon. Leon Brusilo's Melody Masters are on the stage as well as Frank Masters and Guatier Don, song and dance comedians.

Lincoln

HATTIE McDANIEL, winner of the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences award for the best feminine supporting role of the past season, will make a week of personal appearances at the Lincoln Theater beginning tomorrow morning. The celebrated Negro actress also appears in the accompanying "Cavalcade of Academy Awards."

Empress

"AMERICANER SHADCHEN." A Yiddish film comedy of marriage brokers featuring Leo Fuchs, Judith Abarbanel and Yudel Dubinsky will be shown for three days only, Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

Wilson Line

THE NEW STREAMLINED river steamer has capacity for 2,400 passengers. Moonlight cruises are made each evening except Mondays at 8:30. Round trips to Mount Vernon are made from the Seventh street wharves at 9:30 a. m. and 2 p. m. McWilliams' orchestra plays for dancing.

BLENDED 33 TIMES TO MAKE ONE GREAT BEER

Pabst Blue Ribbon

5 Reasons why it's America's Premium Beer

1—ONLY PABST insures quality through complete processing of all grains—uses none malted or milled by others.
2—96 YEARS of brewing fine beer . . . over 20 billion glasses!
3—FIRST to introduce brewing of true lager beer to Milwaukee (1851).
4—28 SCIENTISTS guard every step from grain to glass . . . grow the pure culture yeast used exclusively by Pabst.
5—BLENDED 33 TIMES . . . for flavor, for smoothness, for unvarying goodness.

A BRAND NEW BONNET WITH A BLUE RIBBON ON IT

33 SEPARATE BREWS—BLENDED LIKE FINEST COFFEE AND CHAMPAGNE—FOR GOODNESS THAT NEVER VARIES

IN each cool, clear glass of Pabst Blue Ribbon, you can see its clarity, its sparkle, its head like a billowy cloud.

But there is something you can't see—something you enjoy in no other beer. For in that glass—and in every glass of Blue Ribbon—there are 33 fine brews from 33 separate kettles!

Only Blue Ribbon brings together these 33 fine brews . . . Not one, or two, or five . . . but 33!

Each brew is as fine as the choicest ingredients and Pabst's 96 years of skill can make it!

But brewing is a natural process, and Nature never yields two brews that are exactly alike, even with the same formula and strict scientific control.

That's why Pabst goes to so much extra work and expense to blend 33 separate brews. As in the finest champagnes, coffee, tobacco, it's expertly balanced blending that gives Blue Ribbon its unvarying goodness.

The result is: America's Premium Beer, with a smoothness that is unique . . . a goodness that is always the same. Sometime today, have the pleasure of meeting a glass of Blue Ribbon.

It's the BLEND that Betters the Beer

Try Pabst Blue Ribbon and Prove it

FIRST IN THE HOMES OF AMERICA—AND THE LARGEST SELLING AMERICAN BEER IN THE REST OF THE WORLD!

The Gentler Sex

—By Malvina Lindsay

Grande Dame

I

I am a woman of importance.
I'm asked to pour at teas, to serve as patron
Of all the swankier benefits; to belong to boards
Of all the older and more fashionable charities;
To lend my name to enterprises needing backing;
And I am protected from all crass intrusion
Of people in my life—by telephone or doorbell
Or letter—by underlings who form an icy wall about me.

II

I am a social personage.
Invitations to my parties are sought eagerly
By all who know their way about and my name,
Like that of Abou Ben Adhem, leads all others
In items starting out, "Among those present—"
And when I make an entrance at large teas or receptions
A court of sycophants forms close about me,
And as I pass, I sense the whispers "There goes Mrs. Whoosis."

III

I am a women of presence.
On entering a store, I find all floorwalkers
Genuflecting; head buyers being summoned,
Saleswomen darting here and there to round up dresses;
And in beauty salons, panic follows my arrival,
As obscure customers are hustled ruthlessly
Aside for my convenience; and in all emporiums
Trades people bow and scrape and lay their best before me.

IV

I am a "representative woman."
I sit on platforms at all public functions,
In reviewing stands as all parades are passing,
In boxes at theatricals and concerts,
In a reserved seat at all big days in Congress,
While at mass gatherings even head waiters are obsequious.
To me, and pompous doormen at hotels and mansions
Bow with a special flourish as I enter.

V

I am a very great lady.
I am always given the best chair in the parlor,
The best seat in the motor car, the best table
In the restaurant; the place of honor
At the dinner party; the seat beside the captain
On the boat; people always rise upon my entry,
Stand back to usher me in rooms and elevators,
Escort me unctuously where'er I choose to wander.

VI

Yes, I am a woman of importance,
Surrounded on all sides by mobs of fawning people,
Yet sure of the devotion of no living creature,
Except those bound by ties of blood
(And even then I often wonder)
And forced to be suspicious of the motives
Of those with whom I long the most for friendship,
Yes, living on a pedestal is very, very lonely.

White Diamonds for Brunettes, Pink-Hued Ones for Blondes

The girl above, Actress Ruth Ford, wears a perfect beau-catcher gown for outdoor summer dining—white silk linen, covered up, urbane and flattering. She has a charming candlelit supper setting to reflect her lustrous Paul Flato jewels—glittering diamonds set in gold

Expert Gives Rules for the Wearing Of Sparklers; Cites Duchess of Windsor For Her Effective Use of These Stones

By Marshall Adams

The Post Fashion Editor.

DIAMOND DUST sparkled in the eyes of members of a recent fashion show audience who were taught by New York's radio actress, Ruth Ford, and advertising expert Peggy Le Boutillier, how to influence people into giving diamonds. Most of the feminine deceptions were practiced at the Shoreham Hotel's diamond style promenade as Miss Ford and a shy young man demonstrated "how to turn a date into a diamond."

Marshall Adams

If all the diamonds shown on Miss Ford and other Shoreham models' hands were as seductive as Designer Paul Flato made them, there will be many Washington women turning on their charms to secure similar jewels. Not every woman can wear huge diamonds, however, according to tiny, vivid Peggy Le Boutillier, being associated with an interesting South African diamond industry makes Peggy something of an authority on the world's most coveted stone and here is advice that she offers on the wearing of it:

"If tastes are tailored, wear diamond lapel or watch ornaments of simple, almost stoic lines. Paul Flato and many contemporary jewelers purposely set handsome stones now in casual, plain settings. A good ring for the sports type would be a round-cut solitaire diamond set in a dull gold button-shaped ring. Tailored type look like peacocks in heavy necklaces. They should avoid these as well as breast pins or earrings. Coffee-colored diamonds or pure white ones are best for precise tailor-made types."

Endless Opportunity

"If tastes lean toward pretty, graceful things, all sorts of diamond fantasies can be toyed with, provided, of course, he can afford them. Even the everyday businessman can afford diamonds, however, for their price never deteriorates and they are far more secure than stocks or bonds during wartimes. Inexpensive adaptations of costly couturier jewels like love birds or pheasants' wings in pink diamonds for blondes, in yellow diamonds for red-heads and brunettes, are good investments."

Peggy added that brunettes reflect diamonds better than blondes and cited the Duchess of Windsor who carries her jeweled tricolor schemes to her head. Under her famous little navy halos Wallis wears ruby and diamond earclips with a clip on her navy suit to boot. Champagne diamonds suit tawny colorings, stated Peggy (who wears her amusing, rather baroque jewels with great casualness) while blue sparklers are bewitching with white hands and deep wine-tinted nails. Peggy finally cleared an open question—the difference between square-cut and emerald-cut jewels. They are one and the same, but emerald-cut stones have clipped corners.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Upset by Husband's Harshness and Burden of Baby, Woman Wonders If She's Losing Her Mind; Asks Help

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: You are so kind in helping others that maybe you can help me. I suppose what I really need is the help of a psychiatrist, although I may be just run down and upset due to the strain I have been under. I have had a baby and am not very strong yet and my husband has been very indifferent to me. His only concern is my earning ability.

Last night he said things that hurt me very much and I cried and got very nervous, although I did not say much to him. By way of explaining my agitation, I said that my stomach hurt, and he replied that what was wrong with me was my head. So I would like to know if he is right.

My own reason for doubting my sanity is that I am always thinking of another man—a man who is not at all interested in me, I am sure. I believe that I am very sensitive to the attitude of my husband, and have suffered inwardly so much over his lack of sympathy and understanding that I have lost all love for him.

Is there any alternative to seeing a psychiatrist? I must learn if the trouble lies within myself; and how I can overcome the fault, if it is mine. If psychiatric counsel is needed, will you tell me where I may get such aid at a minimum charge? I shall thank you for an early reply.

NELLIE.

Desire for Poise Is Proof of Sanity

DEAR NELLIE: There is nothing "wrong with your head," except the mental confusion which invariably attends prolonged weariness and wretchedness. Proof of your essental sanity is supplied by your realization that something is wrong, either with your attitude or your husband's; and by your wish to understand, in order to correct, the underlying causes of the domestic friction.

I believe, as you do, that the problem requires psychiatric analysis; because, whereas you see only the "effects" of whatever personality conflict or individual emotional maladjustment exists, an able psychiatrist can guide you in looking beneath those surface "effects" into the causative crux of the difficulty. It is important, however, that you consult a psychiatrist of seasoned social experience, great intrinsic understanding of human nature, and thorough scientific training. And it is equally important that you give such a counsellor your sincere cooperation, if you would be greatly benefited.

Psychiatrists—as they themselves are first to admit—are not miracle workers; and none of them is greater as a scientist than he is as a human being. The greater his natural wisdom, the more sensitive his sympathies, the keener his intelligence, the broader his own experiences in the field of social relationships—the better the psychiatrist functions in his role of (shall we say?) doctor to personality.

I venture to remark this since many individuals seem disposed to discredit psychiatry and psychiatrists, because they (or some friend or acquaintance of theirs) was disappointed in a wistful expectation of being made, virtually overnight, into a radiantly happy and psychologically sound new man—as a result of some professional contact with this modern branch of healing.

And whereas the practitioner of psychiatry cannot transcend his own limitations, neither can he (however soaring his genius) make a first-class personality out of shoddy character material. So, may I repeat my suggestion that you exercise intelligent judgment in selecting a counsellor; and, having made a good choice, that you do your full share in working toward a successful solution of the problem that is to be jointly addressed.

Since you seek psychiatric assistance at "minimum charge," I suggest that you apply to the Washington Institue of Mental Hygiene, at 1464 Columbus road northwest, telephone ADams 1033. Originally a private philanthropic enterprise (known as the Washington Life Adjustment Center), the Institute is now publicly financed, for the purpose of giving psychiatric treatment free to persons who need it, but cannot afford the services of a private practitioner. For those who can afford to pay a small sum, the Institute has a "reference list" of specialists who take patients at moderate fees.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

A Woman's New York

—By Alice Hughes.

Dewey Is Accorded Use of Red Carpet At Grand Central; Is Town's Glamour Man

New York, May 22.

VISITING Golden Girls from Hollywood no longer have exclusive hullabaloo privileges at our Grand Central Depot, when the opulent Twentieth Century slides delicately to a stop. The famed red plush carpet is not spread these days only for the dainty hooves of such beautiful prancers as Dear Bobby Taylor or Dear Ty Power, with or without an Annabella.

ALICE HUGHES

For our town has its own little Presidential aspirant in the person of "Fightin' Tom" Dewey, terror of the sinner, and he is, of course, in a small way, an authentic glamor man. When he returns from one of his evangelistic tours, he is met by a large crowd as he steps manfully up the carpeted ramp, surrounded by station coppers, and gives out that big old smile as he looks at the cameramen's birdies. I have seen him attract a throng rivaling those which whoop for good old Joanie Crawford, the kiddies' perennial joy. Of course, there is a disgraceful feeling among some of the citizens that he should be right here running racketeers up trees and telephone poles. Faugh! Such skeptics don't deserve a glamor candidate.

On the domestic front The Peepul's Cherce is exquisitely situated. His helpmate, Frances Hutt Dewey, would make the prettiest First Lady ever to pour tea at 1600 Pennsylvania avenue. Thanks to her public appearances as a singer, Mrs. D.'s charm and poise are perfection, and while she says she will never make a political speech, she doesn't have to. If she'll take a few bows, 'twill suffice. Add to the perfect mamma the conventional two "kiddies," and you have a perfect setup in the little home for a Plumed Knight on the political rampage. Tommy may not be President, this whirl, but if and when he does, our city will be proud and happy to present one whose personal front and domestic background are so perfect that they were no doubt organized by Providence!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The ageless Gish sisters, who were movie stars when you and I were young, McGee, seem to have the "Life with Father" situation pretty well bottled up. Lillian is playing Vinnie Day in the Chicago company of this astonishingly successful comedy of New York life in the eighties, and now sister Dorothy will probably have the role in a third company to open in Boston come September. What a show it is—what a bonanza!

Maybe by the time you read these fateful words our pet grass - widower, Franchot Tone, will be married to a gorgeous blonde showgirl named Adele Jergens. He played the local field until he met this babe, and it has looked a serious case of late.

Personal choice for the loveliest young matron around the better race tracks—Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, Manuela or "Molly," from California. Young Alfie is now boss of our swank Belmont Park, and his young wife presides socially for him, and does it with great dignity and grace.

Singers of Today Must Work to Keep Figures, Says Jean Dickenson, Streamlined Entertainer

Star Attributes Her Health To Swimming

By Ida Jean Kain

TAKE A note from a songbird: Regardless of a woman's job, it is her business to be just as attractive as she can possibly make herself.

Boiled down somewhat, that expresses the viewpoint of Jean Dickenson, a radio singer who could swish past all the tests for glamour! And it has the dominant ring of truth, for glamour and obesity do not mix, and for many years the world of song was the most stubborn stronghold of avoirdupois. The singer with the golden voice was forgiven for resemblance to a piece of rare old Grand Rapids overstuffed!

Evidently, that era has gone by. And the fact should be recorded, with especial flourishes to make it stand out, for it has a meaning for any young woman bent upon a career. The public has been so sold upon the principles of merchandising that premium brains and talent are expected to come attractively packaged!

Her Figure Is Lovely

Jean Dickenson has a lovely figure. She weighs 115 pounds for her height of 5 feet 3 inches, and has these measurements: Bust, 34 inches; waist, 24½ inches; hips, 35 inches. Those are streamlines! But, besides, she has a look of radiant health that is unusual—and she gets it by spending an unusual amount of time in swimming off a Connecticut beach. Jean thinks that anyone who swims a great deal can have a slim figure without rigorous diet, and that is the secret of vitality plus slimness.

But for off-days, she relies on a few well chosen calisthenics. One of them is a waist reducer, which you may like:

POSITION: Lie on the back on the floor, and have feet extended straight down, arms straight up on floor overhead, to give the trunk a good starting stretch.

Strenuous Exercise

Another good exercise for the trunk muscles favored by this star is the following:

MOVEMENT: Raise right arm from the shoulder, right leg from the hip, as high in the air as possible. Hold for a second, relax, and repeat with left arm and leg. Then alternate, stretching right arm up with left leg. Raising the leg from the hip slims the hipline and the arm-to-leg stretch shrinks the midriff.

Joan does watch her diet. She likes fruits, vegetables and milk. And she thinks she has discovered a cure for cold—if taken in time! She goes on a fruit and vegetable regime for a day or so when she feels a cold coming on, and that usually settles it! At any rate, those three items make it no problem to keep her weight where it belongs!

Long Lived Family

Bowling Green, Ky. (AP).—Although Mr. and Mrs. Boone Hudson have six sons, three daughters, ten grandsons, one granddaughter, one great-grandson and one great-granddaughter, there has been only one death in the entire family. A son-in-law died recently. The Hudsons have been married 53 years.

Beauty Secrets

By CAROLYN ABBOTT

For Evening Glamour

DAY AND NIGHT hours require entirely different types of make-up. Artificial lights drain facial color so that heavier and more brilliant shades are necessary. Always test evening make-up under artificial light, but apply it under a strong daylight bulb. You can see better and there will be fewer rough edges.

Many Hollywood actresses, who are experts in applying cosmetics, have a few clever tricks reserved just for evening glamour. Olivia de Havilland, for example, dots her eyelids with brown-gray shadow, spreading it evenly to the brows, but using so little it merely darkens this area and appears perfectly natural. To her eyelashes she applies a bit of vaseline to soften them. The eyelashes are then darkened with brown mascara and tipped with black mascara for a brilliant effect.

Like Olivia, use a lighter shade of powder under a darker evening shade to give an opalescent glow to the skin. Mix a bit of green or orchid tones with your face powder to give a glowing effect under electric lights. These shades reflect rather than absorb artificial light and also warm skin tones. Cover the arms, throat and shoulders with white liquid powder and polish off with a chamois to remove excess.

Another of Olivia's tricks is to soften her lips with creams then apply liquid lip rouge with a piece of cotton on an orange stick. She follows this with two coats of lipstick well blotted with tissue.

Meandering Trees

Los Angeles (AP).—In an effort to achieve as much variety as possible in local horticulture, the Los Angeles Park Commission is experimenting with transplanting of trees and shrubs from all over the world. Latest shipments consists of distinctive plants from Tanganyika Territory, South Africa.

War Is Forgot as Mme. Horinouchi Gives an At Home to Many Friends

Talk Centers on Politics and the Weather As Dozens of National and Diplomatic Notables Call at Japanese Embassy

FOR ONCE war seemed to be forgotten yesterday afternoon when Mme. Horinouchi, wife of the Japanese Ambassador, was at home to a number of her friends. Talk turned on the weather ("Too bad it's raining, so we can't go into the lovely garden"); the hostess' attractive kimono ("Why don't Japanese women here wear them more often?"), and the exquisitie floral arrangements ("Did you ever see anything more beautiful than that gorgeous bouquet of calla lilies?").

Hope Ridings Miller

A strong Congressional accent was noted in the gathering. A few diplomats, members of the State Department and a scattering of other official Washingtonians and residentials were also in the crowd, which assumed sizable proportions during the latter half of the party.

The Ambassador received with his wife in the handsomely furnished drawing room. Low bowls here and there sprouted bouquets of lilies of the valley and roses. A gilded screen in front of one of the tall windows served as a background for Mme. Horinouchi's pretty ensemble, which featured a subtle blending of colors, typical of Japanese silks.

If you're a regular reader of this column, you've probably guessed clothes are not among my major interests. But the costume worn by yesterday's hostess was one worthy of special note. So I took it in, down to the final detail. Fashioned of soft dove-gray silk, it had a straight-cut skirt in shades of the softest pearl gray for a background of shadowy mountain ranges printed in shades of pale green blending into deep purple and beige.

No Japanese kimono would be complete without the obi, the waistband. The one setting off Mme. Horinouchi's costume yesterday was of heavy eggshell brocade, embroidered with plum blossoms and pine and blocked off in irregular squares with gold threads. Tiny toe sandals (zori) completed the attractive costume.

A TOWERING MASS of yellow roses centered a table at one end of the drawing room, and low vases of snapdragons were also part of the decorative scheme. The lavishly laden dining room table featured a tall bouquet of calla lilies flanked by four Japanese lanterns on dainty standards.

Between showers, guests wandered out to the terrace where a few small tables had been set up, and chairs were arranged in inviting clusters. But for the most part, the company collected and lingered in the dining room. Staying there for well over an hour, I heard a continuous round of talk, but not one reference to anything more internationally significant than Congressional campaigns, summer vacation plans, and coming debut parties.

AMONG THOSE PRESENT: Mme. Espil, very chic in a small powder blue straw hat, set off with a black feather, and a figured frock of blue and black (one of the few becoming print dresses I have seen this season—few people can wear them, you know); Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, lingering in the drawing room to chat with friends; Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, pausing on the way out for a brief talk with Mrs. Adolf A. Berle; Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, surrounded by friends; Miss Minnie Mae Fleming, arriving with Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck; Mrs. William D. Byron and Mrs. Goodloe Edgar enjoying the scenery on the terrace; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, making their way through the crowd and seeming to know everybody present.

STILL OTHERS there—Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Mrs. Sol Bloom and Miss Vera Bloom; Mrs. Richard M. Duncan; the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera; Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, the latter urging all her friends to stop by the headquarters of "Bundles for Britain;" Baroness von Below, Mrs. Peyton March, Mrs. McCeney Werlich; Maj. Felipe Munilla; the Minister of Thailand, Abhibal Rajamaitri; Mme. Fotitch, the Cuban Minister-Counselor and Senora de Baron; Mrs. Fred Rogers with Mrs. John L. McMillan; the Bulgarian Minister and Mme. Naoumoff; Mrs. Carroll Miller and Miss Pauletta Guffey, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem, Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., the Brazilian Naval Attache and Mme. Araujo, and many others.

CAPITAL SKETCHBOOK: They're saying around town that Arthur Vandenberg will be nominated on the eighth ballot in Philadelphia. Dinner table dopesters have figured it all out. Dewey will win the first three rounds; Taft the next four, and then the Senator from Michigan will come into the picture. "Jump on the Van wagon!" Col. Robert Guggenheim is advising friends . . . Mrs. Ford K. Brown, who is known to the book world as Leslie Ford, author of numerous mystery novels, is in town for a few days and is staying at the Shoreham . . . Yesterday she had lunching with her another writing lady, Mrs. E. W. Pavenstedt (Maude Parker), who recently returned to Washington after an extended stay in Texas and Florida.

The Assistant Secretary of Labor and Mrs. Charles V. McLaughlin have as their guest Mrs. John H. Carroll, of Cheyenne, Wyo.

The Special Assistant to the Secretary of State and Mrs. Joseph Edward Davies have issued invitations to two teas. The first will take place on Tuesday, May 28. The second is set for June 4.

Mrs. Ollie James has returned to her apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street after spending the winter in Panama.

Miss Mildred Painter, whose engagement to Henry Roy Harding was announced recently, has chosen June 1 as her wedding day. The ceremony will take place in the Primitive Baptist Church.

Mrs. John Herbert will entertain at a luncheon tomorrow at her home, 4612 Reservoir road. Among the guests will be Mrs. Jennings Randolph, Mrs. Lorenzo Martin, Mrs. Richard Magee, Mrs. Philip Buettner, Miss Margaret White and Miss Dorothea Buettner.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Klein have moved into their new home at 5265 Nebraska avenue.

Mrs. Max Pimes has returned to Washington after a visit to her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Miller, in Atlantic City.

Mr. Montgomery, Miss Gennari Wed

The wedding of Miss Doris Helen Gennari, daughter of Mrs. Charles A. Berry, of Washington, to George Montgomery, son of Mrs. Jane Montgomery, also of this city, took place last night at 8 o'clock at the rectory of the Holy Comforter Church.

The bride wore a beige frock of lace with dusty rose accessories Comforter Church. Ferns and and a corsage of pink roses. Her matron of honor and only attendant, Mrs. Mary H. Juliano, was in pink lace with matching accessories and a corsage of yellow roses. Clifton Shepherd was best man.

A reception at the Pythian Temple followed the ceremony. After a honeymoon the couple will reside at 1721 Twenty-ninth street.

Many Visitors At Wednesday Supper Dance

Princess Rospigliosi And Two Daughters Are Among Guests

There were many out-of-town guests at the third of a series of four Wednesday supper dances, which took place last night at the 1925 F street club.

Princess Laura Rospigliosi, of New York, and her daughters, the Princesses Camilla and Francesca Rospigliosi, were among the guests of Mrs. Francis Whitten at cocktails before the dinner and dance. Their cousins, Arthur Bradley Campbell and the Misses Isabelle and Marjorie Meuser, were also in the party.

Guests Attend From Baltimore

Princess Laura Rospigliosi has many friends here, as she and her husband used to visit Sir Esme Howard, British Ambassador at Washington, in the 'twenties, and Lady Howard. The latter is the aunt of Prince Rospigliosi, who after his divorce, is making his home in Italy.

Mrs. Hugh O'Donnell, chairman of the dances, was among the guests at the cocktail party given by British Embassy Secretary Christopher Bramwell before the dance. It was Mrs. O'Donnell's birthday, and she received many good wishes, also many compliments on her spring frock of red and white checks.

Other guests of Mr. Bramwell included Clarence Hewes and his niece, Miss Ellen Hewes Flowerree; Mrs. Nini Woodward, who has returned from New York for another visit with Mrs. Reynolds Hitt; Mr. and Mrs. Ted MacCauley, Mr. and Mrs. Chase Donaldson, John Galliher and Spottswood White.

Among the out-of-towners present were Mr. and Mrs. William MacMillan, of Baltimore, who were the guests of Robert Buell, of the State Department. Mrs. MacMillan is a cousin of Mrs. O'Donnell.

The Watsons Fete Friends

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Watson were hosts to a large gathering at their home on Massachusetts avenue. Among those invited to their party were Mr. Campbell, the Misses Meuser, Lady Maureen Noel, Miss Bambie McKenna, Miss Eleanor Meem, Miss Josephine Boyle, Mr. and Mrs. William Lacy, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mr. and Mrs. Newbold Walmsley, Mr. and Mrs. William MacCracken, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Downs and Norton Murray.

Also James Parks, Denys Smith, Jack Vietor, John Stonborough, William Mitchell, Smith and De-Long Bowman, Laurence Bungardeanu, Waverly Taylor, Wolcott Waggaman and Jock Merriam.

'Nerves' Deprive Wilmington Show Of Robert Baby

Tiny Alice Birney Robert—aged 15 months—will not compete in the Wilmington Horse Show as had been expected. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood ("Chip") Robert, who created quite a stir by riding in the recent Washington Horse Show, will be bundled off to Sea Island, Ga., for her "nerves," the end of this week. The strain of riding, dressed in custom-made riding togs, was a little too much for the brown-eyed lass. Mrs. Robert will join her daughter in Sea Island within a week or two.

The Wilmington Horse Show, which starts today and continues through Saturday, is expected to have a large turnout from this city and the nearby hunting country. The event will be held at the lovely estate of Mr. and Mrs. Norman P. Rood, Meadows on the Brandywine. Numerous social functions have been planned to entertain the exhibitors and guests including dinner parties and luncheons. The annual subscription dances at the Vicmead Hunt Club will be given Saturday night.

Notables of the Diplomatic Set Take Boxes for Variety Show Tomorrow Night

The Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz are among the many notables in the diplomatic set who are boxholders and patrons for the variety show to be given tomorrow evening at the Mayflower.

The list includes the French Ambasssador, Count de Saint-Quentin; the Counselor of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Bunge; Justice Harold M. Stephens, Commander and Mrs. Frank Slingluff, jr., Mrs. Emile Berliner, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Joseph Callahan, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Emery, Miss Agnes G. Gegan, Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, Mrs. Mary A. Rice, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Stohlman, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Patrick Tumulty, Miss Mary T. Waggaman and Mrs. John Walsh.

Miss Marianita Valdes, sub-deb daughter of the former President of the Puerto Rican Senate and Mrs. Valdes will make her first public appearance as a soloist and will accompany some of her Puerto Rican pastorales with the strumming of her own guitar.

Mrs. Albert H. Lawson, mezzo-soprano on the program, is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston, where she has been prominently identified with radio broadcasting.

Proceeds for the benefit will be used to pay the interest on the debt of St. Gertrude's School of Arts and Crafts. Miss Mary Agnes Sweeney is chairman of the entertainment committee, and Mrs. Augustus E. Giegengack is in charge of the tickets.

Mural to Be Dedicated At Congress Library

Archibald MacLeish, Librarian of Congress, has issued invitations to the dedication of a mural, "The Arms of Christopher Columbus," in the Hispanic room of the Library of Congress on Tuesday, May 28, at 3:30 p. m.

The Undersecretary of State, Sumner Welles, will speak at the ceremony, and the program for the afternoon will include music by a string quartet of the United States Marine Band.

About the Town

with DUDLEY HARMON

MRS. HAROLD H. SIMS has decided to make her future home in Montreal, where her late husband's family resides. She will leave here July 1, but intends to return for frequent visits as she has many friends in the Capital.

PROBABLY A LOT of Americans are wishing these days that the Italian Foreign Office had never made exceptions to the rule that its diplomats can marry only Italians. As reports come in that Mussolini is preparing to get in on the big grab, Washington is thinking of the many attractive Americans whose husbands are his diplomats.

Only 12 months ago the former Betty Hardie was married to Marquis Benedetto Capomazza after a year's struggle to obtain permission from the Italian government. They are now living in Rome. Countess Roberti, the former Mary Hammond, was one of the most ornamental members of Capital society until she went to Mexico City last winter with her diplomat husband. Another almost as well known is Countess Natalie Vitetti, who has frequently visited her brother, Robert Coe, and who is a goddaughter of Mrs. Lawrence Townsend. Her husband is with the foreign office in Rome.

Party Planned For Miss Evans

Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans have issued invitations to a reception in honor of their debutante daughter, Miss Mariana Evans, on Tuesday, June 18, at the Chevy Chase Club from 4:30 to 7.

Miss Evans is expected to return to Washington shortly from Ward Belmont College in Nashville, Tenn. The date of her debut was chosen especially so her brother, Phillip Evans, could attend. He is a student at Sewanee College.

If the weather is fair, the reception will be held on the lawn of the club. Mr. and Mrs. Evans are prominent in social and civic circles of the Capital.

Cathedral Bridge Party at Tuxeden

More than 500 invitations have been issued for a silver tea and bridge benefit to be held this afternoon from 3 to 7 o'clock at Tuxeden, home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, 5415 Edgemoor lane, Bethesda.

Proceeds will go to the National Cathedral Association through whose members the program of Washington Cathedral on Mount St. Alban is partially maintained. Walter B. Clarkson, president of the association, will speak informally.

The committee sponsoring the tea and bridge to take place in the Tuckerman gardens and house includes Mrs. James E. Freeman, Mrs. Noble C. Powell, Mrs. Frederick H. Gillett, Mrs. Robert S. Chew, Mrs. Albert H. Lucas, Mrs. Raymond L. Wolven, Mrs. Hennen Jennings, Mrs. Charles Warren, Mrs. Philip Edgar Bradley and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman.

Marya Thompson's Tea Postponed

Owing to illness, Mrs. C. Stanley Thompson is obliged to postpone the tea she was to have given June 4 at 2400 Sixteenth street for her debutante daughter, Miss Marya Bayard Thompson.

Miss Thompson is a senior at the Cathedral School. Her mother has been making her home in New York this winter.

Virginia Cocalis Engaged to Wed

Mrs. S. D. Cocalis, of Elizabeth and Deal, N. J., has announced the engagement of her daughter, Virginia, to George Edwin McMillan, of Knoxville, Tenn.

The bride-elect, who graduated from Wellesley College, in 1937, is working for the Farm Security Administration in Washington. The wedding will take place early in July.

Miss MacWillie To Give Tea

Miss Margaret MacWillie, daughter of Mrs. Alexander MacWillie, of New York, will entertain at a tea at her home in New York on Friday afternoon. The party will be followed by a wedding rehearsal and a dinner party in the garden of the Ambassador Hotel in New York in honor of Miss Nancy Emery Harrington and Poinsett Nowell Littlefield, whose marriage takes place on Saturday in the Chapel of the Little Church Around the Corner.

Mr. Littlefield, of Philadelphia, Pa., is the son of Mrs. William Lord Littlefield, of this city and Alexandria, Va., and the late Capt. Littlefield. The prospective bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Emery Harrington, of Winthrop, Mass.

The families of the affianced couple will arrive in New York City later this week for the wedding and will stop at the Ambassador Hotel there.

Mrs. J. R. Vose Gives Party At Mayflower

Gen. and Mrs. Murray Are Among Notables To Attend Affair

Mrs. J. Redfield Vose gave a large cocktail party, followed by supper, yesterday afternoon in the Pan-American room of the Mayflower.

Spring flowers, orchid and pale yellow predominating, transformed the room into a flower garden. Mrs. Vose wore a pastel blue-gray frock of organza with a wide-brimmed navy hat.

Among the guests were Gen. and Mrs. Maxwell Murray, Gen. H. K. Loughry, Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Loman, of Alaska, Mrs. Stewart Walker, Mrs. Strickland Gillilan, Maj. and Mrs. Horace B. Smith, Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Col. and Mrs. John Morrow, the Misses Mary and Betty Wright and Dr. and Mrs. Paul L. Powles, of Martinsburg, W. Va.

Mrs. Benjamin Smith, Mrs. Arthur Wright and Mrs. Charles Williamson were among those assisting.

Miss Connolly Is Hostess

Miss Eleanor Connolly was hostess yesterday at a concert and tea given by the Junior College students of the Georgetown Visitation Convent for parents and friends of the students. She was assisted by the Junior College Glee Club, which also gave a program, together with the speech class.

Tea was served from a table centered with snapdragons and yellow iris. Pouring were Mrs. J. Edgar Murdock and Miss Margaret Shea.

Among the guests were the Rev. Daniel E. Power, the Rev. David T. Madden, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Gallagher, Mrs. Leo Brison Norris, Mrs. John P. McGrath, Mrs. Carlyle Floechker, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Conroy, Mrs. Marie Ray Forrest and Mrs. Basil Harris.

Choral Banquet Tonight

The annual spring banquet of the Washington Choral Society will be held tonight at the Kennedy-Warren with Myron W. Whitney, president of the society, Miss Grace Dunham Guest of the advisory committee, and Louis A. Potter, director of the chorus, as guests of honor. The committee chairman is Miss Jane Hanna, assisted by Miss Martha Bingham, Miss Beatrice Bulla, Sam Goodson, S. C. Tupman and Harry E. Yeide, president of the chorus.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

THE MOON COMING UP over the Potomac—an accordion player wandering from group to group—made the party given by Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Matheson the other evening at their home, Wellington, seem like something out of fairyland.

Starting out as a cocktail affair, the party ended up as a supper for relatives and close friends of the guests of honor, Miss Lucy Bayne Proctor and her fiance, Aldridge Dudley, of Middleburg.

AT SUPPER the older people, who numbered about 20, were seated at small tables in the spacious ballroom, and the younger set sat at tables set up in the garden. Among the guests were two recently married couples —Dr. and Mrs. Henry Beall Gwynn, of Washington, and Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Rathbone Smith, of Alexandria.

When the moon came up, some really good singing began. Mrs. Yelverton Garnett, jr., of Washington, formerly Miss Mildred McKenney, of Richmond, and a lovely blonde, has a wonderful voice, and she, Patricia Prochnik, William P. Arnold and Joe Gwynn lead song after song.

OTHER GUESTS WERE Miss Proctor's mother and stepfather, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Goodacre; her aunt, Mrs. Guy Castle; her uncle, Dr. J. Breckinridge Bayne, and Mrs. Bayne; Mr. Dudley's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Aldridge Dudley, of Middleburg; his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Harrison; Mr. and Mrs. William Arnold sr., Mr. and Mrs. William A. Moncure, Mr. and Mrs. Millard West, Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Donald DeVeau, Mr. and Mrs. Francis C. Almirall and Mrs. John Mann.

ALSO MRS. CHARLES THOMPSON, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thompson, jr., Miss Stellita Stapleton, Miss Eleanor Flood, Miss Aileen Harris, Mrs. Julian Burke, Anderton Burke, Jack Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Collins, of Harmony Hall, Md., Miss Anne Barrett, of Warrenton; Miss Mary Owen Lyon, Miss Elizabeth Mayo Atkinson, Robert Sharp, Mackenzie Tabb and Richard Tayloe, all from Virginia.

Among members of the wedding party present were the Misses Natalie Sutherland, Yolanda Alfaro, Joan McKenna, Linwood Antrim and Rutherford Moncure, of Richmond; Frank Sterrett, of Washington; John Breckinridge, of Lexington, Ky., and Colin MacLeod, jr., of Middleburg.

MISS PHYLLIS RICHARDSON, who will be graduated in June from the Warrenton Country School, entertained her class at a buffet supper last night at White House, the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Richardson. The girls were accompanied by Mlle. Bouligny, headmistress of the school; Mrs. Lindsey Fitch, and Miss Florence White.

The students present included the Misses Nancy Carroll Draper, Lorraine Deinard, Jane Dillings, Barbara Bowes, Charlotte Collins, Jane Dudley, Janet Hossman, Sallie Hunter, Barbara Kay, Charlotte Moffitt, Sue Sullivan, Diana Taylor, Joan Emory, Peggy Towles, Sally Spilman, Patsy Ann Benoit and Jane Leiminger.

P.-T. A. Asks National Representation for D. C.

Convention of District Congress Tables Plan to Indorse Suffrage on Local Issues After Long, Heated Debate

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

National representation for the District was indorsed by a vote of 236 to 144 yesterday by the State convention of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, in session at the departmental auditorium. The resolution to indorse local representation was tabled after a long and heated discussion.

Mrs. Charles H. Pierce, of the McKinley High School Association, although her name appeared on the report of the committee which has presented the resolution favoring national representation, had changed her mind in the meantime, and spoke in opposition to it yesterday.

Mrs. William A. Kletzer, of Portland, Oreg., president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, was called on by Mrs. C. D. Lowe, local president, to clarify the position of the organization in relation to political questions. She explained that the Parent-Teacher Congress was concerned with the science of government as distinguished from partisan politics, and said that in this instance, the question was one of the rights of citizens in a democracy.

She advised the local congress: "If you as residents of Washington ever get control of your public schools, don't sit idly by, but keep informed as to what is going on and see to it that they are kept at the standards you desire.

Mrs. Kletzer was emphatic in the statement that the Parent-Teacher Congress would "never be inveigled into partisan politics but will always be a functioning agency in this democracy."

Dr. M. M. Chambers, of the staff of the American Youth Commission, in an address at the morning session declared the war in Europe would not solve the problems of American youth.

Although the demand for war materials is stimulating certain industries, he said, its spread over larger areas cuts off our foreign markets and disrupts our exports in other lines. New jobs in war industries will be mostly for mature skilled workers, and will have little effect on our reservoir of 4,000,000 jobless youth, the speaker said.

The American Youth Commission of the American Council on Education recommends that every youth above 16 who is out of school and cannot find a job should be given useful part-time employment under public auspices. It also urges the merging of thousands of small school districts into larger and more efficient units, better apportionment of State aid to local schools, and immediate Federal aid to the States for general educational purposes.

These measures, said Dr. Chambers, are essential to the genuine internal soundness which is a basic element in national defense. Speaking of the District of Columbia schools, he paid high tribute to the Board of Education and expressed the hope that its authority would not be taken away piecemeal and scattered among other agencies of government.

Pointing out that there are already 575 junior colleges in the country, he raised the question of whether and how soon this city should add a public junior college to its school system.

There were 1,329 registrations at the convention, of which 806 were of accredited delegates, the largest attendance on record at a local convention.

Last night the annual fellowship dinner was held at the Carlton Hotel with Mrs. Charles B. Sinclair, committee chairman, and Mrs. Edward R. Seal, toastmistress. The program featured a skit, "Not My Day—But P.-T. A.," written by Mrs. Seal and presented by her and Mrs. Evelyn Bright Buckley. There was also music by the Mothersingers and Paul Gotwals, soloist.

Mary Haworth Discusses 'Ugly Duckling'

"Relationships within the home"—the problem of the "ugly duckling daughter," the goodnight kiss for high school boys and girls and the grandparent in the home were discussed with the Mothers' Council of the Girl Reserve Department of the Y. W. C. A. yesterday by Mary Haworth, of The Post.

Miss Haworth led a discussion at the annual mothers conference at Vacation Lodge, in Cherrydale, Va. She reached the conclusion with members of the group that, in the case of the "ugly duckling," no comparison should ever be drawn between her and the more attractive and talented sister, but each child should be given a conviction of his individual worth.

The grandparent in the home, it was decided, should conform to the design-for-living established by the parents, cooperating with them in their difficult social role of giving the youngsters a fair deal and seeing to it that the elder generation receives the respect and consideration that is its due. An incooperative grandparent should be dealt with as firmly as a "problem child," it was agreed.

On the question of the goodnight kiss a problem with which parents are constantly confronted, the mothers concurred with Miss Haworth in the opinion that "since a kiss is a traditional expression of esteem and affection, between friends, kin, parents and children, it is insincere and evasive to label a 'kiss,' as such, wrong."

"Right emotional and social attitudes developed in a child from earliest years will enable him to meet this adolescent conundrum in a spirit of good taste and personal integrity," it was decided. Youngsters who have a healthy, normal social life and who enjoy a harmonious mental comradeship with parents, usually are instinctively and even vigorously opposed to casual kissing, the discussion indicated.

Mrs. Harold D. Saunders, chairman of the council, presided and the program also included a talk on "Religion in the Home" by Dr. Warren D. Bowman, of the Church of the Brethren. Discussion groups on finance and leisure time followed with Mrs. Earl Smith, Mrs. D. J. Ryan, Mrs. Max Proffitt and Mrs. Hugo Rankin as leaders.

Last night there was a dinner followed by a talk on "Finance in the Home," by Dr. Faith Williams of the Department of Labor; music by Beatrice Pinckney Jones, pianist, and a general discussion of findings of smaller groups led by Mrs. Joseph Grigsby, chairman of the girl reserve committee.

Mrs. Proffitt will lead a discussion today on "Personal Inventory."

Mrs. Black To Give Tea

Mrs. Hugo L. Black will be hostess at a garden tea for the benefit of the Southern Summer School for Workers on Saturday afternoon, from 4 to 6 o'clock. Mrs. Black will receive guests in the garden of her home in Alexandria, assisted by Mrs. Louise Leonard McLaren, director of the school, and Mrs. Clifford Durr, chairman of the benefit committee. Proceeds will be used for student scholarships to the school.

Mrs. Roosevelt heads the list of sponsors for the party, which includes also Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. Louis D. Brandeis, Mrs. Stanley Reed, Associate Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, Mrs. Robert M. La Follette, and Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Voorhis.

The Southern Summer School for Workers has been held every year since 1927 in North Carolina, to help Southern working men and women to receive the educational training they need and want in adjusting to the transition from the old agricultural economy to the new industrial South.

C.D.A. to Honor Mary Duffy

Miss Mary C. Duffy, supreme regent of the Catholic Daughters of America, will be honored by the Catholic Daughters of Maryland at a dinner at the Columbia Country Club, Chevy Chase, Md., on Saturday evening at 8 o'clock.

Miss Duffy was decorated by Pope Pius XI for outstanding work among Catholic laity, and is the only woman, outside of Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, that has been made an honorary member of the Midwest Antiguain Club.

Miss Katharine M. Rosney, national secretary, who is accompanying Miss Duffy on her trip through the South, will be present as a guest of the Maryland State Court.

Oriental Shrine Installation Here Tonight

Grand High Priestess Mrs. George Duval; Meeting Ends Tonight

The Ladies Oriental Shrine tonight will close its annual national convention at the Mayflower Hotel with the installation of grand officers, headed by Mrs. George Duval, of this city, as grand high priestess.

Others will include: Grand princess, Mrs. George F. Holland, Dayton, Ohio; grand associate princess, Mrs. W. E. Edmonston, Columbus, Ohio; grand recorder, Mrs. Charles J. Hartung, Toledo, Ohio; grand treasurer, Mrs. Elizabeth Robishaw, Shaker Heights, Ohio; grand first ceremonial lady, Mrs. William W. MacLeod, Erie, Pa.; grand second ceremonial lady, Eva Heal, Ontario, Canada; grand oriental guide, Mrs. William P. Cates, Albany, N. Y.; grand marshal, Mrs. John Buetler, Philadelphia; grand inner guard, Mrs. Eva Heal, nOtario, Canada; grand outer guard, newly elected officer of this convention, Mrs. Ralph Shaw, Akron, Ohio; grand trustee, the outgoing grand high priestess, Mrs. Roy L. Craig, of Indianapolis.

The convention delegates yesterday morning collected a voluntary contribution of $25 which will be turned over to the District of Columbia Chapter of the American Red Cross toward its quota in the war relief drive.

Betrothal Told

Mr. and Mrs. Isadore Brown announce the engagement of their daughter, Lucille, to Harry L. Kessler, son of Mrs. Sarah Kessler, of Philadelphia. The wedding will take place in the autumn.

Westhampton Alumnae Here Sponsoring Benefit Showing of English Movie

WHEN YOU THINK of May Thompson Evans, you probably connect her right away with the women's division of the Democratic National Committee—and there's no mistake in that—but other groups have a claim on her too. One is the Westhampton College Alumnae Association of the University of Richmond, of which she is national president.

MAY THOMPSON EVANS

The Washington alumnae are sponsoring a benefit showing of the English motion picture, "The Mill on the Floss" Tuesday evening, June 4, for the Southampton alumnae fund.

Mrs. Henry L. Butler, local president, is being assisted in arrangements by Miss Helen Covey, an editor of the National Geographic News Weekly.

TRIPPING AROUND—Mrs. William Walter Smith (Nell V. Smith to the Professional Writers' Club and the League of American Pen Women) will return Sunday from a visit in New York, and next week plans to visit Chicago, Kansas City and Iowa, where papers publish the Washington column she writes. One objective of her Western trip is to attend the meeting of the Iowa Press Club June 15.

From there she will go to San Francisco whence she hopes to sail for Honolulu to be gone until September. Last summer, she was in the Scandinavian countries and returned just as the war began.

EQUAL RIGHTS—The Arlington County Soroptimist Club tonight will be addressed by Mrs Helen Hunt West, editor of Equal Rights, official magazine of the National Woman's Party. The meeting will be at the Little Tea House.

Miss Gertrude L. Crocker, legislative chairman of the club, is in charge of the meeting and will have as her dinner guests delegates who will attend the national convention in Salt Lake City next month, from the Soroptimist clubs of Washington, Montgomery County, Prince Georges, Alexandria, Baltimore and Philadelphia.

PLAN CONVENTION—The first conclave of the Eastern Province of Delta Theta Chi, national sorority, will be held here Saturday and Sunday with headquarters at the Dodge Hotel. The Eastern Province is composed of chapters in Cumberland, Md.; Baltimore, Richmond and Washington. Members will be present from these four chapters and also from Chicago, Philadelphia and New York.

The local officers for the coming year are Mrs. Helen Williams, president; Miss Mary Callagan, vice president; Miss Mildred Brown, recording secretary; Miss Maureen McKee, treasurer; Mrs. Mary McKey, corresponding secretary, and Miss Dora Dunn, sergeant at arms.

Eberharter Revives D. C. Liquor Inquiry

Committee Called To Hear Report on Suggested Changes

The long dormant District liquor investigation was revived yesterday when Representative Eberharter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, called a meeting of his special subcommittee of the House District Committee to consider a report on the inquiry.

Eberharter said that he had drawn up his recommendations for changes in the alcoholic beverage act and would submit them to the subcommittee for approval. Afterward the entire report will be presented to the full committee.

No revolutionary changes in the system of selling liquor in Washington are expected to be proposed in the report despite discussions of a dispensary system.

A hearing on the controversial bills to regulate the practice of dentistry and podiatry in Washington will be held at 10:30 o'clock this morning by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Idaho.

Both measures passed the House, but some objections have been made to the Senate District Committee against certain of their provisions. Clark was named chairman of a subcommittee to hear the protests.

A scheduled conference on the 1941 District supply bill was postponed yesterday until Tuesday because Representative Caldwell (Democrat), of Florida, chairman of the House managers, was called to Florida.

Summer Safety Drive Opens To Save Lives of Children

Police, Schools, AAA Join in Efforts To Prevent Traffic Deaths During Vacation; Van Duzer Appeals to Parents

By Howard F. Wentworth

Post Staff Writer

Programs to protect youngsters who will spend their playtime on Washington streets at the close of school were begun on three fronts yesterday.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, and the American Automobile Association joined in city-wide efforts to prevent child traffic casualties during summer vacation months.

Determined that children shall form little or no part of the summer accident toll, safety exponents called upon parents and the general motoring public to support aims of the various projects.

15 Killed Last Year

Last year, 15 children were killed—10 of them while playing in the streets or crossing in the middle of blocks.

Eleven of the fatalities occurred between May 1 and October 1. Four of the total number who lost their lives were under 10. Only one was a girl.

Commenting on the fact that school months accounted for only three of the lives lost, Dr. Ballou warned that "danger months" are still ahead and appealed to residents of Washington to do their part in preventing the needless killing of children.

In a letter to Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the American Automobile Association, Dr. Ballou praised the work of school boy patrolmen in school months, but pointed out that youngsters using the streets are without this protection in the vacation period.

He said that child safety is "primarily the responsibility of parents," but added that remaining weeks of school will especially be devoted to preparing youngsters for a safe summer.

Teachers to Help

"Teachers," said Dr. Ballou, "have been requested to give appropriate attention according to the age of pupils to this serious matter of safety. In the cases of young children, each teacher will give words of advice and caution just before the dismissal periods at noon and in the afternoon."

He added that special occasions will be observed before the June closing of classes to prepare children for safe vacations.

"I appeal to parents," Van Duzer said, "to instill safety into the minds of their children. We can do our share of offering safeguards, but without home training we are completely at a loss to cope with the problem."

Manager Cleveland, of the A. A. A., announced that his organization is planning an elaborate child protection program. This, he said, will include safe recreation facilities and summer-long efforts to see that "junior" returns safely home after he leaves for a play spell.

B. H. McGinn, Harbormaster, Is Dead at 66

Baltimore Rites Set Saturday for Veteran City Official

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, May 22.—Funeral services will be held at 8:30 a. m. Saturday for Bernard H. McGinn, city harbormaster for 11 years, who died last night of a heart attack at his home.

Before becoming harbormaster, McGinn had served as superintendent of stores for the city of Baltimore, and for 30 years as chief storekeeper for the Baltimore Transit Co. He was 66.

Mrs. Lena R. Todd

Charlottesville, Va., May 22.—Funeral rites for Mrs. Lena Rixey Todd, 54, wife of Dr. Gordon Todd, a graduate of the medical school at the University of Virginia, were held this afternoon from her home in Princeton, W. Va. Mrs. Todd was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Eppa Rixey, former residents of Charlottesville, and spent her early life here. Besides her husband, she is survived by one son, Gordon Todd, jr., who will graduate in medicine at the University of Virginia in June.

Mrs. Margaret McCoy

Shenandoah, Va., May 22.—Funeral services were held here today for Mrs. Margaret McCoy, 52, wife of H. D. McCoy, of Alexandria. She was taken ill in Washington several weeks ago at the home of her adopted daughter, Mrs. Robert Sloan. She died in Harrisonburg Saturday at the hospital.

Mrs. Martha V. Fravel

Strasburg, Va., May 22.—Funeral services for Mrs. Martha Virginia Fravel, who died last night at her home in Harrisville ten days after celebrating her ninety-first birthday anniversary, will be held Friday afternoon in the Harrisville Reformed Church. Mrs. Fravel is survived by five children, 22 grandchildren, 34 great-grandchildren and 10 great-great-grandchildren.

Albert L. Deavers

Rileyville, Va., May 22.—Funeral services were held today for Albert Lee Deavers, 75, of near Rileyville.

Md. Democrats Name Tydings If Roosevelt Does Not Run

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, May 22.—Maryland Democrats approved a restricted "favorite-son" delegation to the Chicago national convention today, binding Maryland's 16 Presidential votes to Senator Millard E. Tydings only if President Roosevelt fails to seek a third term.

Senator Tydings was reelected in 1938 despite being on the New Deal "purge" list.

Acting unanimously, the Tydings-controlled State convention adopted this "if and when" resolution:

"A majority of the delegates to the Democratic national convention from other States are already instructed or pledged to vote for President Roosevelt on the first ballot for renomination.

"This is sufficient to renominate the President.

"The Maryland delegates . . . are instructed to vote for United States Senator Millard E. Tydings for nomination to the Presidency of the United States unless the President should elect to accept the nomination for a third term, in which event the members of the Maryland delegation . . . are free as individuals to vote on the first ballot for whomever they choose."

Tydings told the convention that there would be no contest if the President decided to run, but added "I do not believe (he) wants a third term."

"But in the next seven weeks, we can see what the situation is, not only at home but also abroad," Tydings, who was named a delegate-at-large to the national convention, continued. "I hope that, at Chicago, we may do the right thing, whatever the exigencies of the situation may be."

The State meeting was marked by perfect surface harmony. At the same time, no mention was made of two issues which kept the pre-convention caucuses in considerable uproar. One was a proposal of leaders to have the national delegation name William P. Lane, of Hagerstown, as national committeeman.

The other revolved about Mrs Elizabeth H. Menefee's continuance as national committeewoman. Three candidates were in the field to succeed her, and party leaders apparently were unable to settle the behind-the-scenes contest.

It was generally understood however, that considerable early opposition to Lane had been overcome and that he would be named.

Formal nomination of Senator George L. Radcliffe as a candidate to succeed himself was made unanimous after Howard Bruce, retiring national committeeman and Radcliffe's defeated primary opponent, withdrew his name from the convention.

Bruce urged a united party front in November, and called upon his supporters to back Radcliffe "wholeheartedly."

In addition to Tydings, the Delegates-at-large included Bruce, Radcliffe, Gov. O'Conor, Mayor Howard W. Jackson, former Gov. Emerson C. Harrington, Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, and Philip Perlman, former city solicitor of Baltimore.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

St. Louis, May 22.— More the pity is it that the Washington pitching staff this year begins and ends with Dutch Leonard. This is the season when Clark Griffith apparently missed the boat. Wide open to the Nats was the first division if they could summon even some tolerable pitching. They've greeted opportunity with a kick in the slats.

POVICH

A pretty good ball team is a-wasting for the lack of a couple of strong-arm guys who can get the ball over the plate. In every other respect except pitching, Griffith and Bucky Harris have built well. The Nats of 1940 are better run-getters than any Washington team since 1933. Defensively, it is also the best Washington club since the Nats last won a pennant.

The wisdom of last winter's trade that fetched Gerald Walker from Chicago has been repeatedly demonstrated. Walker is producing for the Nats the game-busting punch that Goose Goslin used to provide. He's a clutch hitter, if a clutch hitter ever lived. Taft Wright, who went to the White Sox in the deal can hit .400, but the Nats will nevertheless be the winner in that trade.

Virtually every day the Nats' speed on the bases has been proving itself. Washington runners are scoring from second, and dashing from first to third on singles in a manner which Washington runners rarely did before. Chaps like Walker and George Case and Johnny Welaj and Buddy Lewis have actually been worrying opposing pitchers out of runs and precipitating important errors by enemy catchers.

Even with Cecil Travis in a prolonged batting slump, the Nats have been scoring runs—enough runs to win 75 per cent of their games if they had happened to be blessed with even decent pitching. Twice Washington pitchers have forced the winning run across the plate this year and no team in the league has suffered from the base-on-balls plague as much as the Nats.

They couldn't hold a 7-4 lead in the last three innings at Chicago the other day, and Manager Bucky Harris is tremulous whenever anybody but Leonard is pitching for the Nats. When he gazes toward his bull pen for a relief pitcher and notes only such as Alex Carrasquel, Rene Monteagudo, Bucky Jacobs and Walter Masterson, he doubtless feels an urge to wave 'em all to the bench and start throwing his own nothing-ball up to the plate.

There have been occasions during the past three weeks when Rick Ferrell, throwing the ball back to the pitcher, has put more on it than it had when it came to him, and more accurately, too. Ferrell, incidentally, has thrown out the last five men who attempted to steal a base on him despite the fact that careless Washington pitchers allowed them to get big leads. It required superb throwing by Ferrell, and that is what he has been giving the club.

Returning to Griffith's failure, or inability, to provide the club with better pitching, maybe we shouldn't be too harsh on the old gentleman. After all, there is no ready mart where a winning pitcher can be bought or otherwise acquired. It isn't particularly a question of purchase price. If it were, Tom Yawkey and all his millions could guarantee the pennant for his hefty-hitting Red Sox by buying the club the pitching talent it needs.

The vagaries of baseball were never more strikingly illustrated than during the past week, when the Detroit Tigers released Freddie Hutchinson to the minors. He cost them $75,000 in cash and players. The reason he wasn't kept with the club was because a Detroit sandlotter named Harold Newhouser, who didn't cost the Tigers a dime, demonstrated that he was twice as good a pitcher as the costly Hutchinson.

Bucky Harris is yearning out loud for a Fred Marberry who can hold some of the leads the Nats pile up for his pitchers. He doesn't know where his relief pitching is coming from, and with the Nats' starting pitchers what they are, Harris needs relief pitching no less than France needs an army. It's sort of too bad. The Nats could have gone a long way this year.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, May 22.—One-half of the world's muddleweight championship will be unmuddled tomorrow night at the Garden when Ceferino Garcia and Ken Overlin fight for the New York end of the title. Then, in a day or two, plans probably will be announced pertaining to a complete solution of the balmy chaos, because Nate Druxman, a Seattle promoter who owns Al Hostak, the other muddleweight champion, is in New York and has been closeted long enough with Mike Jacobs to give Mike time enough to get a three-year lease on Hostak, Druxman and Puget Sound's salmon kennels.

CONSIDINE

The public's apathy toward the whole business of having two middleweight champions —Garcia and Hostak—is reflected in the fact that Jacobs has put what we call a $5 top on tomorrow's fight. This is the cheapest priced title fight ever held in the Garden, but it won't be the worst by a long shot. The Louis-Paycheck thing, at $16.50 tops, set an enduring record along those lines.

The short-circuited thinking of the country's boxing commissions is hilariously pointed out by the middleweight muddle. By rights, Garcia, who is New York's middleweight champion of the world, should be the N. B. A.'s champion. And Hostak, the N. B. A.'s champion, should be New York's champ.

When Mickey Walker, the last undisputed middleweight champion, gave up the title in 1930 both the N. B. A. and the New York State Athletic Commission held elimination tournaments, seeking a successor. Don't ask why. They just did—because they never have and never will work together. Gorilla Jones won the N. B. A. title and Ben Jeby the New York title, and were so recognized.

Then in 1932 Jones went to Paris and lost to Marcel Thil on a foul in the eleventh round. The N. B. A. promptly recognized Thil as its champ, as did the International Boxing Union. Jeby in the meanwhile lost to Lou Brouillard, who lost to Vince Dundee, who lost to Teddy Yarosz, who lost to Babe Risko, who lost to Freddie Steele.

Thil, who had held his title by means of several phony foul claims, came here in 1937 and was beaten by Fred Apostoli. But the New York commission refused to recognize it as a title fight. The commission insisted that Steele was champ. The N. B. A. suddenly decided that Steele was champion, too, and for several weeks there the two boards found themselves uncomfortable bedmates on an idea. But the New York solons promptly eased that embarrassment. After Apostoli knocked out Steele in a nontitle fight in New York, and Steele's handlers hedged on a return fight at regulation weights, the New York commission named Apostoli champ, thus reversing its field with the breathtaking effectiveness of Albie Booth and the N. B. A.

The battle lines have been clearly drawn since then. Garcia succeeded Apostoli as New York's world's champ, by knocking Fred out, and Hostak got the other title by kayoing Steele and later kayoing Solly Krieger after Kreiger had the bad taste to win it from Hostak by a decison. Hey, wake up y'bum!

Now it looks like Hostak vs. the winner of tomorrow night's fight —a solution so clear-cut that even the rival commissions will have trouble confusing the issue.

Babe Dahlgren Leads Attack With Homer, 4 Singles; Detroit's Newhouser Routed

By the Associated Press

Detroit, May 22.—Blasting 16 hits off four pitchers for the second straight victory, the New York Yankees routed the Detroit Tigers 8 to 2 today behind the six-hit hurling of Rookie Marvin Breuer.

The young righthander held the Tigers scoreless on two hits until the eighth, when two singles and a walk filled the bases and Shortstop Frank Crosetti let Dick Bartell's grounder go through him for two runs.

The Yanks, with Babe Dahlgren hitting a home run and four singles, had completed their scoring previously.

They went to work on Lefty Hal Newhouser in the first inning with Frank Crosetti leading off with a double and scoring on two infield outs. Dahlgren's homer behind Joe Gordon's single added two in the second and George Selkirk's double, Gordon's triple and Dahlgren's single were good for two more in the third. Selkirk homered with one on in the fifth and three singles brought the final run in the seventh.

Nejamin Filly Scores Upset At Belmont

By the Associated Press

Belmont Park, N. Y., May 22.—The biggest upset of the New York racing season occurred here today when Damaged Goods, from the New Orleans owned Starmount Stable of E. B. Nejamin, breezed to a five-length triumph in the tenth Acorn Stakes, and paid $143.50 for a $2 straight ticket. Winner of only two races and $2,775 in 23 previous trips to the post, the daughter of Jacopo stepped the mile in 1:37 flat, a new record for the stake. Fleam formerly held the race mark of 1:38, made in the 1934 renewal.

The favored Fairy Chant, winner of the recent Pimlico Oaks for William du Pont's Foxcacther Farm, a race in which Damaged Goods was beaten off, finished second to the long shot, three lengths bettter than J. O. Keene's War Beauty. Eleven 3-year-old fillies clashed in the race.

The winner's share of the purse was $12,025. She was the rank outsider.

A crowd of 9,192 passed through the turnstiles and wagered $442,679 on the first six races of the seven-race program.

Fairy Chant broke in a tangle and made up a world of ground, but she could not menace the flying winner, which was piloted by Johnny Gilbert. The pair may meet again in the Coaching Club American Oaks and Top Flight Handicap.

Boola Brook stopped after setting the pace to the stretch. Witchlike, second to that point, also faltered. Damaged Goods, rated close behnid, whirled to the front with no apparent effort, opened up an unbeatable lead inside the last furlong, and coasted home.

Indians Blast 9-to-6 Victory Over Red Sox

Circuit Clouts Aid Cleveland; Tabor Homers for Sox

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, May 22.—The Cleveland Indians beat the Boston Red Sox today at their own game—slugging—and blasted a 9-to-6 victory which lifted the tribe within a game and a half of the league leaders.

Hal Trosky's ninth home run of the season, plus circuit clouts by Ken Keltner and Roy Weatherly gave second-place Cleveland the opener of the two-game series. Jim Tabor hit for the circuit for Boston.

Neither Mel Harder, the Indians' starter, nor Fritz Ostermueller, who opened for Boston, was effective but Harder stayed long enough to get credit for the victory. The Red Sox southpaw, chased in the first, was replaced by Jim Bagby, who was charged with the loss. Harder went to the showers early in the fifth after giving up a dozen hits, but Harry Eisenstat and Joe Dobson held the advantage.

Keltner's eighth-inning homer off Herb Hash, third Boston twirler, clinched the victory. It drove in Jeff Heath, who had singled, and gave Cleveland its three-run advantage. The Sox had threatened in the same frame by picking up a run on Lou Finney's triple and Ted Williams' single.

The Red Sox blasted 16 hits to Cleveland's 15, but several of them weren't effective. All the homers except Keltner's came with bases empty.

Dodgers Win as Reds Lose to Tie for Lead

Fred Fitzsimmons Pitches Brooklyn to 3-1 Victory Over Bucs

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, May 22.—Fat Freddy Fitzsimmons pitched the Brooklyn Dodgers to a 3-to-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates today and into a tie with Cincinnati for the National League lead.

After giving up a run in the first inning the bulky pitcher-coach, who hasn't been beaten in three starts this season, was invincible and held the pitiful Pirates to six hits.

Pittsburgh's run came on an infield out after two singles and a walk had loaded the bases.

While the towering Cincinnati righthander was holding the Giants scoreless for the first five innings, his teammates built up a three-run margin for him.

In the second inning John Rizzo doubled down the leftfield foul line and Billy Myers, starting his first game in 21 contests, singled him home. Then in the third Ernie Lombardi singled and Rizzo followed with a lofty home run against the leftfield stands.

Derringer Fails as Giants Beat Champs By 6-to-4 Margin

By the Associated Press

New York, May 22.—Evil days have befallen big Paul Derringer, the leading percentage pitcher of the National League last year, and today the New York Giants twice clustered three runs against him to whip the Cincinnati Reds 6 to 4.

The loss dropped the Reds into a tie with the Brooklyn Dodgers for first place.

Carl Hubbell, the once great southpaw king of the Giants, held the Reds to seven hits, struck out four and never gave a pass. But

Hoyas Take 2d Victory Over Colonials; Chase McGinnis in Eighth

Georgetown University's baseball team defeated George Washington for the second time this season yesterday at Griffith Stadium, 12-1, to clinch the unofficial collegiate diamond championship of the District. The Hoyas have also beaten both Maryland and American twice.

The Colonials were in the game as late as the fourth inning with the score tied, 1-1, but the Hoyas scored four runs off McGinnis in the fifth and scored in every other inning except the seventh.

Coach Joe Judge worked hurlers Smith, Wixted and Powers in three-inning shifts, and the trio held the Colonials to two hits. Smith was the winning pitcher.

Johnny Schmitt cracked out four hits in six times at bat, all singles, to lead the Hoya attack while Checas added three singles to the 16-hit total. Schmitt also stole two bases.

Bright took over the George Washington mound duties in the eighth and was pounded for five hits and as many runs in two innings.

Batting Aids Choice Work Of Ken Chase

Lewis' Homer, Bevy Of Doubles Backs Up Ken's 7-Hit Job For Second Straight

By Shirley Povich.
Post Staff Writer

St. Louis, May 22.—The Nats staged a two-hour reunion of some of their choicest pitching and heaviest swatting this afternoon and beat the Browns handily. The score was 9 to 2, which ought to give you an idea.

And so tonight the Nats are a first-division ball club. They sort of eased into fourth place as the Athletics eased out following a 10-1 defeat at Chicago. Coincidentally, the Nats broke a two-game losing streak, incurred when they were waylaid in Chicago earlier in the week.

The gent who was the important man to the Nats this afternoon, was Kendall Chase, who has suddenly reformed his pitching ways. Chase today scored his second successive and impressive triumph. Fresh from his 3-2 victory over the Indians, he let down the Browns with only seven hits this afternoon and didn't give 'em a run until the eighth when his lead had reached 9-2 proportions.

Pitcher Isn't Wild

Chase walked five batters, but he wasn't wild—for Chase. He mixed his new-found curve with his fast ball and struck out seven of the Browns along the route. The first run he allowed spawned directly from an error by Cecil Travis, and the Browns scored their second run without the aid of a hit. Chase never yielded more than one hit in any inning.

The Nats unloaded 13 hits against four St. Louis pitchers, with George Case banging three singles and stealing two bases. But Buddy Lewis was the important guy in the Nats' batting order despite the fact that he made only one hit. That hit, however, was a massive homer over the right-efild roof with a man on base at a time when the Nats were holding a slender 1-0 lead.

Five Straight Hits

It was in the eighth inning that the Nats actually relieved the Browns of the ball game. In that session they pounded out five straight hits against Johnny Whitehead and John Niggeling, four of 'em doubles. Five Washington runs crossed the plate in that uprising.

Kramer, a rookie righthander from San Antonio, who had some success with the Browns last year, was giving Chase a clever battle of it until the third inning. At that point, Ferrell led off with a double against the wall in right center and Kramer heaped grief on himself by muffing Ken Chase's bunt. Ferrell scored from third on Case's infield out and along came Lewis with his blast to the top of the roof to set the Nats up in a 3-0 lead.

Cecil Travis inspired a run in the sixth with a double to right and Jimmy Bloodworth promptly scored him with a single to center to improve the Nats' lead to 4-0.

In the eighth, against Whitehead, it was uproarious. Walker doubled to left, was trapped off second base, raced to third on Whitehead's wild throw, and then dashed home on Strange's wild throw. In succession,

Overlin Fights Garcia Tonight for Middleweight Title

Ken Okays Himself; Odds Favor Champ

12,000 to Watch D. C. Lad's Bid for Crown; In Garden; Chances Bright for Upset

By Al Hailey

A Staff Correspondent

New York, May 22.—His accustomed role as the playboy temporarily on the shelf, Ken Overlin, Washington's foremost away-from-home fighter, today assured one and all that he's in perfect shape for his 15-round assault on Caferino Garcia's world's middleweight championship, New York-California version, tomorrow night in Madison Square Garden.

Before Ken left Washington for three weeks of training in Mme. Bey's camp in Summit, N. J., it was being whispered about the Capital that too much easy living and indulgence in his favorite habit of patronizing the night spots would make him a pushover for the Filipino.

But the odds favoring Garcia were taking a large nosedive yesterday, and several observers up and down Broadway were picking Ken to outwit Garcia and win the championship by a decision.

13 Years a Fighter

The Illinois-born fighter who has adopted Washington as his home has wandered irresponsibly along cauliflower lane for some 13 years and tomorrow night hits the summit of a career that has included 173 professional fights.

Ken says he realizes that tomorrow's battle is his supreme bid for fight fame, that if he's ever to be labeled as anything more than just another "bum" he'll have to win.

"My social life never interferes with my condition," Overlin said confidently. "I've been fighting so much that I never had time to get out of condition. I'm not worried about little Kenny. Just watch me tomorrow."

Boxing authorities who have watched him working at Madame Bey's have been high in their praise of Overlin. Ken's ability has never been quetioned—in fact, the Washington fighter is rated by numerous boxing men as the most scientific boxer in the middleweight division and as the equal of Light Heavyweight Champion Billy Conn.

Quiet on Fistic Front

Overlin spent the day at Madame Bey's limbering up, while Garcia's training quarters were all quiet.

The Filipino called a halt to his training last Sunday, leading many to believe that he's overtrained and that he may be stale when he steps up tomorrow to try to plant his famous bolo punch on the chin of Ken.

There was talk today here of matching the winner with Conn this summer in one of the town's ball parks, and Nate Druxman, Seattle promoter, was in to see Promoter Mike Jacobs about the possibility of the winner meeting Al Hostak, recognized by the National Boxing Association as middleweight champion.

Overlin backers were at every turn here today snapping up odds that began with the Filipino a 5-13 favorite. By ringtime Garcia may be down to no better than a 2-to-1 shot to beat the Washingtonian.

A large delegation of Washington boxing officials and fans is expected to see Overlin try for the title that may be the turning point in his happy-go-lucky way of living.

Left May Bother Garcia

The main worry for Overlin is keeping out of the way of the Filipino's bolo punch, a pile-driving right that starts out straight and winds up as an uppercut. If Ken outmaneuvers this weapon, and it's said that he can, he should go on to win the decision. He has an irksome habit, to the opponents, of flicking his left constantly into the face.

Ken goes into his 174th fight with hardly any defects to speak of in his 13 years of throwing the leather. His last defeat was in February, 1939. He lost by a technical knockout—the only one he has ever experienced — to Teddy Yarosz at Houston, but he insists he was hardly recovered from an attack of jaundice at the time.

Last month in one of his recent warm-up battles, he ran into unexpected opposition from Frankie Nelson in Portland, Me. He was floored but got back up to beat Nelson. Ken wouldn't be surprised if the same thing happens tomorrow night.

this superlative pitching performance was only incidental to New York's victory because the Reds had the game won if Derringer could have held on to it.

Brooklyn lost no time tying the score, Cookie Lavagetto singling, stealing second and racing home on another single by Dolph Camilli in the first.

Bob Klinger matched Fitzsimmons' hurling then until the fifth, when trouble showered on the Pirates. Pewee Reese singled and stole second. John Hudson struck out, but Arky Vaughan fumbled Fitzsimmons' grounder, putting Reese on third and the pitcher on first. Fitz moved to second on a wild pitch and, after Charley Gilbert fanned, both runners scored on a single by Ernie Koy.

Heinie Miller to Refuse 'Any Office' in N. B. A.

Boxing Body's President 'Tired of It All;' Failure to Receive Cooperation, and Outside Duties Will Cause 'Retirement'

The "voice" of the National Boxing Association is going to be stilled, come September and the annual convention of the N. B. A. in Milwaukee.

Lieut. Col. Heinie Miller, the N. B. A.'s president and aforesaid "voice," yesterday declared he was "tired of it all" and that he would refuse any office in the world's biggest boxing rules body at the next convention when his term of office as president is up.

Unfair and biased criticism, failure to get cooperation and the fact that his duties in the Marine Reserve Corps are becoming so pressing were the reasons Miller advanced for his voluntary "retirement."

Miller's statement was issued shortly after he released a District Boxing Commission appeal to the managers of Phil Furr and Steve Mamakos, local welterweights, to get together on a contract for a 10-round fight under the promotional wing of Joe Turner.

From time to time, Miller has been the brunt of storms of criticism locally and from New York, generally hostile to the N. B. A. More recently Miller brought down attacks upon himself when he made public the N. B. A.'s action stripping Joey Archibald of his featherweight title and Lou Ambers of the N. B. A. lightweight crown.

Despite the fact that he was acting as president of the body and emphasized that he had but one vote, Miller had been picked out as the spearhead of attack when the N. B. A. is mentioned. He said the plan had been that he should take over the secretaryship next fall at the Milwaukee elections, but that he does not think that "would be wise at this time."

Meanwhile, Promoter Turner said last night he expects to hear definitely from the warring Mamakos and Furr factions today on the prospects of staging a fight between the two local welters.

HermitageClub To Renew Golf Invitation Play

Volney Burnett, Roger Peacock Among District Entrants

Richmond, Va., May 22 (AP).—The Hermitage Country Club's Invitation Golf Tournament, which is to be renewed here next week after a lapse of two years, should help in selecting favorites for two forthcoming championships—the Mid-Atlantic, in Baltimore, and the Virginia Amateur, at Hot Springs.

Most of the outstanding Washington and Virginia amateurs are planning to compete in the Memorial Day event here.

A poll of the amateurs in the State Open at Lynchburg last week-end showed that Wynsol Spencer, of Newport News, State amateur champion; Sam Bates, of Norfolk; Jimmy Watts, of Lynchburg, a former State titleholder and winner of low amateur honors in the State open, and Al Dollins, of Covington, were among those planning to compete here.

Schoolboy Hurler Signed by Macks

Harrisonburg, Va., May 22 (AP).—Ludwig Davis, 19, ace hurler of the Rockingham champion Elkton High School, was signed for the Philadelphia Athletics today by Scout Ira Thomas and will report to the Quaker City after his graduation in June.

Davis, a tall youth weighing 185 pounds, lost only one game in the two years his team won the county title. He also was a winner in the Rockingham Independent League in the summer. Davis was signed after Thomas looked him over today.

Two Players Suspended In Shore League

Chestertown, Md., May 22 (AP).—Hrarry S. Russell, Eastern Shore League president, announced today he had suspended Manager Gus Brittain and Third Baseman Clifton Boyd, of the league-leading Salisbury Indians, for five days.

The two were suspended effective today, he said, for their part in altercations with umpires in yesterday's game at Milford, Del. The Indians won, 14 to 8.

Lefty Smith Hurls 10-to-1 Victory, Allowing Seven Hits

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 22.—The Chicago White Sox unloosed 18 hits today to defeat the Philadelphia Athletics, 10 to 1, behind the seven-hit pitching of Lefty Edgar Smith.

It was the Chicago team's third straight home victory.

Mike Kreevich, Sox outfielder, made four hits in five times up, while Luke Appling and Larry Rosenthal got three hits each off George Caster, who pitched the whole game for the Athletics.

Allen Bergner Will Be Awarded Navy Sword for Sports

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., May 22.—Midshipman Allen Bergner, of Kankakee, Ill., will be awarded the sword given annually to the Midshipman who has excelled in athletics for three years, Academy officials announced today.

Midshipman Bergner holds letters in lacrosse and boxing and was captain of football and wrestling the past season.

Midshipman Stephen Gillette, jr., of Santa Monica, Cal., will receive the Thompson trophy award, made annually to the midshipman doing the most to promote athletics at the academy. Gillette was on the varsity football team and is captain of the lacrosse team.

Western Netters Down Central, 4-3

With a 4-3 victory over Central yesterday at Potomac Park, Western's interhigh tennis team looked to its final match of the season next Wednesday against Roosevelt. The winner of that clash will take the crown.

Both of Central's singles triumphs were in three-set matches, while Western took its three victories without the loss of a set. The No. 1 doubles team of the Raiders conceded its match to Central after the first set, the latter being too far behind to catch up.

Complete results:

Singles—Smith (W) defeated McCarthy, 7—5, 6—1; Rubin (C) defeated Gillespie, 3—6, 11—9, 8—6; Woodson (C) defeated Lincoln, 2—6, 6—3, 8—6; Hackney (W) defeated Wilver, 6—2, 6—4; Kerr (W) defeated Stalen, 6—0, 6—3.

Doubles—McCarthy-Rubin (C) defeated Smith-Gillespie, 6—3; Hackney-Lincoln (W) defeated Silver-Woodson, 6—4, 6—3.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald

Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

Ken Chase was the guy yesterday at St. Louis. We are distributing Man of the Month points on the basis of that game as follows:

To Chase, ten points, because he pitched seven-hit ball and allowed only one earned run in going the route without difficulty.

To eorge Case, three ponts, because he made three hits and stole two bases.

To Rick Ferrell, three points, because of his pair of doubles figured in three Washington runs.

To Cecil Travis, two points, because he doubled twice.

Gerald Walker	52	Johnny Welaj	14
Jimmy Bloodworth	36	Syd Hudson	12
Cecil Travis	35	Joe Haynes	7
George Case	33	Jimmy Pofahl	6
Zeke Bonura	30	Al Evans	4

Betty Jameson Scores Over Mrs. E. R. Hury

Advances in Golf Quarter-Finals in Southern Tourney

By the Associated Press

Fort Worth, Tex., May 22.—Tousled Betty Jameson trudged on to her "vindication" today, coldly mastering par over a heavy, rain-washed course to shepherd the favorites into quarter-finals of the Women's Southern Golf Association championship.

The 21-year-old national champion, roughly handled in tournament play since she ascended to the throne last summer, today brushed off a dangerous opponent, Mrs. E. R. Hury, of San Antonio, 5 and 4, with a burst of pars and birdies. The putter that carried her to the national title was stroking them in from everywhere as she posted 36, 1 under par, on the first nine, and then five pars on the last nine.

"Dividends Terrific"

Criticized last season for deliberate play, Betty went back to her old game of studying each shot. The dividends were terrific.

She hurried from one shot to the next, beating the gallery there by many yards.

"Maybe they won't mind so much if I hurry between shots," the lovable Texas kid said with worry in her voice.

Meets Miss Pearson

Tomorrow Betty faces Miss Pearson, Winner today, 3 and 2, over Miss Jo Henson, of Paris, Tex., in a par-dotted match that was close until the closing holes.

Miss Miley eliminated most of the wildness from her game and defeated Mrs. F. C. Rochon, of Fort Worth. Her next opponent will be Miss Cothran.

Miss Cothran dislodged Mrs. Dave Gaut, of Memphis, for a quarter of a century one of the Nation's top match players.

The grand old player of Dixie golf carried the match to the eighteenth where Miss Cothran holed out for an 18-hole 77 to beat her, two up. A seven iron approach dead to the hole cut off Mrs. Gaut's last chance.

Moore Is 29th Redskin to Sign For Coming Year

Wilbur oore, right halfback, submitted his signed contract to the Redskin offices yesterday, General Jack Espey announced. Moore will be going into his second year of pro football.

The 195-pound speedster was the leading ground gainer two years ago at the University of Minnesota and was rated the best right half in the Big Ten Conference.

Moore is the eighteenth veteran signed and brings the playing total to 29. He has been operating a restaurant in Minneapolis near the campus of his old Alma Mater. Espey also announced that 1940 season ticket books have been released by the printer and that persons having reservations may obtain their books at the Redskin offices, 739 Ninth street northwest.

Cup Play, Columbia Opening on Golf Card

Congressional, Capital, Scene of Star Cup Tournament; State Four-Ball Match Semifinals Scheduled Sunday at Manor

The women golfers, 176 in number, will be in a serious mood in quest of the Star Cups today at Congressional and Capital, but at Columbia Club 200 or more members will be in a lighter mood as the golf committee has prepared a gala program for the annual "official opening day."

A half-dozen varied tournaments, lunch and dinner, opening of the new porch and dining room and other activities will keep the Columbia members busy from noon until the small hours of the morning. Reds Banagan will handle the match-making and pairings for the tournaments listed.

The Star cup play at Congressional will find the better golfers after the original trophy in the scratch to 18 handicap competition, while at Capital, in the 1940 debut of the split tournaments, the 18 and over handicapped members of the District Women's Golf Association will compete for a new trophy.

Tomorrow 15 or 20 professionals entered in Monday's National Open sectional qualifying rounds are expected to test the Manor course in a practice round.

The first team championship may be decided tomorrow when the leading Chevy Chase meets Congressional in a postponed match at Argyle while the other important match is Manor vs. Kenwood.

With their Eastern Intercollegiate Golf championship just a week old, Georgetown's linksmen will entertain Navy Saturday at Capital in their last match before the National Intercollegiates.

Sunday's local feature will be the semi-final round of the Maryland State four-ball championship with the local team remaining, Roger Peacock and Claude Rippy of Indian Spring, opposing Otto Greiner and Dr. Ed Stinebert, of Terra Mariae, at Manor Club. The match is set for 1:40. Defending champions Spencer Overton and E. G. Barnes, of Rolling Road, meet Al London and S. Caplan of Woodholme in the other match at 1:30.—M. W. W.

2 Former Amateur Boxers Oppose In N. J. Elections

By the Associated Press

Newark, N. J., May 22.—Two former amateur heavyweight boxers will battle for a full United States Senate term in New Jersey's general elections next November.

Senator W. Warren Barbour, of Locust, 51-year-old veteran of three campaigns, won the Republican nomination in yesterday's primaries. James H. R. Cromwell, of Somerville, United States Minister to Canada, was unopposed in the Democratic primary—a prelude to his first fight for an elective office.

Barbour, former Mayor of Rumson and one-time president of the Linen Thread Co., won the National Amateur heavyweight title in Boston in 1910. So good was the husky society scion, he was urged to turn professional, but he declined. Cromwell, 42, pulled on the gloves as a simon-pure while a youth in Philadelphia.

Nelson Wins Ohio Open Title

Toledo, Ohio, May 22 (AP).—National Open Champion Byron Nelson added the Ohio Open title to his impressive list today by drubbing par and 56 competitors in the two-day, 72-hole test at the Sylvania Country Club here.

Leading at the halfway mark, with 140, Nelson chalked up rounds of 73 and 71 today to put together a 284 aggregate, four unner par and two better than Tony Penna, Dayton Veteran, who finished second.

Another two strokes behind Penna were defending champion Billy Burke, of Cleveland and Phil Perkins, former British amateur champion, with 288. Tony Joy, of Youngstown wound up in fifth psace with a 292.

Al Houghton Wins Pro Golf Sweepstakes

Beaver Dam Pro's 75 Takes Maryland State Event at Terra Mariae

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, May 22.—An afternoon rain that sent the scores soaring protected par by a three-stroke margin as Al Houghton, Beaver Dam professional, turned in a 75 to win the pro sweepstakes in a Maryland States Golf Association tournament here today over the Terra Mariae course.

Houghton was out in 37 and back in 38 for the lowest score of the small field. He and two amateur partners from Beaver Dam, N. E. Rogers and Doug Mattison, tied for second in the pro-amateur play with best ball 70s, a score deadlocked by Rolling Road Pro Alec Taylor and his simon-pure partners, Bill Hess and Jack Bierman.

Frank Invernizzi, Forest Park professional, and Amateur Ed Crook, of Rolling Road, won the pro-am handicap event with a 69, while Invernizzi's 76 was good for second money in the pro sweepstakes.

The best amateur score turned in was a 72 by Dr. Edward Stinebert, of the host club, who won low gross in the Class A amateur competition.

George Diffenbaugh, Kenwood professional, turned in a 79 in the pro sweepstakes and finished out of the money with three amateur partners in the pro-am—E. A. Tupper, 74; Ted Marlow, 75, and J. S. Vance, 76, all of Kenwood. Diffenbaugh and Houghton were the only District professionals entered.

Other pro scores included Bob Williams, Annapolis, 78; Johnny Flattery, Terra Marine, 78, and Charles Betachler Hillendale, 79.

Tech Beats Raiders, 3-0, for Tourney Berth

4 Places in Interhigh Finale Now Settled; Eastern Ousts Riders

Trainers Chase Nimnom in Early Spree; Tide Batters Eddie Vermillion

As far as participants in the round robin tournament which will decide the 1940 interhigh baseball title were concerned, the annual series was wound up yesterday at Western, where the underdog forces of Tech hung a 3-to-0 shutout on the highly favored defenders. Eastern and Roosevelt also played, the former winning by 5 to 2, but the net result was to eliminate the Riders from a vague tournament chance.

Though two more games are on the regular schedule, holders of the round robin berths now are definitely Central, the defending champ; Eastern, Western and Tech. Drawings for the tourney, tentatively set for June 3, 4 and 7, will be made later this week.

Green Leads Techites

Charley Green, a youngster nobody thought could pitch a lick at the start of the season, was responsible for Tech's gratifying triumph yesterday. The slender right-hander twisted his slow curve past batter after batter to keep himself well out of danger. To his mates, however, Green owed considerable for pulling him out of two embarrassing situations.

In the third inning Western had runners on second and third with one out, but here Hal Mitchell grounded to Third Baseman Lou Rados who trapped Western's Cockrill between third and home, ending that particular threat. Again in the eighth Malarkey singled but a fast double play quelled the revolt.

15 Down in Order

Between the third and eighth innings, however, Green was invincible, setting down 15 men in order as he carefully protected a 3-0 lead given him in the first two innings.

Joe Nimnom, Raider starting pitcher, was the victim of Tech's two-inning assault. When Chet Ciomei, Tech lead-off man, rapped his first pitch for three bases, the handwriting was on the wall for Nimnom. Morris Green followed him with a double, and after advancing to third on an outfield fly, scored on Geronimo's infield out.

Walk Started Score

Tech scored its third and final run in the second when Vic McCampbell walked, advanced to third on Keithley's single and scored when Joe Withers, Raider leftfielder, threw wild, attempting to catch McCampbell at third.

After the second stanza, Coach Cliff Moore saw it wasn't Nimnom's day and dispatched the swarthy right hander to the showers. The wisdom of this was reflected in the performance of his successor, Billy Grey, who, although touched for seven hits, prevented further scoring.

Tide's Earhardt Stars

As wild as the proverbial March hare in his previous efforts, Warren Earhardt clamped down in Eastern's final game of the regular series to limit Roosevelt to a scanty six hits, four of which came in the fourth inning, when both its runs were scored.

The chunky right-hander was responsible for only three bases on balls and was credited with six strikeouts. The most important of these went down against Dick Goodman, he Rider slugger who faced Earhardt with two out and men on second and third in the ninth.

Tied Things Once

Only once after the first inning were Roosevelt's hopefuls able to draw up on even terms. Eastern registered single runs in the first and second, and the Riders tied it up with their only scores of the game in the first half of the fourth. Another Tide tally later in the inning, driven in by Jack Hoffman's single, put the 1937 and 1938 champions out in front for good.

Taking advantage of Roosevelt Pitcher Eddie Vermillion's "off" day, Eastern slammed out 11 safeties, getting at least one man to second base in every inning. Four Roosevelt errors contributed to Vermillion's trouble as much as his own ineffectiveness.

Fifth Profitable

Eastern's biggest inning was the fifth, in which its final two runs of the game came in. Lefty Gatton led off with a single, and Paul Cohill slugged one close to the left-field bleachers, which Goodman misjudged. It went for the only triple of the game and scored Gatton. Cohill was stuck on third until, with two outs, Second Baseman Fahey juggled Hayes' grounder.

Entries are expected from McDonough School, Arlington Hall, Holton Arms, Bethesda-Chevy Chase and Western High schools, and other schools and colleges in nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Richmond Catcher To Be Signed By Boston Red Sox

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., May 22.—Billy Evans, director of the Boston Red Sox farm system, was expected here within the next few days to sign Stuart Hoskins, catcher on the University of Richmond baseball team.

The Fredericksburg youth was reported to have agreed to sign for a $2,500 bonus.

Bill Egan, Boston scout, checked Hoskins' physical condition yesterday and said Evans planned to come here from Little Rock, Ark., before the end of the Rocky Mount-Richmond Piedmont League series Thursday night.

Rocky Mount is a Red Sox farm and Hoskins said he would have his bags packed ready to go if Evans assigns him to that club.

Places Drawn For Collegiate Regatta June 18

California Next To Washington in Hudson River Race

By the Associated Press

New York, May 22.—California, winner of last year's varsity race in record time, and Washington, conqueror of the Golden Bears on the West Coast this season, were placed side by side in the draw today for lanes for the intercollegiate regatta on the Hudson River, June 18.

Eight crews were drawn for the 4-mile varsity race, six for the 3-mile junior varsity event, and four, the smallest in years, for the 2-mile freshman row.

California, which was timed in 16:12 3-5 last year, drew No. 8, the outside lane, for the climax race of the regatta at Poughkeepsie, while Washington drew No. 7. Syracuse drew the No. 1 lane, nearest the shore and between the Orange and Huskies were placed Wisconsin, Princeton, the highly regarded Cornell eight, Navy and Columbia.

For the junior varsity race, the No. 1 lane was left open. Columbia drew No. 2, with Cornell, Navy, California, Syracuse, last year's winner, and Washington on the outside of the Lions, in order named. The freshmen will line up with Princeton in the No. 3 spot, then Cornell, Syracuse and Columbia. Neither Washington, last year's victor, nor California, will be represented in the yearling test.

Ten Colleges To Compete In Boat Races

Knockabouts, Half Raters in Annual Event Saturday

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, May 22.—Knockabouts and half-raters from ten colleges will compete here Saturday and Sunday in the first of two elimination races which will decide which institutions will be eligible to enter the thirteenth annual McMillan Cup race at Mantoloking Yacht Club at Barnegat, N. J., June 26 to 28.

Brown, Cornell, Dartmouth, Harvard, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Tufts, Trinity, United States Coast Guard and the Naval Academy will compete in the local races, Lieut. Charles Adair, U. S. N., officer in charge of midshipmen sailing in small craft, announced.

The second elimination race will be staged at the Pequot Yacht Club, Southport, Conn., June 18 and 19, he added. The three winning institutions here and the two winners at Southport will be eligible to enter the finals at Barnegat.

Meanwhile, academy officials announced that Lieut. W. F. Royall, U. S. N., will succeed Lieut. B. F. Field, U. S. N., next month as coach of the Navy's sailing crews. Lieut. Field has been ordered to another Navy post.

Glamour Boys Feature Mat Card Tonight

With the wrestling business rapidly becoming a lush spot for overgrown glamour boys, Promoter Joe Turner will present a couple of groan artists described as the mat's edition of Robert Taylor tonight when Karol Krauser and Gino Martinelli take the stage for a return bout in the W street arena.

Karol and Gino danced to a standstill in their 60-minute feature last week at Turner's Arena. Tonight's affair will be a battle to the finish.

Krauser pinned Martinelli last week, but Giano recalled Routine 3-A and seized Referee Bennah Bortnick with the result that Bortnick could not count him out.

In the preliminary dramatics, Felix Sloviskowski faces Benny Rosen, Ed Franer meets Fritz Zigfrid, Juan Olaguivel faces Lou Farino and Pat Corrigan takes on Al Norcus.

Bethesda Nine Shuts Out Gaithersburg

With one of the team members, Bobby Keene, coaching in the absence of Coach Larry Williams, Bethesda-Chevy Chase High turned in a 9-0 shutout over Gaithersburg yesterday at Garrett Park. The winners scored at least once in every inning of the seven-inning walk-away.

Dick MacLeod was credited with the triumph, his clever slants limiting Gaithersburg to three safeties. He allowed four walks but struck out seven.

Bethesda reached Hottinger and Glover for 12 hits, including doubles by Eaton, Boswell and Hashagon. A "squeeze" play and three stolen bases were registered under young Keene's coaching.

Blablah Equals Track Record in Winning at Charles Town

WinnerGiven Good Ride By Palumbo

Holds Lead Virtually From Start to Finish In Jefferson Purse; Pays Backers $7.40

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., May 22.—Blablah a Baltimore owned filly with plenty of speed, equalled the track record for the Charles Town course of :20 feet more than six furlongs in the annual running of the Jefferson Purse, featuring the Wednesday program here. The daughter of Economic, who has more than paid her way since she came to the races, was clocked in 1:15 1-5 to join Lady Buck and Consistent as concilders of the mark.

With Jockey Sammy Palumbo, leading rider at the meeting, performing in brilliant style, Blablah held the lead virtually from the start and had an advantage of 2½ lengths at the finish. Walter Light, owned by Mrs. J. B. Belk, of Charlottesville, Va., was second, a neck in front of R. A. Bowman, jr.'s, Schley Goree. Only three others competed.

The crowd of 5,000 had a hard time finding a favorite and the three money horses went to the post virtually equal choices with Royal Marriage holding a slight edge. Blablah in winning her third race in six starts paid $7.40.

Walter Light was first to show in front as the gang rushed for the important first turn. However Palumbo had Blablah in motion early and the filly took command of the situation on the swing to the backstretch. Beaming Lady was close up as was Royal Marriage. Schley Goree was having trouble finding his racing legs at this stage.

Along the far side Blablah gradually opened daylight on her closest rivals and it was all over but the pay off. Walter Light continued willingly but Jockey Joe Hernandez just could not make him threaten the leaders again. Schley Goree rallied mildly but only enough for third money. Beaming Lady was a distant fourth.

From a competitive standpoint, the first race was the day's biggest thrill. The first dead heat of the season developed when the judges were unable to separate J. B. Hueycott's Never Home and P. O'Donnell's King Tea at the end of a battle of 4½ furlongs. Both were long shots, Never Home paying $26.40 and King Tea $20.20, despite the fact that they split the winning end of the pool. Jockey R. Root and P. Castanova bobbed their way into half a loaf.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KING TEA (dead heat), $20.20, $14.80, $6.80; NEVER HOME (dead heat), $26.40, $18.00, $6.80; WAY OUT, $3.20.

KING TEA, saving ground throughout lost lead on turn, but came again under a hard drive to just get up for a dead heat. NEVER HOME raced on the outside of leader, took command in run through stretch and held on well in last sixteenth. WAY OUT was caught in close quarters at start and made up some ground in run through stretch. CAT'S CRADLE dropped back soon after start and ran evenly thereafter.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:11. Off 3:11½. Winner, T. J. Collins' ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DANCING CLOUD, $5.80, $3.20, $2.40; ACE OF TRUMPS, $4.00, $2.60; SAIL BY, $2.80.

DANCING CLOUD, within striking distance from start, came to outside of leader leaving backstretch, took command and held on well in final drive. ACE OF TRUMPS, off very poorly, was in tight quarters the entire journey and closed well when able to find racing room. SAIL BY had speed to take command at start, relinquished lead on stretch turn, but held on well thereafter. HI-ADA, close to leaders from start, was placed to a hard drive in stretch and closed well. PIN HOOKER dropped back soon after start, was a trailer for a half and closed full of run. CHROMO and CROSSING OVER were not prominent. DUNRITA was through early.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3 and 4-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 3:40. Off 3:40½. Winner, J. Pons' br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WAYRIEL, $5.60, $3.60, $2.40; SUNNY ROSE, $4.00, $2.40; STINGY LADY, $2.20.

WAYRIEL, much the best, opened long lead while under restraint and coasted in the late stages. SUNNY ROSE lost ground throughout and closed full of run. STINGY LADY, close in early stages, dropped back on stretch turn, but came again when she saved ground entering stretch. WALLI chased the ultimate winner for three-quarters, but tired in final drive. KAMARI was off slowly, rushed into contention while racing between horses and tired. BRIGHT LOUISE was bothered at first turn and tired thereafter. JUDGE'S BID and LEAKY ROOF could not threaten.

Daily Double, DANCING CLOUD and WAYRIEL, Paid $16.00

FOURTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:07. Off at once. Winner, J. E. Simmons' b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—REMOLEE, $5.60, $3.20, $2.60; ROYAL VEIL, $3.80, $2.80; RARE GEM, $3.60.

REMOLEE, closest to pace from start, circled leader on turn and won under a hard drive. ROYAL VEIL, off slowly, lost ground while making move, was closest to ultimate winner on turn, but could not menace the top one. RARE GEM was outrun in early stages, went to outside while making move and closed full of run. MISS WING took command soon after start while under hard urging, but tired badly in final quarter. DEPINARD suffered slight interference on backstretch and could not threaten. MAHI dropped back to last on backstretch and caught tired horses in stretch.

FIFTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $800. The Jefferson. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:36. Off 4:36½. Winner, O. S. Jennings' b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLABLAH, $7.40, $4.20, $2.80; WALTER LIGHT, $4.60, $4.00; SCHLEY GOREE, $3.60.

BLABLAH, hard hustled to take command approaching first turn, opened comfortable lead while being rated and was kept to a drive in last sixteenth. WALTER LIGHT chased the winner throughout, but was no match and was forced to a hard drive to withstand closing bid of SCHLEY GOREE. The latter moved to contention on backstretch and closed well. BEAMING LADY had good speed, but tired when unable to outrun winner. ROYAL MARRIAGE showed a very dull effort. TRAWS was a trailer throughout.

SIXTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:01. Off 5:02½. Winner, J. S. Seitz's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROMNEY ROYAL, $17.60, $5.20, $3.20; FRANK BROOKE, $3.60, $2.40; TAVERN, $2.60.

ROMNEY ROYAL took command at start, was well rated while setting pace, responded to hard urging in stretch to stave off bid of FRANK BROOKE. The latter was off slowly, raced on outside throughout and was catching winner. TAVERN went to outside in stretch, chased leader to stretch then tired. ANN GROUCHER ran an even race. NOB dropped back soon after start and could not threaten. YANKEE KID trailed in early stages and caught a tired horse in stretch. BELLTHORN had good early speed, but stopped to a walk in last quarter. BENTAUR refused to break.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:28. Off 5:28½. Winner, Mrs. A. S. Bowman's b. h. (5), by Canter—Olive M. Trained by A. S. Bowman. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:47⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SCHLEY BUCK, $9.40, $4.40, $3.40; ERADA, $3.40, $2.80; CLYMENE, $3.40.

SCHLEY BUCK, in close quarters for three-eighths of a mile, reached leaders on stretch turn and just got up under strong handling. ERADA dropped far out of it in the opening stages, raced on outside throughout and closed best of all. CLYMENE, off slowly, saved ground to take command, was well rated while setting pace, was placed to a hard drive in stretch and tired in last 70 yards. PETEE LAD went evenly. SEA BOY took command for a brief spell, was hard ridden, but stopped. KESWICK HILL was lacking in his late charge. NANCI'S BEST had speed while racing on extreme outside. GRAND WALTZ was through early.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:54. Off 5:54½. Winner, Mrs. I. C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—KISSIN KID, $8.80, $3.60, $2.80; GOLDUN, $3.40, $2.80; SILVERY WAY, $3.00.

KISSIN KID overhauled GOLDUN at clubhouse turn while under hard urging, opened lead gradually and was kept to a drive in stretch. GOLDUN went to front at start and tired when headed. SILVERY WAY closed full of run after being back in bunch for a half. ARACHNE raced on the outside throughout. STUCK UP appeared dangerous on stretch turn and tired thereafter. MARBRAN showed nothing. CHATTERDOO and LIGHT ACTION could not threaten.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

Pork Chops will be here next. Owner and Trainer Johnny Harris said yesterday that "Poke" is in school in Richmond and will report when summer vacation begins. Palumbo and Vesselli are setting the pace for the local jockeys with seven winners each. Hernandez has six. Apprentice Jockey J. Reilly, under contract to Janon Fisher, jr., arrived yesterday. President Al J. Boyle has received a letter from Herbert Hoover acknowledging the Charles Town Jockey Club's contribution to the Finn relief fund. What man "worked" 6 furlongs in 1:09 1-5 here last Tuesday night? Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the favorite player. Fisk Waring, the Texan, who purchased a group of horses for Sir Malcolm McAlphine at the Saratoga sales in 1939, was a visitor here. Sir Malcolm shipped the horses to England and he probably wishes he had them in this country now. The Manor Hunt is staging a horse show and race at Brooke John's farm on May 30. Plenty of rivalry among the Montgomery County horse owners. Somebody telephoned Art Brown from China with a tip on Wam in yesterday's grst race. So if you hear a lot of "wham's on WOL this morning they won't be static. Pete Marshall is back on The Post end of the racing wire. Can't keep a good man down. Chuck Frost is hard at work with his stable consisting of Dabs, a 4-year-old maiden, with a flash of speed. And I do mean flash. The Bennings stable sends Germans to the post today for the first time. Been away a long while but will be right in there knocking, so don't blame me if they hang up the number. There's no truth in the rumor that Hitler will do the riding. Now for the winners.

First race—Small Change is the logical choice in this field. The veteran probably needed that last and is fit and ready. Germans comes back to the racing wars looking like a horse and could be a dangerous factor if not the winner. Red Wings for the minor award.

Second race — Danzig showed enough last out to warrant a top pick in this field of maidens. Sedace has plenty of foot but is a doubtful starter. Secreta is likely to take care of the others.

Third race — Kitty's Rival has worked well and should give a good account of herself in company of this caliber. Needs only the right ride. Chief Evergreen from the Bennings Stable, is far down the list but will give the top one plenty of trouble if sent into action. Groucher's Boy is good and should be a factor.

Fourth race—Roman Boy takes off weight after carrying 125 pounds to victory. Looks like the biggest "lock" of the meeting. Prince Turley was off slowly last out. Toss out that effort. Ravenhurst was second to the top one last out and is a threat.

Fifth race—Miss Maker gets in this with 103 pounds and will be hard to beat from that rail position. Time Her outran Roman Boy part of the way in that last. She will be the one to beat. Bullet B., if off well, will be close.

Sixth race—Counora downed fair company last out and looks like a repeater in this field. Lyde was a winner here and is due consideration. Seplin promises to be close from that inside post position.

Seventh race—Trixie Lass appears to be the right one in this rather open affair. Promises to be in the thick of the battle and I'm casting my vote in her favor. Miss Damara and Margie Wrack for the place and show.

Eighth race—Aufoin was miserably handled last out and belongs in a field like this one. There will be nothing to it if the ride is right. Pencader is in good hands and will be a threat. Huppy is improved this year.

Sub race—If this event is used I'll take Grouchneur, Crusand and Rough Buddy.

$500,000,000 In U. S. Money In England

Many Companies Maintain Branches, Distribution Agencies

By the Associated Press

New York, May 22.—The biggest American businesss investments abroad yet to come within scope of state economic controls would be effected by England's wartime rule of industry, Wall Street sources said today.

It was estimated, on the basis of latest Government figures, that American interests have invested nearly $500,000,000 in factories and distribution facilities in the United Kingdom, out of a total of $1,350,000,000 in direct investments in Europe.

Scores of big American companies have branch factories, subsidiaries, affiliates or sales connections in England, including such concerns as General Motors, Ford, General Electri, Goodyear Tire, Continental Can, Socony Vacuum Oil and International Business Machines.

Controlled in Reich

Germany, second biggest European outlet for American industrial capital in the past, long ago imposed strict totalitarian controls over foreign-owned units operating there, including the "blocking" of earnings against withdrawal by the owners.

A banking source estimated American business has been drawing about $20,000,000 income annually on its United Kingdom direct investments. The British authorities, it was said, so far has been permitting the transmission of the bulk of these earnings under exchange licenses, but only at the open market rate for the pound sterling.

Internal Factors Involved

Inasmuch as England already has set up extensive control over exchange, foreign trade and British holdings of American securities, it was pointed out, the immediate effects of the latest measures mostly would presumably deal with internal operations.

Whether United States trade with England, already largely oriented to war purposes, would undergo further shifts, remained to be seen. Under the war stimulus, United States trade with England has increased.

Bar Silver Drops On London Exchange

London, May 22 (AP).—Bar silver dropped 1⅜ pence an ounce today to 21 3/16 pence, equivalent to 38.42 cents an ounce based on the official quotation of $4.03 for the pound sterling.

Some New York silver dealers attributed the break in the London bar silver price to reports the British authorities would require export purchases of the metal to be paid for at the official exchange rate.

Industrial Bankers to Open Annual Meeting Here Sunday

Industrial bankers from many parts of the country will arrive in Washington Sunday to attend the annual convention of the American Industrial Bankers Association. The proceedings of the institute will be held in the Wardman Park Hotel and will continue through Wednesday morning.

The institute is primarily a school in which executives of industrial banking institutes gather to study the problems of their business.

Clifton M. Eisele, president of Southern Industrial Bankers, Inc., of Washington, who is vice president of the national association, and his associates, have been in charge of arrangements for the meeting.

They have established headquarters at Wardman Park to arrange for the convenience and comfort of the visiting delegates. The first function will be a dinner at 12:30 p. m. Sunday and from 5:30 to 6:30 the same day President and Mrs. D. T. Simpson of Savannah, and other officers of the association and their wives will hold a reception.

The semi-annual business meeting of the board of directors will be held Sunday evening. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday the proceedings of the institute will cover committee reports, addresses, and a discussion of the various problems of the industrial banking business.

List Swings Upward Modestly on Allied Successes and Bargain Basement Appeal; Bonds Irregular, With U. S. Issues Steady

New York, May 22.—Securities and commodities steadied today after the sharp break of Tuesday, when values in all lines were sacrificed as the Germans spread to the coast. Stiffening opposition on the part of the Allies and also a growing appreciation of the fact that present prices of securities offer attractive yields contributed to today's modest recovery. Nerves were quieter and there was no further talk of closing the exchange or of limiting trading.

The gain for the big board list was small, amounting to only .17 point, but among the individual speculative favorites there were many individual advances of from 1 to 4 points. Aviations turned in the best percentage gain. Steels continued under pressure although all reports indicated a quickening of operations and scrap prices were raised again.

Commodity Trend Irregular

The price trend among leading commodities has been as irregular as the action of the security markets. Shading of Copper prices is reported with transactions taking place below the official quotation of 11½ cents a pound. Pennsylvania crude oil was cut 25 cents a barrel but the statistical position of the industry improved. The Iron Age foresaw a possible shortage of steel by midsummer if the war continues. It noted increased domestic and foreign demand.

Such reports added to the spotty nature of the business outlook and markets behaved in kind. There was a relief from the nervousness of the previous day but not much determination about the partial recovery.

Curtiss-Wright maintained its position as the day's most active stock and closed unchanged. Lockheed and North American Aviation added small fractions. Among the less active aviation issues gains included Douglas, 2⅛; Grumman, 1⅛; Martin, 1¾; Sperry, 2; United, 1⅜, and Wright, 7.

Some Unable to Hold Gains

Rails were among the steady divisions today. Pennsylvania was up ½ point. Rail equipment shares were strong.

Not all of the war issues were able to hold to the upward trend with the aviations. DuPont closed off 3¼ and American Telephone was down 3⅝, to close at a new low for the year.

The possibility of this market being called upon to accept a renewal of foreign liquidation was seen in the announcement of new laws in Great Britain which will give the government unlimited power over the country's wealth, manpower and production facilities.

Bonds are Irregular

Listed bonds displayed much irregularity today in a session far quieter than its predecessor. The list showed gains ranging to 6 points, and losses to 10 points, with the more active isues showing the better trend. War developments remained the effective guide. United States Treasury bonds were fairly steady, while domestic corporate loans were uncertain. Turnover was $8,570,000.

German bonds showed small variations, with most issues slightly higher for the day. Belgian bonds rallied sharply, and the tone was good in Norwegian, Danish, Finnish and similar obligations. Canadian, Australian and French bonds were marked lower. Italian bonds rallied sharply as that country still refrained from participation in the war.

United States Treasury obligations of longest and shortest datings were steady to firm. Highest rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds were dull and steady.

Speculative carrier bonds were in mocest demand.

Buyers Lift Wheat ½-1¼, Act Cautiously

Chicago, May 22 (AP).—Buyers returned cautiously to the wheat pit today in sufficient numbers to bid prices up more than 2 cents a bushel at one time, although about half of this advance was lost before the close.

News of Allied counter-attacks was considered by traders as somewhat less bearish a belief which, they said, the stronger securities market confirmed.

May rose to 85½, up 2¾, just before the close, and closed ½@1¼ higher than yesterday; July, 83¼@83; September, 83¼@83. May corn closed ¾@1 cent higher at 64@64¼, while July and September were ⅛ off to ½ up at 62⅜@62½ and 61⅜. Oats finished ⅛@¾ lower; rye ⅜@¾ higher, and lard 33@43 higher.

Bankers Set To Open Meet In Virginia

47th Annual Session Will Convene Today At Hotel Roanoke

Roanoke, Va., May 22 (AP).—Virginia bankers, beginning their three-day forty-seventh annual convention at Hotel Roanoke tomorrow, will hear addresses on the future of banks and a layman's view of financial institutions, an address by their president, committee reports and a digest of 1940 Virginia banking legislation.

After the first V. B. A. session, Virginia members of the American Bankers Association are to elect eight A. B. A. representatives, including a State vice president and executive councilman.

Reports to Be Made

The vanguard of more than 500 expected for the convention arrived this afternoon for a meeting of the 16-member executive council. The convention is to begin at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning, with the address of the president, Giles H. Miller.

Miller's address will precede reports of other officers and of chairmen of 12 committees.

Speakers at the first session will be Frank M. Totton, New York, second vice president of Chase National Bank of New York, "The Future in the Light of the Past," and Henry G. Ellis, Petersburg school superintendent, "A Layman Looks at Banks—Eight Years Later."

Officials to Be Chosen

A. B. A. representatives to be named at the gathering of Virginia members are: State vice president succeeding C. L. Robey, Purcellville; executive councilman succeeding Joseph Healy, Hampton; four division State vice president, and a member and alternate member of the 1940 general nominating committee.

Division State vice presidents are Aaron Russ, Tazewell, State bank division; J. H. Matthews, Roanoke, National bank division; John E. Fowler, Rosslyn, savings division, and S. P. Ryland, Richmond, trust division. W. S. Hildreth, Charlottesville, and J. Sinclair Brown, Salem, are 1939-1940 member and alternate, of the nominating committee.

Chicago Livestock

Chicago, May 22 (AP).—Hog prices turned downward today, depressed by slightly heavier than expected receipts and by weakness in the dressed pork market. Cattle were mostly moderately higher. Little was done early in the sheep market.

Hogs were mostly 25 cents under yesterday's average, topping at $5.70, paid sparingly. Receipts in the open market totaled 12,000, or 2,000 more than advance estimates, and these were augmented by 2,000 holdover hogs. Packers had 4,000 direct. Best light loins in the wholesale market dropped ½-cent to 14 cents a pound, lowest since early last month.

All grades fed steers and yearlings shared in a generally 10 to 15 cent advance. Heifers were fully steady.

Medium to good fed clipped lambs were held at 9.50. Sheep were scarce, but weak.

Steel Orders In May Due To Double

By the Associated Press

New York, May 22.—Steel sales in May will double April as a result of heavier domestic buying. Allied purchases of nearly 500,000 tons and good orders from other foreign buyers, Iron Age said today in a weekly survey.

Steel ingot output rose to 74 per cent of capacity for the current week, highest since late January.

At the same time, the steel magazine declared, "steel users are not being stampeded, as they were last fall.

"Despite the probability that a steel shortage could easily occur by midsummer if the war continues, German successes have had a restraining effect on a good many buyers, who are not anxious to build up inventories that would be burdensome in the event of an early termination of the war.

"Allied steel purchases total about half a million tons, part of which is in ingots and semi-finished steel, and the remainder is finished steel, which includes a large tonnage of ship plates and moderate quantities of shell steel for France.

"Steel companies expect that Allied purchases, direct and indirect, may run as much as 500,000 tons a month for the duration of the war.

"The defense program of the United States has not yet proceeded far enough to become a factor in steel trade, except that some items which are already scheduled are being hastened."

Bank Officers To Be Guests Of Accountants

The District of Columbia Institute of Certified Public Accountants has issued invitations to the presidents and credit officers of all local banks to a dinner meeting at the Mayflower for tomorrow night.

The meeting, which will be called to order by President Harold C. Anderson, will consider questions relating to accountants' reports in the light of recent developments in the practice of accountancy, with particular reference to the use of accountants' reports in connection with applications for bank credit.

Both the D. C. Institute of Certified Public Accountants and the D. C. Bankers Association have special committees working toward cooperation and the improvement of professional service relations between bankers and accountants. C. H. Pope, president of the Munsey Trust Co., is chairman of the bankers' committee and William Gordon Buchanan is chairman of the institute's committee on cooperation with bankers.

A panel of bankers, consisting of Thomas J. Groom, Bank of Commerce & Savings; H. T. Bisselle, Riggs National Bank; W. R. Forster, Hamilton National Bank, and Arthur J. Linn, Hamilton National Bank, has prepared questions relating to bank credit phases of accountants' reports which are to be answered by the following panel of accountants: Goodwin P. Graham, Joseph K. Moyer, Henry S. Owens, and Benjamin Regardie.

Manor Hunt Holds Annual Races May 30

Steeplechases and Flat Races Featured At Brooke John's

The Manor Hunt Club has set Decoration Day, May 30, for its annaul races and horse show at Brooke Johns' farm, near Norbeck, Md.

In contrast to previous Manor meetings, races will be featured on the card, and steeplechasers are expected from the Green Spring Valley, Middleburg, Fredericksburg and Howard County. The two flat races, one about a mile and a sixteenth and the other 5½ furlongs, will attract horses from as far away as Charles Town to compete for the cash prizes offered.

Featured of the races is the Andrew J. (Cy) Cummings Memorial, about 2 miles over timber, which will be held in honor of the late president of the Laurel plant.

The remaining races are the Rock Creek Junior Derby, for ponies, and the Brook, about 2 miles, over brush.

In the horse show events, which commence at 10 a. m., there will be five junior and pony events and classes for ladies' hunters, hunter hacks, knockdown and out, the Manor Club Traphy, pairs of hunters, and triple bar.

Information about both the show and the races may be obtained from E. B. McIntyre, secretary-treasurer of the club, at Kensington 245-W.

Deep Run Show Entries Close Sunday Night

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., May 22.—Entries for the twentieth annual Deep Run Horse Show will close Sunday night, Fred S. Campbell, jr., secretary, announced today. Last year's list topped 500.

The two-day show will open Saturday, June 1, and continue through Sunday, June 2. Indications pointed to a larger number of entries than last year's record-breaking total.

Hunters and jumpers from Orange, Warrenton, Keswick, Cobham, Charlottesville, Fredericksburg Norfolk, Virginia Beach, Durham and Washington, D. C., are expected to participate, as well as a number of ponies and saddle horses.

The 49 classes in the two-day program will be divided into performances Saturday morning, afternoon and night, and Sunday afternoon.

Judges will be Miss Harriett Howell Rogers, of Sweet Briar, who will judge equitation; Turner Wiltshire, of Middleburg; John K. Shaw, jr., of Baltimore; J. North Fletcher, of Warrenton, who will judge hunters and jumpers, and R. L. Woodward, jr., of Suffolk, who will judge saddle horses.

Cameo, Russell Nines Do Battle

For the second time in The Washington Post Industrial League, Cameo Furniture and Russell Motor nines clash today, the game being called for 5 p. m. on the East Ellipse.

In the first meeting, Cameo took a 1-to-0 decision, with Tommy Hahn hurling a two-hit game. Seidel, who pitched a four-hitter in the earlier game, will start again today with either Adair or Deavers serving them up for Cameo.

Former Gonzaga Stars to Play Saturday

Some of the greatest athletes in Gonzaga High's history will face the present Purple diamond team Saturday in an alumni game at Gonzaga Field. Johnny Bozek will head the list, and included will be Mike Tracey, Tubber Farrel, Orrel Mitchell, Turk Tobin, Tommy Nolan Joe Mills Paul and Ray Grace Joe Keegan, Charley McVain and Dan Cleary. Starting time is 2:30 p. m.

Altus Allen Signed For Paychek Fight

Chicago, May 22 (AP).—Altus Allen, 19-year-old Negro heavyweight, winner of 11 out of 13 professional fights, today was signed to meet Johnny Paycheck, whom Joe Louis knocked out in four punches.

They signed for a 10-round bout in the Coliseum June 5. It will be Paychek's first start since Louis flattened him.

Armstrong Nine Ties Up Colored Title

Three-hit pitching by Alvin McMillian clinched the colored high school baseball title of the District yesterday for Armstrong High as it stopped a Cardoza rally to win, 3-2.

It was the second time this season the Armstrong nine had defeated Cardoza and the winners' ninth triumph in 10 starts. McMillian allowed no walks and fanned four batsmen.

Going into the seventh and final inning, the winners held a 3-0 lead and it was then McMillian weakened for the first time. Both Cardoza's runs came across, but the rally was halted just short of a tie.

Brown hurled a 6-hit game for the losers.

Browns Bow, 9-2, To Chase's Hurling

Bonura singled to center, Travis doubled down the leftfield line, Bloodworth doubled into the leftfield corner, Ferrell greeted Niggeling with a double to left, and Case produced the fifth run of the inning with a fly to deep right.

The Browns didn't get a man to third base in the first seven innings. They scored a run in the eighth and another in the ninth, but you really wouldn't be interested.

Listen! with Slocum

Fletcher Wiley, the newest arrival on the coast to-coast big time, is doing as well for himself here in Washington as he did on the West Coast for many years. Wiley, you know, is the philosopher who is heard each afternoon at 1:30 in a quarter-hour talk on anything that pops into his head.

He has a way of slapping wrists gently or praising and has a rather intriguing contempt for several of the old standby rules of radio. For instance, only yesterday, he was brave enough to suggest that maybe parents could do a little harm if they were over solicious about their children's welfare. You can be sure that it has been many a moon since any radio performer had the courage to suggest a fact that is accepted by every doctor in the land.

He has a wonderful way of reading commercials. He said yesterday that he thought his product, a soup, was fine. In the next sentence he also said he got pretty well paid by the makers of that product, but he still thought it was good, providing you liked chicken soup. The inference was refreshingly intelligent. If you didn't like chicken soup he would be the first to admit that there was no point in drinking his product. If you did like chicken soup his was as good as any.

He ad libs all the way, including the commercial. In this he follows the technique introduced by Arthur Godfrey. Like Godfrey, he doesn't follow commercial copy to the letter, just reads around it.

WJSV has become just another branch of the public postoffice. There are hundreds of letters pouring in daily as the result of Col. Lindbergh's speech. Senator Byrnes' answer of last night will start another flow, probably.

These Women! — By d'Alessio

"For heaven's sake, Louis, stop trying so hard not to wake me up! It always does!"

Orphans in Love

Marion White

Peter was looking at Ellen, and his eyes were puzzled and inquiring as if he were really seeing her for the first time. She broke the spell herself. "I'm Cinderella, going to the ball!"

SYNOPSIS

Red-haired Ellen Carlan, a stenographer, has loved Peter Storm, 25, since both of them were children living in an orphanage. While picnicking near the orphanage, they take refuge from a rain storm in the old Tucker House, an unoccupied mansion, and notice the resemblance of Jonathan Tucker to Peter. As the result of a tenement fire, Peter becomes Public Hero No. 1 and the papers connect him with the Tucker house when he tells a reporter Jonathan Tucker was the inspiration of his heroic act. Attorney John Abbott and his wife, Cora, who manage the Tucker estate, fear their deception many years earlier, when they abandoned the only heir at the orphanage, will be discovered. Abbott offers Peter, who is a law student, a position in his law firm. Ellen is wounded when Peter tells her Millicent Abbott, the Abbott's daughter, is the most beautiful girl he has ever seen. Mother Rosa at the orphanage hears Ellen's plight and sends her to Rosalind a famous fashion designer. Ellen asks for a position as a seamstress, but Rosalind hires her as a model. Peter calls for Ellen to celebrate their new positions and is astounded by her new glamour.

Chapter 17

"ARE YOU SURE this is Miss Carlan?" Peter demanded of her gayly. "That pudgy, red-headed little girl who used to live here?"

"It must be, Mr. Storm," she replied with a pleasant smile. "She's the only one who answered the telephone. My! You do look lovely, my dear. You both do, for that matter. This must be a very special occasion."

"It certainly is!" Peter exclaimed solemnly. "It certainly is."

He was looking at Ellen, and his eyes were puzzled and inquiring, as if he were really seeing her for the first time.

She broke the spell herself, with a short little laugh. "I'm Cinderella, going to the ball!" she said. "My fairy godmother waved her magic wand . . ."

Peter laughed, too. "I wonder——" He stopped abruptly. He wanted to say things that Miss Evans would never understand.

He turned to the table, picked up a white oblong box and handed it to Ellen. "Flowers for Milady?"

"Oh, Peter!"

Unwraps Package

She unwrapped the package with trembling fingers. The green tissue paper inside was spotted with tiny drops like early morning dew on spider webs. A dainty, exotic fragrance lifted from within the folds. She caught the deep gleam of purple.

"Orchids!" she cried in delight.

"Orchids!" echoed Miss Evans. She glanced at the wide velvet lapels of Ellen's jacket. "Will they spot the velvet?" she asked mournfully.

"No!" Ellen assured her. "Not at all! Nothing can spoil anything tonight!" As she pinned them on, she felt her heart pounding against her wrist, so violently that she knew the movement could be seen through the golden cloth of her waist.

Peter grasped her arm firmly. "Lovely!" he murmured. "Lovely, Ellen!" His eyes told her that he was not speaking of the flowers. He picked up his top-hat. "Good-by, Miss Evans!"

"Good-by! Good-by! Have a good time!"

Outside, on the steps, he waved majestically toward the gleaming black limousine parked at the curb. "Cinderella's carriage!" he said under his breath to Ellen.

She smiled in delight. "Are you sure it won't change back to a pumpkin at midnight?"

He Laughs

He laughed. "Not at midnight. Rent's paid until 3 o'clock in the morning."

She walked toward it like an eager child, forgetting every lesson she had learned in self-assurance and arrogance.

She smiled at the grim-faced liveried chauffeur who held the door for her; she was still smiling as she sank back upon the luxurious cushions. She was hugging the enormous black muff to her heart as Peter got in beside her.

"It's exactly the way you promised it Peter! Orchids . . . our own car . . ."

The chauffeur was still standing at the door. His eyes held the customary disdain of one who drives a hired car, though his present guests were far too happy to notice. "Where to, sir?"

"I don't know . . . where'll it be, Ellen?"

"You decide, Peter. It's your party."

"But you're the guest of honor. Where do we dine?"

She hesitated. A dozen elaborate possibilities occurred to her. The Waldorf . . . Ambassador . . . Japanese Gardens . . . Castles in the Air.

She might have chosen any one. Instead, for no special reason at all, except that the words popped to her lips when she was too excited to think further, she ordered brightly: "The Rainbow Room!"

Pitiful Memory

Later, when the joy of the evening was dust within her throat, when the golden dress was a scorned and pitiful memory of elegance, she remembered that this decision had been hers.

Peter had made no suggestion as to where they might go. The circumstances was all of her own making, and she had nobody to blame but herself.

They sat side by side on an enormous red velvet divan in the lounge outside the dining room.

Smart young couples looked them over approvingly — self-possessed young women in silver fox capes and ermine cloaks, aristocratic young men in immaculate dinner clothes.

An atmosphere of gayety and splendor prevailed; the air was vibrant with the odor of rare, exotic perfumes, the sparkle of brilliant, costly gems, the soft echo of dinner music.

A waiter hovered over them deferentially, taking their dinner order. Occasionally he made a quiet suggestion of his own: roast squab for madame, perhaps? Lobster thermidor for monsieur?

Too Happy

Ellen, recognizing herself as "madame," sat up a little taller and remembered the arrogant tilt of her chin. But she was too happy, too ecstatically happy, to enjoy the affectation for very long.

"Monsieur will have a cocktail, non?"

To Be Continued.

U. S. Shipping Is Increasing, Land Says

Maritime Commission Chairman Foresees Subsidy Elimination

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, May 22.—Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the United States Maritime Commission, said today there was "convincing evidence that American vessels were obtaining gradually a larger share in world shipping.

The retired naval officer, addressing a national maritime day luncheon of the West Coast Propeller Clubs, urged shippers to divert as much business as possible to American flag services.

He said if this was done "conscientiously," shipping income might be boosted to the point where the Federal operating subsidy could be eliminated.

"In urging you to direct more of your attention to increasing patronage of American ships, I do not want my remarks construed as mere emotional flag-waving," he said. ". . . I am appealing for action which in the immedate sense pays in dollars as well as national pride. It pays dividends to the operator and higher wages to the men who man the fleet.

"The more of these dollars earned through the application of enterprise and initiative on the part of the operator . . . the stronger will be the fleet; the less the burden on the Treasury, and so, upon the taxpayer.

"If we pursue this course courageously and consistently, we can then once more hold our head high in any maritime company."

He said that through the Maritime Commission's new tonnage construction program, the merchant fleet today was in a "potentially stronger position than in any period since the grand old days of the clippers."

He pointed out that war conditions had accounted for much recent increase in American shipping volume, but said it was "by no means solely attributable to the war."

Admiral Land said the commission's program of new shipbuilding was directed toward distributing the tonnage along the country's three coasts "primarily in the interest of national defense."

"It is vital to that interest that a number of sound and healthy shipbuilding plants be in operation on all three coasts," he said.

He reported that the commission is building ships in 15 yards in 12 States on the Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf coasts.

"It is unfortunate, but no less true, that we must be prepared, with the world in its present state of tragic confusion, for any emergency," he said.

Century-Old Well Found on Site Of Fort Stevens

A hand dug well, where Union soldiers probably quenched their thirst during the siege of the Nation's Capital in 1864, has been uncovered on the site of Fort Stevens, 6100 Georgia avenue northwest, behind Emory Methodist Church.

Estimated to be more than a century old, the well was discovered several days ago through the curiosity of Dr. Horace E. Cromer, pastor, and Isaac Steele, colored sexton, who noticed a slight earth cave-in on the spot. "Deeper" investigation with a shovel and hose revealed the well.

While they dug to a depth of only 12 feet, Dr. Cromer pointed out yesterday that well measuring instruments indicated its full depth to be about 45 feet. It will be filled for safety's sake, but a plate will mark the spot.

Half of Cases In Juvenile Court Involve Adults

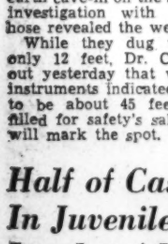
Half the work of the Juvenile Court here concerns adults, Judge Fay L. Bentley said yesterday in an address at a luncheon meeting of the Federal Bar Association at the Army and Navy Club.

The adults are wives who have appealed to the court to make their husbands support them and their children, Judge Bentley said. By making their claim in the Juvenile Court, she pointed out, the wives and children obtain maintenance without having to pay costs or attorney fees.

The District Court recently ruled that Judge Bentley's jurisdiction did not extend to husbands accused of failing to support wives without children. A bill to give the Juvenile Court jurisdiction over these cases has been introduced in Congress.

Station PDS Presents Accordion Soloist

A contest which she won in Hamilton, Ohio, several years ago started Miss Naomi Rule on a career as an accordionist. She is now a Washingtonian, living at 816 E street southeast, and has played for hospitals, hotels, churches and various concerts since coming to Washington. She is also adept at writing orchestrations for school orchestras. This morning Miss Rule is the PDS guest on Station WMAL.



"Station PDS Presents," broadcast by Lee Everett from the Peoples Drug Stores Studio, Eleventh and G streets northwest, is presented each week-day morning from 7:30 to 8:30 over Station WMAL by Peoples Drug Stores in cooperation with The Washington Post. Anyone over 18 years old may participate in the audition at 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays at the N. B. C. Studios. Performers are paid $5 for their appearance on this program.

Pitiful Story Spurs Drive Of Red Cross

Leaders Confident D. C. Will Be Generous In 'Hour of Need'

The people of Washington will "not be found wanting" in the hour of need of 5,000,000 European war refugees, Commissioner John Russell Young and Bruce Baird, District Red Cross war relief chairman, declared yesterday on the steps of the Washington chapter house, 1730 E street northwest.

They spoke as Commissioner Young officially opened the local drive for $150,000 and the national Red Cross announced a speedup of the national campaign for $10,000,000 to cope with a "staggering" problem in European relief.

Introducing Baird as chairman of the special war drive, Brig. Gen. F. R. Keefer, District chapter head, read a telegram from Norman H. Davis, national Red Cross chairman, based on information from Wayne C. Taylor, European delegate. It read in part:

"The relief needs of Belgian and French peoples are reaching staggering proportions. Already 5,000,000 pitiful refugees are clogging every road into central and southern France, trying to escape bombing and strafing from airplanes."

Commissioner Young read a proclamation from President Roosevelt urging "all Americans who have a feeling of deep sympathy for the peoples of those unfortunate countries, who today have been added to the long list of those who are suffering the horrors of invasion and aerial bombardment, to respond quickly and generously to this appeal."

After the ceremonies at the chapter house Red Cross officials announced $25,297, or more than a sixth of the local campaign goal had been realized. The sum does not include contributions received yesterday at 40 booths in stores, banks, and on street corners in the downtown section.

Traffic Death Ruled Accidental

A coroner's jury yesterday decided that Robert Fox, 48, of 6818 Piney Branch road northwest, the District's nineteenth traffic victim, died through "his own negligence," terming the death an accidental traffic fatality.

Returned after a short deliberation, the verdict exonerated Leonard Griffin, colored, 26, of Arlington, Va., driver of the automobile which struck Fox in the 1700 block of Seventh street northwest, March 21.

Witnesses testified that Fox apparently failed to see the car and walked into its path. He was taken to Garfield Hospital where he died May 14.

HELP KIDNEYS PASS 3 PINTS A DAY
Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Kidneys remove excess acids and poisonous waste from your blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.
When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Trust Drive To Be Pushed, Arnold Says

Defense Necessities Won't Bring Truce, U. S. Official Warns

Business was told yesterday by the Government's chief trust buster not to expect any National defense truce in the war on illegal trade restraints, as 50 of the Nation's leading business men gathered in Washington for the start today of defense talks with Government leaders.

Thurman W. Arnold, head of the Justice Department's antitrust division, emerged from an interview on purchasing problems at the Treasury with Secretary Morgenthau and told a Post reporter:

"There is greater need than ever before for enforcement of antitrust laws."

His statement came as Secretary of Commerce Hopkins was preparing to discuss industrial cooperation under the arms program and business prospects at the regular session today of the Commerce Department's business advisory council. Theodore Kreps, advisor to the Temporary National Economic Committee, was scheduled to address the meeting at lunch today.

Arnold said the antitrust campaign would not be relaxed for defense reasons. Though Arnold did not disclosed the subject of his talk with Morgenthau, the visit aroused speculation that the Administration was considering the effects of antitrust laws on emergency expansion of defense industries. Edward H. Foley, jr., Treasury general counsel, attended the conference.

G. U. Banquet June 8

The Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, president of Georgetown University, will be honored at the annual banquet of the Georgetown Alumni Association June 8, it was announced yesterday. Father O'Leary is the only Washington alumnus to hold the office of president in the 150-year-old history of the university. Speaker of the House William B. Bankhead will be chairman of the banquet.

600 Planes To Fly in Big Air Show Here

Aviation Forum To Study National Defense Problems

More than 108 Army planes and 500 private aircraft will zoom over Washington in intricate maneuvers next week as the Nation's aviation leaders discuss the role of their industry in peace and war at a four-day forum, opening Sunday.

The final day of the National Aviation Forum has been set aside for national defense problems, with speakers such as Rear Admiral J. H. Towers, Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold, Mayor Fiorella H. LaGuardia, Commander C. E. Rosendhal and Rear Admiral R. R. Waesche.

More than 125 manufacturers will exhibit their latest products at Bolling Field in what is expected to be the largest aeronautical exhibition ever staged in this country.

Model Planes to Fill Sky

Hundreds of youngsters from nearby States are expected to fill the skies over the field with model planes from 3 to 6 p. m. Sunday and Wednesday night Cabinet officers and others will address more than 1,000 aviation figures in a concluding banquet at the Willard Hotel.

A three-ring circus is envisaged, with the exhibit at the field, an average of 17 speakers a day at the Commerce Department Auditorium, and continuous motion pictures at the Labor Department Auditorium depicting the drama and development of aviation.

The exhibit will be open from 3 to 6 p. m. Sunday and from 3 to 11 p. m. on the three following days. The speakers will hold forth morning and afternoon on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The films will be shown these days from noon to 5 p. m. and 6 p. m. to 9 p. m.

Blimps to Fly in Formation

The President's air mail stamp collection will be on display; Lowell Thomas will broadcast over a national hook-up; Navy blimps from Lakehurst, N. J., will glide overhead in formation, and Maj. Roscoe Turner and Jacqueline Cochran will exhibit the planes in which they set recent national and international records.

Forty members of the Aviation Writers Association will hold their annual convention in conjunction with the forum.

Every subject from "Industry's Position in Accelerated National Defense" to "Aviation in the Comics" will come in for consideration.

To Discuss Tax Cases

Samuel O. Clark, jr., Assistant Attorney General, will discuss "income tax prosecutions" at the annual spring dinner-dance of the Federal Bar Association at Congressional Country Club, at 7 o'clock tonight. Heber H. Rice, newly elected president of the association, will preside.

Red Cross Class Opens

The District chapter of the American Red Cross will start a class in senior life saving tonight at 7:30 in the Shoreham Hotel pool. Woodrow Nealey will be the instructor. Classes meet Tuesday and Thursday evenings.
